SATURDAY, JANUARY 3rd, 1874.

A REVIEW OF 1873.

THE old year has irretrievably gone, leaving to its young and hopeful successor 1874, a legacy of accomplishments and failures for future emulation and warnings; another link has been forged, and connected with the chain of History, which begins and ends only in Eternity; another written page has been contributed to the ancient and weighty volume of "Time's transactions," and another volume of "Time's transactions" we have arrived in the seventy-third year of the nineteenth century.

Like our worthy and older contemporaries, we shall probably be expected to give a retrospect of the past twelve months; we do not shrink from the duty, and therefore shall endeavour as far as possible to follow in the wake of our exemplars.

Though the avowed object of our Journal is to dis cuss and to report Local Affairs, yet we are not unmindful of General Topics; we shall therefore in the first-place touch on a few of the more prominent events of the year 1873, which are connected with Rothwell and so our second page treat general topics, as they occur to our minds.

Our staple, the coal trade, still keeps brisk; all seem well and profitably engaged; the opportunity of providing for old age and accident, ought now to be seized, for wages will scarcely remain the same, and the present prices cannot always be maintained.

We are glad to say that one of the outcomes of this prosperity is shewn in a praiseworthy direction; the various religious bodies of the village have made, or are about making, special efforts for extension or improvements connected with their respective places of worship; the people too, are generally better clothed; there are other signs, however, which still exhibit themselves, particularly on holiday occasions, not at all commendatory, but we certainly think there is a slight improvement in the social state of the people.

The mystery connected with the death of Edward Lambert, but having been cleared up at the time, keeps the public mind still in painful suspense, and suspicion lingers on.

The formation of a Local Board for Rothwell was a wise measure, and much required, the sketch of sanitary reforms intended by our local representatives will, it is hoped, when brought into force, thoroughly renovate and revolutionize the condition of our village in this respect.

The prevalence of fever in our midst, causing a fearful mortality amongst young children, darkened the latter part of the year, and cast a gloom over our somewhat busy village. The temporary closing of Shepcote schools, was a precaution adopted on the recommendation of our medical officer, in order to hinder the further spread of the disease, and the wisdom of the step, in a physical aspect, seems apparent and effectual in the diminution of cases; it is to be hoped, however, that the loss of a few weeks' discipline may not on the other hand have proved a moral disadvantage to the scholars.

We must not overlook a very important event, the in which we are deeply concerned, and we trust the inhabitants of the village and district also feel interested in—Christmas, the inauguration of the Public Feast in our village, in the shape of a weekly news. From by means of which we are now communicating our thoughts and impressions; and though it may not yet be all that is desired, yet encouragement and appreciation of efforts, will dig wonders; its columns offer privileges, opportunities of expression, and means of information often original, and written exclusively for this journal; with our enlarged space, and increased matter, we hope shortly to be able to report a greatly improved circulation.

We regret to notice the deaths especially, of two of those most useful men—the common carriers—viz.: John Horner, commonly called "Old Johnty, Horner," a well-known, genial fellow, though retired from the trade long ago, but one of those old "standards" who could describe with such gusto, Rothwell, in the early part of this century, when cloth weaving, &c., was so much in vogue. Another, Henry Townend, a pushing tradesman, with the laudable wish to do "get on in the world," has, only a few days since, been suddenly called away, from the busy scenes of life, leaving a widow and a somewhat young family to mourn his loss, both in a personal and business sense.

In conclusion, we would say that the several public institutions of our village are in a flourishing condition; for most, our Mechanics' Institute—but its educational status and advantages have not yet been fully appreciated. The Penny Savings' Bank, and the Rothwell Branch of the Leeds Permanent Benefit Building Society are real and safe conveniences for saving money, and enabling people to obtain their own loss as—these are spreading blessings, if only continuing a habit of thrift.

Let us enter on this New Year full of hope and resolution, each one of us, devoting our lives not merely to our own advantage and profit, but trying to benefit and please others; and, ever aspiring to the good, the beautiful, the true,—we shall have the fullest sense of the ancient customary greeting:

A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR.

GEORGE LAWS, PROPRIETOR

A smart young man, the other day,
A visit to his Love would pay;
But as his Summer Suit was bare,
He to friend Law's did repair;
And there he saw his Winter Show
Of Hats and Clothes—at price so low,—
Astonished, he an order gave,
Which made him look both smart and brave.

The Maiden saw but scarcely knew,
Her Thomas in a suit of new—so fine,
Yet fitted with such skill,
That love combined to fancy's will;
His Suit he did not plead in vain,
For Law's suit her heart did gain,
Then to each friend he'd give advice—
Try Law's Goods for Fit and Price.

THE AMERICAN TRUSS IS SUPERSEDING ALL THE OLD KINDS OF TRUSS NOW IN USE.

The Truss has obtained the approval and recommendation of the leading surgeons, and is adopted by the authorities of hospitals and medical institutions.

The American Truss possesses the following peculiar advantages; simplicity & lightness of construction, a perfect support, and allows the necessary motions and positions of the body to take place with ease and propriety, and is the only truss for retention by internal action. It does not cause pain or require pads to pressure, neither has it any metal springs or pads to rust and get out of repair. The Truss can be worn during any exercise of body, and is equally applicable for adults of both sexes and for children.

The prices are arranged on the lowest possible scale. The Truss can be forwarded by post on receipt of the size round the body, and Post Office Order payable at Brighton, to WEST & LONG, Surgical Instrument Makers, 19, Middle-street, Brighton, from whom only Martin, 19, Middle-street, Brighton, from whom only Martin's Truss can be obtained.

DIPLOMA OF MERIT, VIENNA, 1873.

This superior article is strongly recommended to the notice of families by the Medical Profession, Chemists in Lauderdale and Heads of Families, by whom it is unexceptionally solicited. For PURITY, STRENGTH, and QUALITY it has never been surpassed. It does not require boiling, but by infusion in the ordinary way, produces a rich and delicious liquor. Owing to the great manufacture, it imparts to families a saving of fifty per cent. A brilliant, luxury, firm, and delicate flavour, can be guaranteed to be enjoyed by any one who USES WITH COLD WATER ONLY. It may also be used with boiling water, and is improved by mixing to a smooth paste, and adding the quantity of milk required. Can be procured in the ordinary way, made in this way, the liquor assumes a beautiful appearance of rich golden brown, and is delicious after stretching, to obtain a luxurious cup. To be obtained of all respectable Grocers.

Our London Correspondent.

We deem it right to state that we do not at all times identify ourselves with our Correspondent's opinions.)

That the people of the metropolis know how to enjoy themselves was very evident indeed on "Boxing Day." I shall not follow the stereotyped expression and say that no Bank Holiday was ever spent as that was observed. I have been that in print a good many times since the passing of Sir John Lubbock's Act, and I have no doubt that we shall yet come across it again. But there are special circumstances associated with Boxing Day which render its observance more universal than either Easter Monday, Whit Monday, or the first Monday in August. The very fact that it follows so closely upon Christmas Day explains why this should be so. There appears to be an all-prevalent disinclination for attending to ordinary duties, and a disposition to put off as much the worse for the work. A very remarkable illustration of this was quoted by Mr. Gladstone during the session of 1872. I will remember how much we heard week after week of the Inclined Planes made by the United States Government on account of the Alabama depredations, and some complaint was made against the Ministry that those planes were not placed before the public at an earlier date than they actually were. Amongst the reasons given by the Premier one was that the American draughtsmen were employed on the 26th December, "the day whereon they were wont to begin the work of any kind turns up, or much the worse for the work. A very remarkable illustration of this was quoted by Mr. Gladstone during the session of 1872. We all

THE TICHBORNE TRIAL.

HUNDRED AND FORTY-SIXTH DAY.

The resumption of the trial on Monday was marked by an unusual stir. There was about 500 persons assembled in Westminster Hall; and the Court, shortly after its arrival, received with some cheering; but the moment he had passed up the steps and through the entrance door a determined rush took place, several persons in the crowd being thrown down. Only a few police succeeded in getting into the Court. Chiefly owing to the fact that the doors were closed, the moment he had passed up the steps and through the entrance door a determined rush took place, several persons in the crowd being thrown down. Only a few police succeeded in getting into the Court. Chiefly owing to the fact that the doors were closed, the remainder of my speech to five times as great.

When the carriage left the yard some of the rougher element in the crowd made an attempt to get out of the yard by breaking the cordons of police which filled the yard by breaking the cordons of police which filled the space during the time—ten minutes—when the barristers, judges and counsel may be taking their departure. This attempt, like that of the morning, when the crowd in Westminster Hall tried to carry the door leading to the Court of Queen's Bench by storm, was also foiled by the firmness of the police; but although there was a great deal of unpleasant pushing, no arrests were made. Steps will be taken by the authorities to prevent a repetition of the attempt to get into the Court. Chiefly owing to the fact that the present is holiday time, there were in Palace yard, and the adjoining streets, but comparatively few persons, and females. On Monday, a body of about 100 constables was on duty, under six inspectors.

The Court did not sit until twenty minutes past ten o'clock on Tuesday morning, in consequence of the non-arrival of one of the jurymen. The Lord Chief Justice was presented, owing to indisposition, from taking his seat on the bench with his learned brethren.

Mr. Kenealy continued his analysis of the evidence for the defence on the case of identity. He said he would now call attention to the question of hair, denying that the defendant had dyed or otherwise dealt with his hair to alter its colour. He would be entitled to the benefit of a brown shade, and contrasted it with the account given of Orton's hair. The defendant's case had been called by the Crown and by the defendant, and of the 12 witnesses called for the defendant, 10 described his hair as flaxen, 4 sandy, 1 ginger, 1 amber, 3 auburn, 1 white, and only 2 as brown. The witnesses for the prosecution referred to Orton having large, clumpy, shoulder-of-mutton hands, and the defendant's hands were described as delicate, and had tapering fingers. Such the same number of witnesses for the defence testified to the hands of these 2 men, as they were large, 5 broad, 5 long, 3 clumpy, 7 soft, 3 fine, 3 white, 3 delicate, 5 ugly-looking, and 2 duck-footed. If these persons were to be believed (Laughter), it was clear that Orton could not personate because his feet were small, with a high instep, as the jury had seen, and his hands were also proportionate to one another. As many as seventy-four witnesses spoke to the size of Orton's hands, and described them as those of a "big man." The defendant was not a "big large man." (Laughter.) He was a small man. (Laughter.) But what a different. Other witnesses described Orton as big built, with a big head, big face, big hands, big feet, big arms, and rough-looking; as lounging, lazy, bulking, and clumsy-looking, and as a heavy-looking man. Other witnesses described the defendant as small, with a high instead, as the jury had seen, with small hands, small feet, small arms, and small head. Was it possible to reconcile the two descriptions? Was it possible to reconcile the two descriptions? Was it possible to reconcile the two descriptions?

CHAPTER XI.

THE QUEEN OF THE SEAS.—THE SUDDEN JOURNEY —THE SEARCH—DEAD AND BURIED.

"Hey, Harry, old boy, what are you poring over that ancient paper for, this lovely morning?" said Herbert Dalton to his friend, one day, whenthey had nearly ended—they were settling down to their College life once more. "It's a sin to be indoors this fine weather, and I know this is the time you betake yourself for recreation, most studious of gentlemen commoners, according to many!"

"In a minute, Dalton," he replied, without raising his eyes from his paper.

"Last Monday's as I live," said the other peering over his shoulder. "Ship news—have you any relations at sea?"

"None."

"No dear friends ploughing the briny deep?"

"No."

"Then where's the interest?"

"There."

Dalton took the paper and looked at it.

"Hem!" he said, when he had perused the article. "Notice to emigrants—the departure of the very fine, large and commodious ship, the 325th inst., Queen of the Seas is delayed—that is, she will not sail on the fourth of the month of Captain Mac Wirter, consequence of their arrangements in connection with wishing to communicate with friends at sequence, are requested to communicate with Messrs. Thomson & Lundy without delay."

"Extremely entertaining, no doubt, though I can't see it. Have you any friends among the intending and disappointed emigrants?"

"I am not sure; some of my people,"—said Eustace, evasively.

"Ah, I see; too rapid an increase of population in your dominions, most mighty potentate, so you are shipping a couple of thousand of the people to the backwoods of the mighty West. There's a large solitude of that sort in the States, and a great flight of fancy for you, as also for the poets of the period. You are the man for the Newgate, Hartley!"

"I don't intend to try for it," said Eustace, glad to see that a fresh idea had replaced the Queen of the Seas in his friend's imagination.

"Not try for it! You are joking surely? You College in it if you chose!"

"Perhaps."

"There aren't so two or three fellows who can write now. Our verse have all departed—I write none. Our prose have all departed—I write less. Our essays have all departed—I write none.

"And their mantle hasn't fallen on any writing of such an astonishing event happened as my writing a poem, I couldn't read it. I should inevitably make an ass of myself in the attempt, and no more would there be but little glory."

"We shall see," said Dalton, gaily. "Remember this time next year that I, Herbert Dalton, proclaim you a poet, Eustace Hartley, Esquire, of Exeter College, Eustace Hartley, Esquire, of Exeter, would win the Newdigate, and receive the honour of writing the Newdigate poem of my prediction."

The next day's post brought Eustace a letter from Mr Cornelius Stubbs, a highly worthy station that had been to Eustace and obtained for him the appointment of Midshipmite on the further intelligence respecting Midshipmite Clara, or Stella Morton. "It's all right about her go," said the gentleman wrote; "she sails for certain in the Queen on the 25th September, and will be in the Queen on the 25th September, and will be in the Queen on the 25th September, and will be

CHAPTER XII.

THE VISIT TO OXFORD.—THE INTRODUCTION TO MISS MALCOLM.—A FORTUNATE FELLOW.—DISCLOSURE.

The eventful week arrived at last, and Dr. Browne made his appearance at Henley, to escort Mrs. Beresford and Nelly, for their week's sojourn at Oxford. The older lady had secured lodgings for the party according to the doctor's request, and the young girl's spirits rose to the highest pitch when she saw the glorious June sun shine on the old towers and spires of the city, for the first time. She was too full of wonderment to say much, as they drove through the streets to their new residence, everything about her seemed so singular, so foreign-looking. The strange monastic old buildings, the townsmen mixing with the busy life of the streets, the tones of the chimes of the different colleges, as they now and then rang out over her head, all made her feel as if she had been suddenly whisked away from English ground, and set down in one of the dim old Continental cities of which she had heard and read.

"That's Christ Church, Nelly," said Dr. Browne, as they passed through one of the dirtiest streets in the place; "that's where our young squire is; it's a sweet-smelling locality, though it's the College par excellence of the University. That tower holds the far-famed 'Big Tom;' you hear his mighty voice soon, I'm sure!" he exclaimed, as the clock struck with a crash that made Nelly start and Mrs. Beresford laugh; "what do you think of that for a clock?"

"It's a dreadful noise," said Nelly; "I was half stunned."

"You'll soon get used to it," he replied; "I don't suppose the people who live close to it hear it even."

"Oh, what's that?" said Nelly, as they turned a corner, and came in sight of a perfect forest of spires; "that's the Martyrs' Memorial," said the doctor. "And here we are at our journey's end. You've chosen a pretty place, Mrs. Beresford—St. Aldate's though the name is not suggestive of an aristocratic quarter, is certainly one of the pleasantest parts of Oxford."

"I lodged here with my husband," said the lady, with a sigh; "in this very house; perhaps that makes it more pleasant to me.

"Of course, of course; jump out, Nelly, my girl. We'll have something to eat, and then look about us a bit."

When they were refreshed a little, Dr. Browne left them, to call on an old acquaintance, who had established himself at the window "all eyes," (as Mrs. Beresford laughingly said,) and looked about her with much interest.

"What are you thinking of?" said that lady at length, from the sofa, where she had seated herself if you looked in a perfect dream, Nelly."

"I was," she replied, turning round with a flushed face and sparkling eyes; "I was looking at the Memorial, and thinking what there"

"Spare your heroics," said Mrs. Beresford, with a smile. "What is not the meaning of that monument was erected there because it was the best site that could be found; the exact spot is in a busy street, where it would have been impossible to place even a statue; you shall see it when we go out,—stand on the very cross that marks it, if you like. What's the matter?" she continued, as Nelly uttered an exclamation of surprise.

"Where?"

"The—" she replied, indicating a group on the other side of the way. There were several gownsmen; one, the most distinguished of them, wearing a velvet cap and silk gown of a peculiar commoner, and two ladies; one past her youth long since, but handsome still; the other, a girl about Nelly's age, dressed. They were Mrs. Hartley, and Clara Malcolm, and the gentleman on whose arm the latter leaned was the young Squire of Earlscourt. Their coming of age she had such and cause to remember. How well she recalled that handsome face, though it seemed somewhat altered as he stood there, conscious that he

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.
CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diptheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Menigitis, &c.

From LORD FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal. 11th December 1868.
"Lord Francis Conyngham, who finds that the last bottle of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half-a-dozen bottles sent at once to the above address."
"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Majunga, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Papers, 1st December 1864.
CAUTION—BEWARE of PIRACY and IMITATIONS.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, FREEMAN, was fabulous and untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July 1864.
Sold in Bottles at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d and 11s each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

A smart young man, the other day,
A visit to his Love would pay;
But as his Summer Suit was bare,
He to friend Law's did repair;
And there he saw his Winter Show
Of Hats and Clothes—at price so low,—
Astonished, he an order gave,
Which made him look both smart and brave.
The Maiden saw but scarcely knew,
Her Thomas in a suit of new—so fine,
Yet fitted with such skill,
That love combined to fancy's will;
His Suit he did not plead in vain,
For Law's suit her heart did gain,
Then to each friend he'd give advice—
Try Law's Goods for Fit and Price.

The Rothwell Times.
SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, 1874.

ROTHWELL IMPROVEMENT.

If any other fact was required to prove the truth of some remarks made by Mr. Brown on Saturday last, the improved state of public morals, and the almost entire absence of police news during the past four weeks would be conclusive evidence that notwithstanding all their real or supposed faults and vices, the mining population of Rothwell and district, at any rate, have shown that they have learnt some lessons, both of thrift, of self-respect, and of self-improvement.

The evil prophets have been mistaken; with good work and higher wages, we were told that crime would increase, that the money would be thrown away in useless and harmful pleasures and pursuits, and that prosperity would prove a curse to those whose hands are horny with honest toil.

The statistics which were given of the Building Societies' and Savings' Banks, on Saturday night, prove that, nationally, our working-people are not only getting money, but taking care of it; while, the large increase of shares in our own branch of the Building Society, shows that Rothwell men are, to a much larger extent than heretofore, putting by for their future benefit, or for the rainy day which accident or adverse times may produce. Besides this, we can assure Mr. Brown, and all interested in the improvement of our miners, that their houses are mostly well-furnished, themselves and their children well dressed, and the inner man well supplied. We must also add to these (shall we say) selfish benefits, the very large amount of surplus in the various clubs, and, better still, the hearty and handsome subscriptions which have been made by our working-people, for the erection of schools, and for other charitable purposes. In the matter of thrift, and the right use of money, we are improving, although, to a large extent, we would advise the class to whom these remarks principally refer, to take good heed to their leader's advice, and make the best use of good times.

Everyone who has noticed the list of police cases, which it has been our painful duty to record, as a weekly item of local news, will have been pleased to see that the holiday weeks have passed over with hardly a single charge, such as have generally made up a disgraceful counterpart to festive times and play-days. Since before Christmas, our columns have been presented almost entirely clear of local crime, and we cannot refrain from congratulating ourselves and the inhabitants of this district, on this happy omen. We have too long sustained an unenviable notoriety at Wakefield Court-house, and when a week or two passes without a representative from our district, we sincerely rejoice. Several reasons may be adduced for this improvement, one of which, at least, may be put down as one happy outcome of the Union, and that is self-respect. When a man respects himself, he is in a likely way to obtain the respect of others, and is on the most certain path to advancement. The power which has been obtained and used by the Miners' Association has imbued its thoughtful members with character and self-respect, they would not have otherwise possessed, and incited them to higher moral and intellectual education, that they may maintain their position and support their own views.

Another reason for this self-respect and consequent diminution of crime, is, we are inclined to think, the direct result of the local publicity given to all police cases, obtained by the establishment of a newspaper in our midst; while causing us to be the unfortunate bearers of no little amount of contumely and personal antipathy (for which we are sorry, but must bear patiently) the knowledge which all wrong doers are now pretty well assured of, that whatever cases come into court, will be faithfully and impartially made public by an entirely independent reporter, has, we doubt not prevented many a poor fellow from figuring in the prisoner's box, and paying his 5s. and costs.

We shall be heartily glad, if "Rothwell and District Police Intelligence" is less regularly seen than beforetime; and why should it not be? Surely if in the midst of merry-making, and holidays, we can keep out of sin and immorality, is it not easier to keep sober and virtuous, when temptations are not so strong and various. Let us hope that this year, Rothwell and her sister villages will become as noted for mental, moral, and financial improvements as they have been for criminality and drunkenness, and that education and religion will exercise a very powerful influence in every home.

This brings us to our last head, self-improvement; under this division we include everything that tends to elevate and benefit. The Mechanics' Institute Annual Meeting gave us a most encouraging report of increased membership and readers, and although the educational classes have had to be given up, we believe many men are learning at home. Here again we would impress on our working-men, the importance and power of knowledge, and are glad to see in many instances, a kindly brotherly spirit manifested by those who have tasted the sweets and blessings of learning, to raise their fellow workers to a higher grade in society, as was urged by the working men's candidate for Tamworth.

Among the means of self-education, or self-improvement, we cannot pass in silence, the establishment in our village of a good Templar's Lodge, which has doubtless been the means of doing much good, and now numbers about 100 members.

But the best and greatest improvement is that which leads men not only to mental culture, but to moral greatness, not only to provide bodily comforts, but to obtain spiritual blessing, not only to abstain from the appearance of evil, but to cleave unto that which is good. We should like to see our churches and chapels better filled; we should like to see the streets free from the groups of young men, and boys, lounging their time away on the Sabbath; we should like to see more intelligence, more good nature, more morality, more religion, in all our villages, and in all our homes.

A TALE OF MYSTERY.

CHAPTER XIII.

A BOAT UPSET.—THE RESCUE.—LOVE AND PRIDE.—THE PROPOSAL

As they stepped on board the University barge they were assailed on all sides for being late, and after a hurried glass of wine, they took their seats. Very handsome the Christ Church eight looked in their dark blue uniform, the finest men there, and the best on the river, though Wadham had nearly taken their pre-eminence from them in the term just over, and Exeter and Oriel were not far behind. This was not a race, however; it was only the annual show, to let the many visitors see the positions the different colleges held on the water, and what a splendid turn out those solemn old buildings could make upon the river. It was a very pretty sight, as boat after boat floated by, each with its different colours bright and new, reflected in the glassy water; and the meadow walk and the opposite bank were alive with lookers on, and the river itself crowded with boats of every description.

The row of a mile and back was over, and one by one the boats were slowly returning to their starting place, tossing their oars as they passed the winning boat, and returning cheer for cheer as they floated by. The foremost had already arrived and landed their crews, who were now with their friends on the banks, when suddenly, ringing out upon the still air, came shrieks and cries, and sounds of hurrying feet, telling of some catastrophe. The alarm came from the corner of the bank where the Cherwell joins the Isis, always a dangerous place for those unacquainted with the river, and every one was hastening to the spot.

Shouts of "a boat upset," reached Eustace's ears on all sides; and breaking from the group he was talking to, and shaking off his mother's detaining hand, he pressed away to the scene of the evil-dying water shewed the accident had taken place.

"I hope he will get into no danger," Mrs. Hartley said, in a frightened voice.

"I think you may be at rest on that score," said the person addressed; a quiet, spectacled, reading man, who held water in as much abhorrence as a cat, and looked upon the sturdy, hearty crews of the different boats as so many amphibious animals. "Hartley won't come to grief in the water, he swims like a duck or a fish, I believe."

Mrs. Hartley shuddered, and tried to pierce with her eyes the crowd which divided her from her son.

Meanwhile Eustace had reached the spot, the strong giving way before his blue uniform right and left. He could get no clear account of what had happened, but that a boat had been upset every one agreed. The numbers of those immersed varied from one to twenty, according to the imaginations of the narrators. Every one was busy assisting and hindering one another, and their efforts resulted in two persons being presently brought dripping to land—a scared-looking student and a lady, whose face Eustace was sure he had seen before. She was safe, however, and he had no time to think, for to his unutterable surprise he saw Dr. Browne frantically calling and shouting on the very brink of the water.

"What is it?" he said; "don't you know me? I am Eustace Hartley."

"Nelly!" passed the old man. "They don't see her! She will be drowned before they reach her!"

Nelly! great heaven! Nelly! Where?"

"There!"

Eustace looked and saw a white something just where the two currents join. Two swimmers were making for it already, neither of them as powerful as himself; he saw that in a moment, and he tightened his strew hat away into the throng he sprang into the deep water. He heard the ringing cheer which rose as he leaped; saw the hats and handkerchiefs which were waved as he rose to the surface after his dive; but he thought of nothing, felt nothing, but that she was in peril—she, the little girl whom he had only seen twice; once when fettered hand and foot, heart and soul, a wife he loathed, he could only look upon the fair vision so suddenly presented to him as something unapproachable—something which he might admire and see gracing another home; and once only yesterday—how long ago it appeared now, changed from the simple country girl he well remembered into a refined young lady, as beautiful as painter ever drew or poet sung—free to be wooed and won, perhaps, as he was free to woo and win, and now dying! Her life depending on the efforts of those who are striking boldly out towards her. She flashed, like lightning through Eustace Hartley's mind, as with vigorous strokes he neared that floating bit of apparel. A thousand voices shouted directions to him from the bank—a thousand hands point him onward to what he strives to reach. The moment's agony seemed to him as he clove the water with a rapidity that distances the other swimmers completely, and reaches and grasps the insensible girl just in time to prevent her sinking to rise no more. They are soon in safety now! Plenty of eager hands assist them out of the water, which conveys them to the opposite shore; strong arms are stretched out to take the fainting form, but Eustace will yield his burden to no one.

"God bless you!" says Dr. Browne, his face working with agitation, and giving Eustace a convulsive embrace; "God bless you, my boy, for what you have done this day!"

A few minutes more and they are in the boat-house, where every appliance is kept for the restoration of the drowned; another hour and Nelly Deane is thanking her preserver with her own sweet voice, and setting his heart beating thick and fast with the touch of her gentle hand, and the soft light of her loving eyes.

Eustace Hartley shewed no trace of his late immersion, as he stood by Nelly's side, and heard her grateful thanks. He had driven off the instant he had heard Dr. Browne's assurance that his adopted child would recover, dressed, and returned to satisfy himself of the truth of the old friend's prediction. A little paler than he usually is, perhaps, he looks as he stands there, but certainly none the worse, even the agitated flush upon his cheek, as he turns his face now to his mother's eyes, and now to Nelly's, only serves to add beauty. Nelly is shy and still; dreads to hold her almost in his grasp, and the tremor of his fingers into a passion, as he presses her hand to his heart, recovered too, and the young gentleman, under whose escort they went upon the water, is thankful and sorrowful, joyful and penitent, all in a breath.

He was the son of an old friend of Dr. Browne's, and had begged so hard to be allowed to take the boat out, that the latter consented to Nelly's going. They had been upset by a clumsily-steered punt, which was awkwardly getting in the way of the boats. The young man was no way in fault, though he chose to consider himself so, and would have given almost him with expressions of regret and sorrow for the mischance.

"There, there," the doctor said, cool humourously, "it might have been far worse; you might have been drowned, or Mrs. Beresford; or I might have lost my favourite child. As it is, you have only trembling at the thought. "No one has got more than a wetting, thank heaven, and Mr. Hartley, here!"

"No credit is owing to me," said Eustace, wa made, "I might as well as any one else."

"We owe Nelly's life to you, my boy," was the answer; "and that is more than I can ever tell you. Come, Nelly, my child, the carriage is waiting for you. Remember, a warm bed directly; no excitement for either of you, Mrs. Beresford, to-night, if you wish to be well to-morrow."

Mrs. Beresford nodded assent, and the doctor saw them into the vehicle waiting for them, and returned to Eustace.

"How shall I ever thank you? ever repay you?" he said, when they were alone for a moment.

"I need no thanks," was his reply. "I am more than repaid in Miss Deane's safety. If she had been lost—"

The doctor looked curiously at the young man's agitated face.

"Nonsense!" he said to himself, "I am an old fool! They never saw each other till yesterday."

He was about to speak when they were joined by Mrs. Hartley.

Eustace seized his old friend's hand. "Doctor," he said, "some day I may ask something of you. Will you grant it?"

"Anything that my hand can give you shall be yours," replied the latter, returning the pressure right warmly. "While I live no request or appeal of yours shall go unanswered."

"Very well, I shall remember your promise. Some day I shall have a story to tell you, and a hope to ask of you."

"When you will, my boy!"

"It should be now, but that my mother is smiling somewhat impatiently for me; and, deeming me a kind of resonet treasure, is half jealous of every word another speaks to me. I ought to be a better man, Dr. Browne, with such a mother."

"You'll do as you are, Eustace," was the reply, as they separated.

Nelly was quite recovered the next day, and they were a merry party who sallied forth from Dr. Browne's lodgings. Eustace Hartley and his mother, and Herbert Dalton, with Clara Malcolm and her parents, had breakfasted there, and were delighted with the doctor's adopted daughter, as they called her.

"And what's the order of march for to-day?" asked Dr. Browne, as they rose from table.

"Christ Church and the Bodleian, I believe," said Miss Hartley. "That is, if Mr. Beresford and Miss Deane care to see the College again."

"Oh, ours was a flying visit the other day," the elderly lady replied; "and we were disappointed by the unavailability of any one who knew much about it. The guides tell the ortholox stories, of course; but one does not feel much edified."

"Old Barritt, who keeps the bell-tower, never varies a single word," said Dalton laughing. "I had a bet upon it once, that I would hear him twenty times in succession, and that he would blunder somehow. I lost; for he didn't."

"It gets such a matter of course," said Eustace. "He would say it just as well in his sleep; I have no doubt. But come along, ladies; we are wasting this bright day!"

Through the College and the old Bodleian they went, some of the party of which Nelly had never dreamed in her hasty visit, and finding objects of interest at every turn. Perhaps it was that she was more at her ease with the gentlemen, interested in interesting her. There is a great deal in that sometimes; but it certainly happened that during that day the young squire of Earlcourt strolled almost entirely by her side, while somehow or other Eustace found himself with Clara Malcolm. That young lady came home with a flushed face and a thoughtful brow; and her mother observed it, and asking her what she was thinking of, and what she had been doing, she answered, quickly, "I have been looking at futurity a little, mamma, —telling my own fortune."

"And who is the inevitable dark man or fair man, as the case may be?" said her father, gaily. "Have you lost your heart in this city of handsome men?"

"My heart's in my own keeping at present," she replied; "its future is not decided yet." "And, saying she was going to dress, she left the room.

"That lad is a good girl," said her mother, with a half-sigh, as she looked after her; "one can never tell exactly what she means."

"I can tell you one thing she does not mean, and that is, to marry young Hartley. That fact is plain enough."

"Yet I think she likes him."

"Likes, perhaps; but there is no love in the case, she will go her own way, depend upon it."

"I am almost sorry sometimes she is independent of us. A large fortune in her own right is apt to make a girl wilful."

"It has not done so in her case. Our girl has a noble mind, and a loving heart. You need fear no wilfulness or disobedience from her."

"I only fear that over which we have no control—that she may fall in love into making a low or imprudent marriage she has such romantic notions."

"A low marriage Clara will never make; and I shall be very much surprised if she contracts an imprudent one. I do not fear her throwing herself away."

Mrs. Malcolm winced; though of noble birth, she had been a governess herself, and was sensitive on the point, as Clara knew full well, and had been accustomed to hear from her lips the story of the struggles of her youth, and how she had worked up in the shrine where he had worshipped in silence so long. Clara listened, but she made no answer; she was struggled with other thoughts than those spoken, and the warfare was not over yet.

Herbert Dalton was not daunted by her silence: he pressed his suit with all the ardour of passionate love; his poverty and future prospects seemed as nothing to him in that wild moment of happiness to come, if he could but let me speak to you again, Miss Malcolm?" he said; "you will not crush me with contemptuous silence? You will think of what I have said to you, Clara?"

"I will," she replied, speaking with an effort.

"You give me hope?"

"I did not say that," she answered; "I must have time to think; you have been thinking of this for more than a year, it seems; give me at least twelve hours."

She smiled, as she spoke, her old radiant smile, and turned away; nor did she bestow another word on him that night.

There was another couple, too, to whom that morning was the turning-point in their lives. Eustace Hartley walked with Nelly's little hand resting on his arm, forming all sorts of plans for the future. More than once he was on the point of doing as his friend had done, and offering himself and his broad acres to the timid girl at his side; and as often as words of love came rushing to his lips, he restrained them. "No," he said to himself; "I will talk to him first; I will ask him for my mother's consent before I speak; this very day I will do it." And as they went home he linked his arm in Dr. Browne's, and said, "Can you spare me half an hour?" The doctor assented in surprise, and the two turned into St. John's gardens, now almost solitary. "You remember what I said to you yesterday—that some day I should ask a favour at your hands?"

"Yes."

"I ask it now, Dr. Browne; I want you to give me the greatest boon you could bestow upon me. I want your daughter, Nelly!"

"Nelly!"

"Nelly. Don't look so astonished; I am quite sane. I want Nelly for my wife, if you will give her to me, and she will come, (and somehow I think she will,) when I ask her."

"But you have only seen her twice before today."

"Three times, Dr. Browne; I have loved her from the first moment I saw her."

"And when was that first moment be?

"Surely you remember; you were with me, if I recollect right, the day I came of age. Had it not been for circumstances in the way, I should have sought her out long since, and told her what I want you permission to tell her now."

"I recollect something of it; poor child! Her grandmother died and left her desolate on that day of rejoicing. But what was the child to you then? Surely not your daughter, Nelly!" I know the present queen-regent of Earlcourt well enough to be certain that if you had been, you would have asked for her, and said, "Mother, this is my wife," she would resign her crown and sceptre, and kneel before the newcomer to do her homage."

"I believe she would," said Eustace. "That is what I want to tell you, doctor. It is a miserable tale, and one which I would fain spare you, but which you must hear, if you are to know all that there is to be known."

CHAPTER XIV.

THE DISCLOSURE AND THE PROPOSAL.—THE PRIVATE INTERVIEW.—THE FUTURE MRS. HARTLEY.—THE TRIUMPH AT THE OXFORD COMMEMORATION.

The doctor looked at his young companion in amazement; he heard his words, but they seemed so wildly improbable that they conveyed no meaning; and he could only wonder whether anything had happened suddenly to overset Eustace Hartley's reason.

"It is true," he said, sadly, and with flushing face; "the reason why I did not seek out my adopted child a year ago, was just what I have told you—my wife stood in the way."

"I can hardly credit my senses!" the doctor replied, his astonishment passing all bounds. "Your secret—for I presume it was a secret—must have been well kept; no one ever heard of the existence of a Mrs. Eustace Hartley."

"No one," said Eustace; "not even my mother; I kept the knowledge of her son's degradation even from her; it would have broken her heart."

"Degradation! your pardon, Eustace! I cannot accept such a word with your name!"

"It was even so, but I will tell you the whole story. I was married when I was but a boy; I cannot seek the pure fresh love of a young girl, and keep my miserable history from her, and you have only yesterday asked me for a favour in my past life has been. You remember when I was in Scotland?"

"One word," said the doctor, interrupting him. "You said your wife stood in the way of your love for Nelly. Is she not still an obstacle?"

"No; she is dead."

Eustace spoke huskily; a thousand surging recollections of when and where the wife from whom he had fled lay dead, and he had met her death—if the recognition of her poor lifeless form in that little village church—of his standing by while her coffin was put into a grave, of his kind friends and kindred who might have had, came swelling to his heart, and he turned his head away.

"I pity you," said Dr. Browne, hastily; "it is a painful subject I see; I infer from what you said, that you met your—your wife in Scotland."

"I did."

"What was she?"

"A ballet girl."

"That was a downward step for your mother's son; but good women are sometimes found behind the scenes of a theatre."

"I was unfortunate in my selection," said Eustace, bitterly, the blood mounting to his forehead at the recollection; "my wife was not the best of her class, —she was what her position made her. Unfortunately for me, she found that I was a gentleman, while I in my folly thought she loved me for myself."

"I don't wonder now at the long face you brought home with you," the doctor said, as Eustace paused in his story; "I used to wonder what ailed you; as you go on."

The young man told his whole melancholy tale; how he had fascinated by her beauty, he had found out the real character of his beautiful wife—how she came to Earlsford.

"I know now who she was," exclaimed Dr. Browne; "it was that Stella Norton, whose name was placarded all over the city."

"It was."

"And you saw her?"

"She came to our house the night of the storm; she did not betray herself in the house, but she and I had a stormy interview afterwards."

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

The following cases have been heard during the week in the West Riding Police Court, at Wakefield, before E. Tew, Esq. (Chairman), W. H. Leatham, Esq., Dr. Holdsworth, Esq., & Dr. Kendall.

A FARMER AND PUBLICAN SUMMONED FOR RATES.—Mr. Thomas Birkinshaw, who occupies a farm at Lofthouse-with-Carlton, and is a publican, at Lofthouse Hill Engine, was summoned at the instance of the Overseers of the township of Lofthouse-with-Carlton, for non-payment of a rate amounting to about £9 10s.—The defendant, who had been in custody during the early part of Monday's business, did not answer to his name when called upon, and Police-constable Atkinson stated that defendant had made over his property to the required amount within the course of a week, and had then gone away. Mr. Lawson: He will have to pay the rate and the costs incurred thereby. In time, a distress warrant will be issued. The Chairman: That is the understanding between Birkinshaw and the overseers, I suppose?—P.-C. Atkinson: Yes sir.—The Chairman: Then the warrant will be suspended until next Monday. Mr. Lawson: Then the assistant overseer for Rothwell is here to ask you to grant a warrant, in the first instance, against him for the amount of a rate amounting to £1 1s. 9d. due to the overseers of the township. The assistant overseer had some conversation with the Justices, and it was decided to adjourn the case, for his appearance, until Friday, the Chairman stating that if the amount was not paid before the time a distress warrant would be issued. In a paragraph relative to the application for a new road for Rothwell, which appeared in our last issue, stated that "no questions were asked by the Justices relative to the collection of the former rate" The assistant overseer has informed our correspondent that this is an error. In reply to a question, informed the Bench that the whole of the former rate was, with one exception, collected—the person to whom reference was made being the defendant in the above-named cases.

"RESTRAIN YOUR TEMPER, AND GUARD YOUR WORDS;" OR, MAGISTERIAL ADVICE.—George Charlesworth, a miner, living at Carlton, was summoned for having made use of threats of violence, towards a young girl, named Sarah Heaton, and was called upon to find sureties to keep the peace.—The complainant who stated he was a son of Mrs. Heaton and her husband's brother, and consequently their uncle. He was a very violent man, had been in trouble on several occasions, in consequence of his passion, and on Monday last he insulted Mrs. Heaton's daughters that it was now absolutely necessary he should be bound over to keep the peace. After some further evidence Mr. Burton called the complainant who stated that on the 6th inst., she was on her way to a neighbour's house when the defendant "raced her," and threatened to "knock her neck out" and to "knock her head out," threats being accompanied with fearful oaths. She was afraid to leave her home lest he should assault her. He had never, however, been unkind towards her, although he often threatened her sisters. The defendant stated that after his brother was killed he took care of Mrs. Heaton and her children, and subsequently had one of her elder daughters to live with him, but they quarrelled about both himself and his wife. The girl had exasperated him by her insolence, and he had threatened to horsewhip her, but had not struck her, but had not in reality—intended her any bodily injury. Miss Mary Heaton having given evidence in her young sister's behalf, and stated that she was herself in constant fear of the defendant, the chairman, addressing him, said: We have no doubt that the charges against you are well grounded, and the sentence of the Bench therefore is that you be bound over to keep the peace in the sum of £10, and two sureties in £5 each to keep the peace, towards the complainant and her sisters for twelve months, and in default you will be committed to prison for a month, but you will also have to pay the costs. And our advice to you is that you should restrain your temper and guard your words, or you may get into serious trouble. The defendant: If they abuse me what can I do?—The Chairman: You have the same protection that they have,—you can bring them before the court, but must not take the law into your own hands, or make any threats even though you may be annoyed.—Defendant were shortly forthcoming, the expenses were paid, and the parties left the court.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

At a specfal meeting of the Board, held on Friday night, January 23rd, present:—Mr. Charlesworth, Esq., in the Chair; Messrs. W. Hargreaves, Webster, Bumby, Dickinson, Rendres, and Clayton; and the Clerk.

Proposed by Mr. Wm. Hagreaves, and seconded by Mr. Dickinson, and carried unanimously, that 400 yards in length and 5 yards in width of the Bell Hill from the Leeds and Wakefield Turnpike Road be paved.

Proposed by Mr. Kendrew, and seconded by Mr. Bumby, and carried unanimously, that the Clerk do advertise for Tenders for the above works. Tenders to be sent in not later than the 17th inst.

WOODLESFORD WESLEYAN CHRISTMAS TREE AND BAZAAR.—The Juvenile Tea and Tree in connection with the above place held their Second Annual Christmas Tree and Bazaar on Christmas Day and Monday. The tea on the former day was commenced with singing and prayer by Mr. Blakeley, Mr. Stead reading a lesson, the 2nd chapter of St. Luke's Gospel. On entering the school, which is very commodious, the number of children, and Mrs. Christmas trees, well laden with suitable fruit for the occasion, one of which was presented to each child by Mrs. Woodlesford, and the larger one being furnished by the contributions of Sunday Meeting. The Committee of Management were graceful and suitable decorations and decorations were graceful and suitable for the occasion, and altogether the arrangements were of a most pleasing nature, as desired. Every preparation appeared to have been made for strict observance of order and comfort to the number of visitors and friends that attended the meeting. The pieces selected for reciting were most appropriate for the occasion and season, and were all well rendered. The singing was conducted by the youthful choir led by Mr. Blakeley, were also most well and conducted by Mr. J. Blakeley, were also most excellent and efficient, which was testified by the numerous approbation of the vast congregation. Everything passed off, during the day, to the delight of the children and to the parties that had the management. Not an unpleasant word was spoken either by adults or children. Although there was, owing to the smallness of the place, great crowding during my stay, the exhibiting of the Central Railway Company's mechanical exhibition was very instructive and enjoyable, and in my judgment, gave great popularity to the festival, and altogether deserved the support and sympathy of the friends and public who met in such vast numbers to do honour and help on so good a cause, for which I understand the whole of the proceeds are to be devoted to the building of a new Sunday School. I may just add, for the encouragement of others employed in similar work, that the financial result far exceeded the sanguine expectations of the Committee, and was received with thankfulness by the Committee and ladies who met in the Vestry after the close of the interesting festival. The Doncaster having been the result of their exertions, having netted upwards of £19.

MR. W. BROWN AT ROTHWELL.

The presence of this noted miners' advocate in Rothwell on Saturday last, induced the Association to call a meeting in the Mechanics' Hall, Rothwell; as no notice of his coming had been received, the only way of announcing the meeting was by the bellman's voice, notwithstanding which the Hall was half-filled with miners, who listened with marked attention and enthusiasm to Mr. Brown's address, which occupied a full hr. Mr. Denton, secretary of the Miners' Loan Society was called to the chair, and before introducing Mr. Brown, read a list of subscriptions from the different branches of the association towards the Leeds Charities for which Rothwell had collected £8 15s.

A prospectus of the Co-operative Coal Co., was also laid before the meeting, from which it appears that the promoters of the scheme have obtained the promise of some 1000 tons of coal, the property of Jos. Wiseman, and that matters are so far advanced that it is decided to purchase it for the purpose of a colliery of their own. He trusted that all miners would avail themselves of the opportunity, and take up shares in their own colliery; the shares are £1 each which can be paid at 2s. 6d. per month, or all at once. He had now great pleasure in introducing their old and tried friend Mr. W. Brown.

On coming forward, Mr. Brown was received with enthusiastic applause, and after explaining the suddenness of his appearance among them, said, as he always commenced his meetings with singing, they would with the Chairman's permission, sing two verses to-night. The following was then sung to the time of the old hundred, led by Mr Brown's powerful but musical voice:—

The mighty struggle shakes the world,
Labour has tried his mettle now;
His noble banner is unfurled,
Justice inscribed upon his brow.

Our mites we'll cast into the great store,
By one and one motive all impelled;
We'll bless our class, the needy poor
Who've been too long in bondage held.

MR. CHAIRMAN, DEAR FRIENDS,

I am very glad to meet with you, and have several reasons for wishing to speak to you to-night; first, because I have a right to speak to you; I know what it is to weep with you, and it is only right that I should rejoice with you when I see you in the sowing time, and I have a right to join in at the reaping time,—I was with you in adversity, and it is only right that I should be glad in your prosperity. Many and great changes have taken place since thirty-five years ago. I have been taking a retrospective view of the years that have gone, and been thinking of the time when we with her husband's brother, and consequently their uncle. He was a very violent man, had been in trouble on several occasions, in consequence of his passion, and on Monday last he insulted Mrs. Heaton's daughters that it was now absolutely necessary he should be bound over to keep the peace. After some further evidence Mr. Burton called the complainant who stated that on the 6th inst., she was on her way to a neighbour's house when the defendant "raced her," and threatened to "knock her neck out" and to "knock her head out," threats being accompanied with fearful oaths. She was afraid to leave her home lest he should assault her. He had never, however, been unkind towards her, although he often threatened her sisters. The defendant stated that after his brother was killed he took care of Mrs. Heaton and her children, and subsequently had one of her elder daughters to live with him, but they quarrelled about both himself and his wife. The girl had exasperated him by her insolence, and he had threatened to horsewhip her, but had not struck her, but had not in reality—intended her any bodily injury. Miss Mary Heaton having given evidence in her young sister's behalf, and stated that she was herself in constant fear of the defendant, the chairman, addressing him, said: We have no doubt that the charges against you are well grounded, and the sentence of the Bench therefore is that you be bound over to keep the peace in the sum of £10, and two sureties in £5 each to keep the peace, towards the complainant and her sisters for twelve months, and in default you will be committed to prison for a month, but you will also have to pay the costs. And our advice to you is that you should restrain your temper and guard your words, or you may get into serious trouble. The defendant: If they abuse me what can I do?—The Chairman: You have the same protection that they have,—you can bring them before the court, but must not take the law into your own hands, or make any threats even though you may be annoyed.—Defendant were shortly forthcoming, the expenses were paid, and the parties left the court.

should remember that all are not able to work the same as they are, and should help their weaker brothers.

I have just been reading a book about coal getting machinery, and the writer says that when these machines are got to work, instead of the 360,000 men who now get the coal, we can do without the 300,000, and the 60,000 will be plenty left to do the work. Yes, if they could say to the machine, do that, and it would do it, then the 300,000 men might be spared. But they have not got the machinery yet, and not while we live shall we see a machine that can fire a shot at the right moment, or that can do many a thing that only human knowledge can perform. When they do get that wonderful machine, our children will have to do with very little work. Don't be at all alarmed about machinery, let the machines do the hard work as they can, and save us the hard work which some of us know so much about. Now some of you young chaps will be thinking, Why did thou ever work in a pit? well, ask Edward Lunn, or Joseph Lunn, or others that I could name. I have filled 18 tubs with 16 cwt. each, for 3s. 4½d. many and many a time. (Hear, hear).

These good old days have passed away; you have now more time to think, to read, to be at home. We used to have to think that it was not time to think at all, it was our business to work. But we are trying to raise ourselves in the social scale, and to improve ourselves. If I can persuade five or six men to resolve from to-night that during the year they will not enter a public house. If I am the means of inducing some one to save £20 this year more than last; if I can lead some of you to resolve that this year you will devote two hours a day to reading, such a book as Smiles' Self-help, or the life of Robert or George Stephenson, my mission to night will not have been in vain, and next year you will be in a better social position than you are this; but there is no royal road to learning and improvement. A certain bishop had a brother who was a ploughman, who was very careful about his superiority over others. Sold by Grocers, Chemists, and Oilmen, in 1d. Packets, 6d., 1s., 1s. 6d., and 2s. Tins.

HOOKED BY MISTAKE.—Many are the troubles which arise from using blunt edged tools, and the uses of hooks are not an exception. Should you hook yourself instead of your fish, mainly owing to the difficulty of the situation. If it has only penetrated your garments, a thread or so of the shred at the most is all that need be sacrificed. If, however, it has entered your flesh, detach the hook from the line, and instead of attempting to withdraw the hook the same way as that through which it entered—always premising that the barb which is large and rank—strip the shank of its whipping in as careful a manner as you can carry the point round through the flesh and draw the shank out through the second aperture.—Coarse Fishing Secrets.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.
CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered!
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphteria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms.
From LORD FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December 1868.
"Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half-a-dozen bottles sent at once to the above address."
"HAY RUSSELL communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE!"—See Lancet, 1st December 1866.
CAUTION.—NEVER BUY CHLORODYNE AND IMITATIONS.—NEVER BUY EXTRACT and IMITATIONS.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the Defendant, DAVENPORT, was convicted of PERJURY, which he expressed to be, "dark brown varnish to colour Tincture, 1s. 6d. per bottle."
Sold by Proprietor, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d. and 4s. each. Popular remedies without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" coined to circumvent Patent Laws, are worthless, dangerous compounds.

GEORGE LAWS, PROPRIETOR

A smart young man, the other day,
A visit to his Love would pay;
But as his Summer Suit was bare,
He to friend LAW'S did repair;
And there he saw his Winter Show
Of Hats and Clothes—at price so low,—
Astonished, he an order gave,
Which made him look both smart and brave.
The Maiden saw but scarcely knew
Her Thomas in a suit of new—so fine,
Yet fitted with such skill,
That love combined to fancy's will;
His Suit he did not plead in vain,
For LAW'S suit her heart did gain,
Then to each friend he'd give advice—
Try LAW'S Goods for Fit and Price.

THE DUKE OF EDINBRO'S MARRIAGE.

YESTERDAY, in the far distant capital of the Czar, was celebrated one of the most auspicious events that has occurred in the family of our much beloved widowed Queen. The only daughter of the Emperor of all the Russias and most extensive potentate in the world, has given her hand, heart, and her fortune to the second son of England's Queen, on whose vast and scattered dominions the sun never sets, and whose word is listened to with respect by all the civilized nations, whose nation and power is feared by the uncivilized savage. Whatever may be said by statesmen about royal marriages having no political importance, the heart of the most unobservant discerns the feeling of affection, or at last regard, from a marriage between royal houses, whose relations have never been looked on with perfect complacency or comfortable safety since the days when Russia was beaten from the Malakoff Tower, and forced to quit Sebastopol. But now, whenthe only dearly-loved daughter of Alexander is wooed and won by Victoria's "sailor lad" we feel a relief in the thought that a rupture will not easily take place, when two young hearts—each deeply respected by their countrymen—are joined in holy matrimony to live and love together till death them shall part. Although it is very improbable that Prince Alfred will ever wield England's weighty sceptre, or that Princess Alexandrovna will ever become Empress of Russia, still we all feel glad that those who were at one time our greatest enemies have such a regard for England and England's prince, as is shown by the reception he meets with in St. Petersburgh, and the evident gratification expressed by the Russian court and people; and we Englishmen feel proud that our best-loved and most intelligent female has been accepted by, and accepted by a lady, whose position we may consider as somewhat more exalted than his own, and by a people and Emperor, whose country is of such temporal benefit, Heartily, gracefully, cheerfully we join the huzzas which yesterday rang through the Czar's city, and fervently wish the young couple much joy, long life, and many blessings.

THE TICHBORNE TRIAL;

MR. HAWKINS, on Thursday dealt with the Carabinee witnesses, pointed out that the defendant knew details which were known to all the regiment, but could not recall the most striking matters known only to Tichborne and a few other persons, while he recollected incidents which never occurred, for instance, the story of ROGER drawing his sword on a brother officer. The learned counsel went on to show how information had been got up with the object of practising on Major NORBURY and others. Some of the Carabinee witnesses, he said, were innocent and others were not. He contented himself on the fact of BAIGENT having put into the affidavits of some of the witnesses' statements which they never made. This concluded the Carabineer part of the evidence.

MR. WHALLEY BEFORE THE COURT FOR CONTEMPT.

FINED £250.

ORDERED INTO CUSTODY.

On Friday the Court was densely crowded.

Mr. Whalley, M.P., occupied a seat near the defendant, but it was observed that he held no communication with him.

Mr. Morgan Lloyd, Q.C., who appeared for Mr. Whalley, said he wished on that gentleman's behalf at once to offer the fullest apology for what had happened. Unfortunately Mr. Whalley took a strong interest in this case, and was indignant at the charges brought against him.

The Chief Justice: What charges? The whole of this letter goes not to free himself, but to uphold Luie.

After further remarks from counsel, the Chief Justice said he was making the matter worse.

Mr. Whalley got excited, and his counsel read an affidavit concerning the publication of a letter, which was sent to the Pictorial Times, copies of which were sent to London.

The Chief Justice: That does not relieve the writer of responsibility.

Mr. Lloyd regretted his client's contempt.

The Chief Justice said they were willing to stop short of imprisonment. Mr. Whalley must pay a fine of £250.

A scene ensued, Mr. Whalley saying he declined to pay.

He was then removed in custody.

WHERE ARE THE POLICE?

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

In your somewhat eulogistic article of last week on the misery of this district and the improvements of Rothwell generally, you omit to notice one piece of Rothwell manners, or, rather ill-manners, which with your permission I now shall do. For a long time the shopkeepers of Rothwell have been plagued by the congregation, chiefly at night, around their shop-windows, of boys and loiterers and children, who seem to consider that they have a perfect right to shout at the top of their voices, anywhere they like in the open street, and to play all sorts of games, such as dashing windows, and using a plentiful supply of chalk, opening shop doors and running away, leaving dozen articles spread in all other ways, and by other means obstructing the path-way and annoying passers by; any pretty-well inoffensive person trying to claim as a common play-ground, where they can play any sort of rough games, perform amateur acrobatic or gymnastic exercises, or in fact amuse themselves, but high y unpleasant to anyone people either inside or outside their places of business.

The eloquent expostulation, repeated warning or remonstrance occasionally accompanied by the emphatic kick or the shove to ie of little avail; evidently the parents of these children seem to take little interest in their welfare, so long as they are out of their way, and thus they are allowed in a sense to "run wild."

I should, therefore, recommend that our respective of physical, force—the policeman—should contrive to exhibit himself in the main streets for the benefit of his health, not exactly "when the moonlight is on the watery," but between 5 o'clock and 9, when the gaslight is on the pavement, and supplement the labours of the schoolmaster in the "evening edition" of whole some "admonition" in order to teach these mischevious urchins and disturbers of the peace better manners, and to ensure more order and decorum in our public streets.

I am,
ONE OF THE ANNOYED.

Jan. 28th, 1874.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or falling off, use "Hall's Vegetable Hair Renewer," for it will positively if "The Mexican Hair Renewer" be its original restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Certificate from Dr. Vennmann on every bottle, with full directions. Ask your Chemist for "The Mexican Hair Renewer," prepared by HALL'S GALLIC ACID AND PERFUMERY COMPANY, 26, Old Bond-street, London, and Perfumers generally.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

At the usual fortnightly meeting of the Local Board, held in the Board Room, on Monday last, present Messrs. W. Hargreaves, Dickinson, Bumby, Clayton, Kendrew, Webster, and S. Hargreaves, Clerk.

In the absence of Mr. Charlesworth, Mr. Hargreaves, was unanimously elected to the chair.

Several samples of stone and estimates were received, and after due discussion, it was proposed by Mr. Kendrew, seconded by Mr. Clayton, that we accept the offer of Mr. Crowder, of Rothwell, to deliver, having regard to, 4s. 6d. per ton, for the repair of Stanley roads. On the motion of Mr. Kendrew, seconded by Mr. Dickinson, the above offer was accepted, and 100 tons ordered to be sent at once.

The next business being the further consideration of the "tenders for Surveying and Levelling," the chairman said, that Mr. Bywater, Leeds, had made the most inquiries, but as this was a most important question, he suggested that it be deferred till next meeting, when he hoped every member would be present. Mr. Kendrew seconded, and the motion here again he may depend upon getting it.

Some communication was laid by members of the Board, that the lamps in the village had been put out before eleven o'clock, but as Mr. Bumby promised to mention the fact at the next meeting of directors, the matter was dropped.

Mr. Jowett, highway surveyor, referred to the inconvenience of having no place to put the tools in, at Rothwell, and having noticed that the old lock-up was now quite useless, that would be a very handy place, if they could have it. So far as the Board was concerned, they heartily agreed, and it was suggested by Mr. Dickinson, seconded by Mr. Webster, that Messrs. Bumby, Kendrew, and Clayton, see the Overseers, to make arrangements, for the place being used for the tools of the highway labourers.

The accounts were then laid, and the remark of the Chairman, that this would be another sign of Rothwell improvement, that the place which formerly was occupied by those poor criminals, whose only crime was endeavouring to earn a night's lodging, in "durance vile," was now no longer required, but was to be turned into a warehouse for the peaceful implements of road making.

Mr. Jowett mentioned several nuisances which required special attention, the first being on Mr. Burton's property, near Mr. Bennett's shop, the drain having got choked up. As Mr. Burton was not at the Board, he wished to take a lenient view of the matter, but instructed the inspector to say that if the nuisance was not remedied the Board would have to do it, and charge the owner with the expense.

A very objectionable state of things exists at Low Gosham, the property of Lord Stourton, which is promised to be abated.

The property in the Black Bull Inn, belonging to Mr. Briggs, was very sharply and strongly referred to, and the Clerk was instructed to write finally for the improvement of conveniences. Letters were also to be written to the owners of property in Butcher-lane and in Jail-yard for the erection of privies and removal of ashes.

A letter from John Westmoreland was read, addressed to the Board, and referring to the dangerous state of the bridge near the mill, to the want of light, and to nuisances near his house. The nuisance (Mr. Jowett said) had been removed that day. About the unprotected state of the bridge, but one opinion prevailed in the room,—that it was a proper and necessary subject for the Board to deal with; and although no resolution was put, it was understood that a light be placed so as to throw light across the bridge, and the propriety of in some way protecting the bridge was acknowledged.

Several accounts having been ordered to be paid, the meeting closed.

COLLIER ON FIRE.

The Wyrnetty colliery, Rushon, is on fire, but it is expected the flames will in a few days be subdued. No one has been hurt, but 500 men have been thrown temporarily out of employ.

THE COUNTY FRANCHISE.

In speaking of the deputation to the prime minister on the above important question, the Daily News says: "The deputation was much more strong, both than an agricultural one, and must be taken as mainly representing the opinions of the working classes of the towns, and the trades' unions. Short of an unexpected decision to bring forward a measure to assimilate the borough and county franchise next session (continues our contemporary), Mr. Gladstone could not have given the deputation a more encouraging answer.

THE COLLIER AND HIS PIANO.

On Thursday, at the Dewsbury County Court, Joseph Wood, coal miner, of Barnsley, sued T. Allen, music seller, of Dewsbury, for £37, the value of goods detained by him. Plaintiff's case was that in June last, for assaulting his wife, he was committed to prison for three months with hard labour; that during his confinement his wife had his wife had stripped the house, and sold a piano, a parrot cage, &c., to the defendant for £37, which was much below the value. Defendant contended that the property was in his legal right to dispose of them, and therefore he was not held responsible. A verdict was given for the plaintiff. Allen then brought an action against Wood to recover £10, balance of £28 for the piano which he had sold to Wood about twelve months ago, an order for payment was made.

FLORILINE—For the Teeth and Breath.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevent tartar, stop decay, gives to the Teeth a peculiar pearly whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. Prepared in Flowers and sweet herbs, is delightfully refreshing, and the greatest toilet luxury of the age. Price 2s 6d for the liquid, and 1s per jar for the Floriline "Powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HARRY G. GALLEY, 493 Oxford-street, London.

ANTHEA TO MOTHER—Long broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It relieves the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless, and pleasant to taste. It produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It acts like magic on the stomach, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere at 1s 1½d per bottle.—Manufactured in New York, and at 493 Oxford-street, London.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence

The following cases have been heard during the week in the West Riding Police Court, at Wakefield, before E. Tew, Esq. (Chairman), W. B. Beaumont, Esq., M.P., G. H. Westerman, Esq., Dr. Hollowrych, Dr. Kendall, & W. H. Leatham Esq.

A FOOLISH COUPLE; BUT THERE'S TIME FOR AMENDMENT.—Robert Illingworth, coal miner, living at Lofthouse, was summoned at the instance of Policeman Gill, stated that on the 10th inst. defendant was drunk and riotous in the village a few evenings since.—He did not appear, but sent a letter, stating that on the evening having been proved, Atkinson stated the case as follows:—On Wednesday last, the 14th inst., I was on duty at Lofthouse, and saw defendant, and met him with Illingworth, who was in the public thoroughfares in a state of drunkenness and creating a great noise. I had received notice that he had been drunk at a public-house, and that the landlord had been obliged to get him and took him out of the house in order to keep him out, he was in such a drunken and disorderly condition. His mother had been to me two or three times during the evening, and asked me to apprehend him. He is a man who gets drunk and creates a disturbance almost every night in the week, and has been summoned before the magistrates on several occasions. But as this was a most important question, he suggested that it be deferred till next meeting, when he hoped every member would be present. Mr. Kendrew seconded, and Mr. Kendrew seconded the proposition thus suggested.

The Collectors' monthly statement was then read as follows:—

Mr. Gill: Well then, either independence or laziness must be a luxury which he enjoys, and we cannot countenance the indulgence in any such whims to the wife's disadvantage. What I ask is, that the court order the defendant to pay such sum as they may consider reasonable and sufficient for her maintenance. Mr. Burton has proposed that his client should give her 6s. per week, but that I at once decline as an illegal proffer, and one totally inadequate to their support. His wife's average, we should say, £160 per year, and such an offer is ridiculous; in fact, I have been astonished at my own proposition, which was only 10s. per week. The Chairman: The bench are of opinion that, as he has turned his wife and child out of the house, and as she will have to pay the rent, defendant must pay 10s. amongst her own friends—and considering the high wages which colliers are now earning, he should contribute at least 10s. per week towards the support of his wife. Mr. Burton: Allow me to say that coal may not be anything like the price it has been for a week or two. Mr. Gill: I should be most happy to make a reduction on that account. (Laughter.) There are three or four summonses arising out of this case, and we will withdraw them upon the payment of expenses. It has been a regular family quarrel—party against party—and the sooner it ends the more satisfactory it will be. Inspector Birkill: He was here on the 1st of March, for wilful damage, and on the 19th of July, 1869, for assault; and on the 11th of January, 1871, for being drunk and riotous; on the 20th of December, 1871, for being drunk and riotous; on the 24th Aug., 1872, for being drunk and riotous; on the 19th July, 1873, for travelling in a railway carriage without a ticket. The Chairman: And now he has got himself fined for drunk and riotous? Inspector Birkill: 20s. and costs. The Chairman: Then we shall now order him to pay a fine of 20s. and costs, which, with expenses, will amount to 40s. altogether; and if he does not pay that, he will have to go to the House of Correction for a month. But he will have an opportunity which will be afforded him, if he is again brought before the court whilst I am on the bench, of keeping with a fine. I think a month or two at the bottom of Westgate, and a good taste of prison discipline would do him a deal more good than his wife's money. Take him away, and if he comes here again he may depend upon getting it.

IMPUDENT THEFT BY YOUTHS AT CARLTON, AND FORTUNATE ESCAPE FROM IMPRISONMENT.—Two lads, Edward Illingworth, aged 13 years, son of Mr. Illingworth, and a youth named George Blackburn, aged 15 years, who, having no parents, resides with his uncle, Mr. Bumby, of Carlton, were each placed in the prisoners' dock upon the charge of having, on the 3rd of December last, feloniously stolen two pounds weight of cheese, the property of Henry Dobson, shopkeeper, Carlton. Policeconstable Gill stated that on the night in question, prosecutor stated that he is a grocer, living and carrying on business at Carlton, where the lads in the village had been in the habit of coming on the evening of the 3rd of December, he placed a paper parcel containing two pounds of cheese, and another containing 1-lb. of tobacco in a look-up by the Carlton Inn, which he thought that would be a very handy place, if they could have it. So far as the Board was concerned, they heartily agreed, and it was suggested by Mr. Dickinson, seconded by Mr. Webster, that Messrs. Bumby, Kendrew, and Clayton, see the Overseers, to make arrangements, for the place being used for the tools of the highway labourers.

Some communication was laid by members of the Board, that the lamps in the village had been put out before eleven o'clock, but as Mr. Bumby promised to mention the fact at the next meeting of directors, the matter was dropped.

Mr. Jowett, highway surveyor, referred to the inconvenience of having no place to put the tools in, at Rothwell, and having noticed that the old lock-up was now quite useless, that would be a very handy place, if they could have it. So far as the Board was concerned, they heartily agreed, and it was suggested by Mr. Dickinson, seconded by Mr. Webster, that Messrs. Bumby, Kendrew, and Clayton, see the Overseers, to make arrangements, for the place being used for the tools of the highway labourers.

The property in the Black Bull Inn, belonging to Mr. Briggs, was very sharply and strongly referred to, and the Clerk was instructed to write finally for the improvement of conveniences. Letters were also to be written to the owners of property in Butcher-lane and in Jail-yard for the erection of privies and removal of ashes.

A letter from John Westmoreland was read, addressed to the Board, and referring to the dangerous state of the bridge near the mill, to the want of light, and to nuisances near his house. The nuisance (Mr. Jowett said) had been removed that day. About the unprotected state of the bridge, but one opinion prevailed in the room,—that it was a proper and necessary subject for the Board to deal with; and although no resolution was put, it was understood that a light be placed so as to throw light across the bridge, and the propriety of in some way protecting the bridge was acknowledged.

Several accounts having been ordered to be paid, the meeting closed.

The Secret Marriage:

A TALE OF MYSTERY.

"And then?"

"She sailed for America, in the Queen of the Seas."Right.

"And was lost?"

"Yes. I am quite sure," Eustace continued, seeing a look of doubt on the doctor's face, "of the ominous shake of the white head. "I went to the office with the unpronounceable name where I was told that, identified my wife buried her, and with her, the haunting horror which had weighed me down so long. What is my future, Bywater? I only ask you not to tell my mother; your child shall hear it, before I ask her to be mine."

"I will tell you," the doctor replied, waimly; "let it die with the past, to which it belongs, my boy! If you acted foolishly, you have been bitterly punished !"

"I have, indeed; by such a twelvemonth of misery as I hope never to endure again."

"You are an honourable fellow, Eustace!" Dr. Browne exclaimed, pressing his hand. "You shall have my little girl, with all my heart—if she will have you," he added, slyly, as Eustace seized his hand. "I have never heard of her having any fancies, though I have had my fears, at times."

"Indeed !" said Eustace, with a slight bitterness in his tone, "a popular heiress would not find it difficult to get suitors."

"She has only had one that I know of," the doctor said, laughing; "and that was—Lucas, if I'll tell you, though I meant to have kept it secret. I was going to ask her to marry me !"

"You?"

"You may well look astonished; but 'tis true. I had been thinking all day how I could best protect her, and it seemed the most feasible plan. A rich, ugly long-headed Scotch servant that first put the idea of adopting her into my head. She's unhappy, poor child, than ever she would have been as my wife. You laugh, and well you may. I have laughed at myself many times since. But to return to the main matter then, I can tell you. But, come along; the ladies will wonder where we are."

They found Nelly alone, Mrs. Beresford being engaged "among the millinery," as the doctor laughingly expressed it. She looked up surprised at their amused faces.

"You look quite gay, both of you," she said.

"Yes I have been listening to a strange experience, Nelly child—alone," Dr. Brown said, merrily.

Let us close the door, too, on that interview; it matters little in what words a young man asks a blushing girl to be his wife, or how fully she answers. Eustace Hartley's love for her in surprise and bewilderment; she had loved him, but looked upon him as a "thing apart," something as high in the firmament for her to turn her thoughts to, and here he was beside her, her hand in his, telling her that the love of his heart was hers, and hers alone for ever. There was more to be told, too; and she listened in wondering silence to the sad marriage and sadder sorrow, but it only increased her love and admiration.

Now she knew the cause of the sadness she had marked in her friend, and the reason for the shade of the alteration she had noticed when she saw him for the first time in Oxford. She told him what the doctor had said; that Miss Malcolm was not engaged to him.

"Clara Malcolm has no heart for me, nor I for her," he replied, pressing the little hand he held. "Did I not see you, Nelly, the very day I was introduced to her? I have not seen her since, but she is lovely as she is, at once and for ever. She is a fine, noble girl, and, unless I am very much mistaken, will marry some one who is worthy of her, and will be your nearest neighbour when you are Mistress of Beresford Nelly."

"Oh, Mr. Hartley!" said Nelly, blushing crimson. She had not contemplated her future position in that light.

"My name is Eustace, please to remember for the future. What does that terrified 'Oh, Mr. Hartley!' mean, Nelly? Don't marry me, Miss Nelly, without being the mistress of my house."

"But your sister—"

"My mother will only be too glad to resign her sway to such a successor. There she comes, or I am much mistaken. Mr. Bywater, I beg you will not terror; "she is not such a very formidable person."

Even as he spoke the door opened, and Mrs. Hartley entered with Clara Malcolm. In the presence of the latter lady somewhat disconcerted Eustace; but there was no help for it now, and he met her with a quick perception of the state of affairs. Mrs. Hartley, too, seemed surprised. "Do we interrupt a tête-de-tête?" she said, but cordially greeting the visitors in her tone.

"Not at all!" her son replied; "at least, you have interrupted it at precisely the right moment. Allow me to present to you the future Mrs. Hartley!"

He took Nelly's hand, and led her mother, who looked in utter bewilderment at the agitated girl. "I thought," she began, with a half-look at Clara.

"I know exactly what you thought, mother. You fancied that Miss Malcolm and I were going through life together. But we didn't love each other, did we, Clara? We are very good friends; but we have no other fancies."

Clara coloured painfully; then, with somewhat of an effort, she said, "Am I to be the first to offer you congratulations? I wish you happiness most warmly into a family council; but my good wishes are none the less sincere. I wish the future Mrs. Hartley every happiness." And, stooping to Nelly, she kissed her forehead.

"You shall be kind to her," said Mrs. Hartley; "but I was so taken by surprise. I have heard nothing but good of you, my dear," she continued, taking Nelly's hand, "and I shall be glad to welcome you as a daughter, but you have not been long engaged, and I had made a very different choice, still I will strive to be all a mother should be to you, Nelly, and I will bring to me. We don't know each other yet; we must be better acquainted."

Poor Nelly! She had passed an agitating hour, and the words seemed cold after Eustace's passionate declaration. Tears rose to her eyes, and, drawing her head down, Mrs. Hartley kissed both cheek, and, "Only let me love you! I have no mother to love now !"

Mrs. Hartley was melted, and raising the weeping girl, she pressed her to her bosom.

"I will, I will love you with tears in her eyes. "As you love my son so will I love you!"

"God bless you, mother !" said Eustace, fervently. "I know you will be kind to her."

"Heyday" said the doctor, entering. "What's all this? It strikes me we have arrived on the scene sooner than was intended. I needn't ask any questions, for I see my little girl has found her place, and—and—Eustace, you have married me, Miss Malcolm has turned away with a sigh. "We never intended anything so—so—absurd," he said, after a minute or two. "Your son here asked me for my daughter only about two hours since, and I know he meant to ask your consent, and all that, in true orthodox fashion."

"But I came unexpectedly, before I was wanted," said the lady, with a laugh. "Never mind; your adopted child has, as you say, found her place, Dr. Brown; and though she will be a loss to us, I expected would take my place at Earlcourt, she shall have as warm a welcome?"

"Hospitality worthy of the game," said the doctor, laughing. "I could have told you long agothat Miss Clara here did not mean to marry your son. I think I know where to find her husband at this very moment!"

The eventful Thursday came at last—the great day of the Oxford year—and Nelly awoke to see the summer sunshine streaming in bright rays into her little chamber, and to hear already the busy hum of pattering feet and gathering people. Soft chimes were pealing from the old tower of Merry and tower, college after college joining in the common jubilee. Oxford folks are early astir on that day of days, and the whole Earlsford party were to breakfast together at Dr. Browne's lodgings, he being, as he said, the most unfashionable among them, and they would be sure of being in time from his house. When Nelly descended to the brea'st parlour, in her best dress, she found it in the orthodox dress for the lady's gallant—a white rose. Mrs. Hartley was already there, and Clara, where, and his wife, in her splendid grey moire dress, were also expected in this country air. Nelly's shy heart grew graceful figure in picturesque folds; she had very few ornaments, but those she had were of her choice, and a pearl cross on her eye, which lent a wondrous charm to her usually dusky manner. Hartley looked the picture of an Oxford lad, in a purple dress and lace shawl; while Nelly, who nestled in confidence by her side, was all in white—a dress which Eustace, wondering, had ordered—which had cost, as the doctor laughingly said, "ever so many fees,"—and a mantle of the same.

"It is a pity Eustace is not here to look at you on state occasion," said Mrs. Hartley to the blushing girl at her side, "you look so fresh and pretty this morning.—We shall have to put up with your escort, I suppose, Nelly, dear. Malcolm, our young heroes have quite forsaken us."

"We shall be forsaken, beyond upon it," said the doctor. "They'll send a bevy of deputies, you may be sure. Neither Mr. Malcolm nor I could undertake to play you ladies into the proper place, we should be establishing you in the president's throne."

"From which we should very speedily be ejected," replied the lady. "But here are the trebles; Eustace gave them to me last night, expressly informing me that we should neither of us dare to leave the house without them."

Clara blushed as she held out her hand for the talismanic square of blue cardboard, which was to admit her to the scene of Dalton's triumph, and looked at it with a soft light in her dark eyes. Had she decided between her love and her pride in the last two days? had she made up her mind to give her hand for love, and love alone? though she said nothing, there was a consciousness of a settled purpose about her which spoke volumes.

The doctor's prediction proved correct; several pleased-looking gownsmen, to whom they had been introduced during the week, came in due time to escort them to the theatre.

At the entrance to the ladies' gallery they had to separate; Dr. Browne and Mr. Malcolm joining the throng on the floor of the building, the students mounting to their own appointed place, and the others following the janitor to the ladies' special domains. The theatre was filling fast when they entered, and Nelly looked with delight on all the scene, and half-alarmed at the noise over-head, and the curious method in which the under-graduates were expressing their sentiments on things in general, in their customary way. Now some one pronounced the Queen's name, and a ringing shout greeting, which speaks well for their loyalty and their lungs; then the royal family, and they cheer again; then one after another, across distinguished personages, whose names are received with cheers or hisses, according as they are popular or otherwise; then comes a slight pause, and their freshman says, "Vivat, Ladies," and merry eyes glance upward, and rosy lips smile approvingly at the cheer which now rings out, and is taken up by the crowd outside, till the city seems to echo with the sound. But even students' lungs need rest at last, and the noise is hushed as the assembly till the procession enters, and then they begin again. The vice-chancellor lifts his graceful head, and bows his acknowledgments, but in answer to the unanimous greeting he receives, and takes his seat in stately silence. Many other dignitaries are alike received, and smile, amused and flattered at the homage thus noisily proffered till the proctors come, and are greeted with a volley of hisses and groans; the junior knits his brows, and defies his tormentors with an angry scowl, which redoubles the storm; the senior smiles, as the senior lifts his cap, and looks up with a good-humoured smile on the audience, which turns the hisses into "Three cheers for Dr. Burton;" in a moment. It is the office, not the man, which is so unpopular, and he knows it. Then the band strikes up, and the tones of the old organ skilfully touched by the professor of music, come pealing on the ear, and the students rise, and the ladies stand also—beneath them like a garden of bright colours, and "God save the Queen" rings up from hundreds of young voices, and the music peals out in response.

Eustace Hartley was the last to mount the rostrum to read the report of what had won the prize. Dalton recited his Latin production with an ease and grace which spoke well for the elocutionary part of it; best of his hearers were not acknowledged, with a flushed face and conscious pride, the applause which his friends in the upper regions so heartily bestowed.

Mrs. Hartley's heart beat high with pride and pleasure as her son stepped forward to read what his friend had just vacated. Very handsome he looked, even to envious eyes, as he stood there, cap in hand, acknowledging the cheers which met him on both sides; for he was a general favourite. For a moment his eye wandered round from the theatre; then, with a sparkle of recognition, rested on his mother, and, generally by her side, and a flush of pleasure rose upon his cheek.

Somewhat nervously he began his task; but a he proceeded he warmed with the subject, and his voice rose clear and full to the ear in the hush which ensued. It was a splendid specimen, both of oratory and composition, and the applause was loud and long as he concluded.

A few more ceremonies, and the grand business was at an end; the crowd began to sing out in joyful appeal, and the done, undergraduates, and spectators poured into the street in an unbroken stream. Some friends had secured places to the gay scene, waited for them, and started for the station, lent on taking their long vacation as speedily as possible. Some strolled off for a last walk to Shotover or Iffley, and went gravely back to their rooms. Those who had friends in Oxford, or were staying in lodgings, were bustle and leave-taking; kind adieus and hearty good wishes for those who were going, never to return, and plans for future enjoyment among those whom the out of the vacation would reunite in the old city, which in a few hours would be as silent as if the plague had swept off half the population.

DEATH OF MRS. BARRAN.—We are sorry to have to record the death, after a short illness, of Mrs. Barran, wife of Alderman John Barran, Esq., of Leeds, who, by his manifcent gifts to the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute, and by his kind and manly words at the Soiree, has caused his name to be remembered in Rothwell with esteem and admiration.

WRAY'S MARIONETTES AT ROTHWELL.—On Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, Mr. Wray exhibited these performing figures, at the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute, and delighted his audience with the various attractions provided. The autoautons go through a variety of postures with ease, and the entertainment is also indebted to Mr. Bagbagnall for his singing.

ANNUAL TREAT OF THE ROTHWELL CHURCH CHOIR.—On Tuesday, January 20th, the members of the Rothwell Church Choir had their annual supper at the Vicarage. The supper was presided over by the Vicar, and was a most pleasant and very excellent one, after which the Vicar gave some suitable advice to the choir, he said that several complaints had been made during the past year, in relation to the singing, the practices had not been as well attended as they might have been and in consequence the singing had deteriorated, sincerely hoped that in the coming year they would endeavour to do their best, and he made their practices for one hour and-a-half to attend the practices, and thus render themselves proficient. Mr. T. W. Jewison then proposed the health of Mr. and Mrs. Heberden and family, which was heartly responded to by the choir; several glees and songs were sung by the choir and Mrs. Heberden. The choirmaster, Mr. Wm. Jewison presided at the piano. The [illegible] broke up about Ten o'clock by singing National Anthem, one and all been highly estisfied with their evening's entertainment.

A smart young man, the other day,
A visit to his Love would pay;
But as his Summer Suit was bare,
He to friend Law's did repair;
And there he saw his Winter Show
Of Hats and Clothes—at price so low,—
Astonished, he an oft er gave,
Which made him look both smart and brave.
That how combined to fancy's will;
His Suit he did not plead in vain,
For Law's suit her heart did gain,
Then to each friend he'd give advice—
Try Law's Goods for Fit and Price.

Agent for Rothwell: Mr. MARSHALL

WANTED A MANAGER FOR THE BRITISH WORKMAN, WOODHESFORD.—Must be a pledged and consistent Teetotaler. Apply William Whitehead, Secretary, Temperance Terrace, Oulton.

TO the ELECTORS of the SOUTH-WEST RIDING of the COUNTY of YORK.

GENTLEMEN,

Her Majesty having, by the advice of her Ministers determined to dissolve Parliament, I beg for a third time to solicit your suffrages.

I am emboldened to hope that you will again elect me to represent those Liberal opinions which alike I believe to be yours as well as mine in South Yorkshire by the decisive majority obtained by Lord Milton and myself. The present fight is not of our seeking. My rights of every Englishman, to say by whom we will be governed and whose principles he most admires? Is it right—is it just—that the simple and only question of living with in the town boundary, or living outside the boundary, should be the critical point on which depends his having a vote or no? But our answer can be given. It is not right—it is not just; it is but a relic of the feudal times, when the residents in the country districts were looked down upon by the townsmen as being of a lower grade —when education and railways and photographs were unknown, and "the country lorby" was known in the street by his slouching gait, his unkempt hair, his lustreless eyes, his low forehead. But things are changed; and now we ask that the little shopkeeper, the iron-framed mechanic, the hardy miner, the honest, common-sense farm labourer, may each enjoy the privilege, the honour of taking part in choosing the man honour of taking part in choosing the man who in Parliament will best serve his own interests and those of his native land. The working men of the town have got the franchise; let them, and those of the country too, who have already the voting qualification, speak out decidedly for the men who will do their utmost to obtain the same power for their brethren in the country districts. Working men! look at the past parliamentary history; and judge for yourselves.

Another portion of the county electors and non-electors feel deeply and patriotically the objectionable features of the present laws, that a farmer, or a poor man, who prides himself on a garden, should be unable to protect himself from, or to reimburse himself for, damage done to his crops by his neighbour or by those belonging to his lordly neighbour or landlord. The various Acts which refer to the relations of Capital and Labour hold a warm place in the hearts of the people, and I, as their humble power to speak, but who plead in their meetings for the repeal of such laws as fall unequally on employer and employed. Coming to the more important question of taxation which, of course, the Chancellor of the Exchequer certainly speaks at home on the subject, while Mr. Disraeli expresses himself as more than favourable, and Mr. Gladstone pronounces himself as abolitionist inquisitorial and unrighteous Income Tax; and on the whole question we certainly must congratulate the Government upon the state in which they have left the finances of the country.

THE DEATH OF LIVINGSTONE.

AMID the excitement of the political elections, the sad, solemn news of Dr. Livingstone's death comes upon us as a heavy cloud of sorrow. Every Britisher, whatever be his political or religious creed, will join in the expression of sorrow for this brave man's loss. The son of a small shopkeeper in Blantyre, Scotland, by hard work in the cotton mill, managed to save the money and give the winter time to study at Glasgow, while he returned to his work in the summer. In 1838 he became a Doctor of Medicine, and afterwards offered himself to the London Missionary Society as a missionary to Africa. There has this God-like man lived and laboured almost uninterruptedly for thirty-six years, only returning to England twice for short periods, while pursuing his office of missionary to the benighted souls of the African savages, he also used his medical knowledge for the healing of their bodies, and gathered such funds of information in geographical, botanical, and other sciences as to make him, without exception, the most renowned and intrepid traveller of modern times. His one great object in the later years of his long life was to discover the hidden source of that mysterious river which is so well known both in ancient and modern history. Wandering among savage tribes, who had never before seen a white man; surrounded by suspicion, in constant danger of injury or death, David Livingstone has still kept on his way, procuring knowledge, covering the map of Africa with blank spaces filled up and seen only by himself, spreading a purer creed among the people, and opening out new spheres of missionary and commercial enterprise, influencing the slaves in the far distant unknown land, surrounded only by a few of his faithful servants, his thoughts turned now to the home and loving friends that awaited his hoped-for arrival, now to the keen desire of which our leaden oft to his darker brethren, the iron-framed, bronzed-featured, way-worn traveller falls asleep in "sure and certain hope of a blissful immortality."

THE TICHBORNE TRIAL.

At the opening (on Monday) of the Court for the trial of the Tichborne claimant, Lord Chief Justice Bovill addressed some remarks made by Mr. Lewis on Saturday in connection with the defence of Jean Luie, characterising them as scandalous and audacious. Dr. Kenealy complained of a paragraph in the Western Morning News, but the Lord Chief Justice said it was so utterly contemptible and absurd as to be beneath notice. Mr. Hawkins then resumed his reply for the prosecution, which was continued in the afternoon and Wednesday, dealing with the various points in question, and concluding a remarkably plain and straightforward speech, calling upon the jury to fearlessly pronounce the verdict which justice and common sense demanded. The learned counsel was loudly applauded.

The Lord Chief Justice on Thursday commenced his summing-up in the Tichborne trial. After congratulating the jury on having arrived at the last stage of this protracted, and, in many respects, painful inquiry, his Lordship passed a severe censure on the defendant's counsel for the disrespect and insult he had offered to the Bench, and then proceeded to sketch the history of the Tichborne family, and to deal with Roger's early life.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

It is now very old news that the Eighth Parliament of Her Majesty Queen Victoria is dissolved. The suddenness of the announcement in last Saturday's London papers, taking the whole country by surprise and unreadiness, and the hysteric utterances of aspirants to the honour of M.P., have passed away, and the electors and candidates are settling down to the earnest and serious work of fighting for the principles they hold on the various social and political questions of the day. And shall we sit still, and let things go as they will? we who, not being included within a borough boundary—who happen to live on the outskirts of the town—and who for this reason, and this only, are refused the only privilege of every Englishman, to say by whom we will be governed and whose principles he most admires? Is it right—is it just—that the simple and only question of living within the town boundary, or living outside the boundary, should be the critical point on which depends his having a vote or no? But our answer can be given. It is not right—it is not just; it is but a relic of the feudal times, when the residents in the country districts were looked down upon by the townsmen as being of a lower grade —when education and railways and photographs were unknown, and "the country lorby" was known in the street by his slouching gait, his unkempt hair, his lustreless eyes, his low forehead. But things are changed; and now we ask that the little shopkeeper, the iron-framed mechanic, the hardy miner, the honest, common-sense farm labourer, may each enjoy the privilege, the honour of taking part in choosing the man who in Parliament will best serve his own interests and those of his native land. The working men of the town have got the franchise; let them, and those of the country too, who have already the voting qualification, speak out decidedly for the men who will do their utmost to obtain the same power for their brethren in the country districts. Working men! look at the past parliamentary history; and judge for yourselves.

Another portion of the county electors and non-electors feel deeply and patriotically the objectionable features of the present laws, that a farmer, or a poor man, who prides himself on a garden, should be unable to protect himself from, or to reimburse himself for, damage done to his crops by his neighbour or by those belonging to his lordly neighbour or landlord. The various Acts which refer to the relations of Capital and Labour hold a warm place in the hearts of the people, and I, as their humble power to speak, but who plead in their meetings for the repeal of such laws as fall unequally on employer and employed. Coming to the more important question of taxation which, of course, the Chancellor of the Exchequer certainly speaks at home on the subject, while Mr. Disraeli expresses himself as more than favourable, and Mr. Gladstone pronounces himself as abolitionist inquisitorial and unrighteous Income Tax; and on the whole question we certainly must congratulate the Government upon the state in which they have left the finances of the country.

THE DEATH OF LIVINGSTONE.

AMID the excitement of the political elections, the sad, solemn news of Dr. Livingstone's death comes upon us as a heavy cloud of sorrow. Every Britisher, whatever be his political or religious creed, will join in the expression of sorrow for this brave man's loss. The son of a small shopkeeper in Blantyre, Scotland, by hard work in the cotton mill, managed to save the money and give the winter time to study at Glasgow, while he returned to his work in the summer. In 1838 he became a Doctor of Medicine, and afterwards offered himself to the London Missionary Society as a missionary to Africa. There has this God-like man lived and laboured almost uninterruptedly for thirty-six years, only returning to England twice for short periods, while pursuing his office of missionary to the benighted souls of the African savages, he also used his medical knowledge for the healing of their bodies, and gathered such funds of information in geographical, botanical, and other sciences as to make him, without exception, the most renowned and intrepid traveller of modern times. His one great object in the later years of his long life was to discover the hidden source of that mysterious river which is so well known both in ancient and modern history. Wandering among savage tribes, who had never before seen a white man; surrounded by suspicion, in constant danger of injury or death, David Livingstone has still kept on his way, procuring knowledge, covering the map of Africa with blank spaces filled up and seen only by himself, spreading a purer creed among the people, and opening out new spheres of missionary and commercial enterprise, influencing the slaves in the far distant unknown land, surrounded only by a few of his faithful servants, his thoughts turned now to the home and loving friends that awaited his hoped-for arrival, now to the keen desire of which our leaden oft to his darker brethren, the iron-framed, bronzed-featured, way-worn traveller falls asleep in "sure and certain hope of a blissful immortality."

WOODLESFORD AND OULTON MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—On Tuesday last a concert, or miscellaneous entertainment, was held in the Institute, for promoters and gentlemen of the neighbourhood. The programme was an attractive one, comprising songs, vocal duets and recitations, by Mr. Dobson, the Misses M. S. Cockerham, Miss Pease, Messrs. J. Dobson, J. Craven, and H. Parlett as vocalists, with readings by Mr. Powell, (secretary of the Institute), and Mr. W. Craven. The chair was taken by the Vicar, the Rev. C. I. Hussey, to whose lucid remarks the room was opened with the well known duet, "The Minute Gun at Sea," which was effectively rendered by Mr. J. Craven and Mr. H. Parlett. This followed a song, by Mr. Parlett, whose songs we understand are quite original; next followed a reading by Mr. Powell, which was given in an inimitable style of his own, which, to judge from the reception he met with, seems to create considerable amusement for us. The duet "Excelsior," by Mr. Dobson, followed, produced an encore, which he responded to by singing the well-known "Jolly Beggar." We cannot notice the singing of Miss Pease, whose unassuming style and sweet voice elicited considerable applause and found favour in the sight of her audience. Mr. Nowell followed with a reading from "Pickwick. Mr. Nowells abilities as a reader is well known and appreciated, and we will known to need any eulogium. A charming song, "To the Words," tastefully sung by Miss Cockerham, concluded the first part. The second part included songs by Mr. Dobson, Miss S. Cockerham, Miss Pease, and Mr. Parlett; readings by Mr. Powell and Mr. Craven; and a duet, "The Echo Duet," by Miss Cockerham and Mr. J. Dobson, which, from the manner in which it was rendered, deserves special notice. A vote of thanks to the performers was moved by the Vicar, and after singing the National Anthem the meeting broke up quite delighted with their evening's entertainment. Mr. W. Lockwood presided at the pianoforte, and by his careful accompaniments, gave great assistance to the singers.

MR. GLADSTONE AT GREENWICH.

In the midst of a dense fog and a thick drenching rain, which had almost entirely emptied completely from view, the Prime Minister addressed his late constituents on the subject of politics from a platform on Blackheath hill, on Wednesday. He said I will go very straight to the point, and I will endeavour not to detain you with anything like circumlocution. This suddenness or rapidity of the dissolution is made the cause of reproach by our political opponents. They say, for we have referred to you the position in which we have been placed. I have told you that we have felt under the circumstances of the case we could not go on in any other way, and that what we require was a full and fair appeal to the people. We have had a fair appeal to the people, and we have responded. We have been unable to resign our office; and why? Because of the proceedings of the Ashantee war. We have had the last year the opportunity when he had defeated us in Parliament, of taking the government, and we have declined to take advantage of that opportunity, and when he received it he ran away." (Laughter and cheers.) He stated, gentlemen, on the hustings that his object was simply to govern the country, but that he could not do it in the present Parliament, and that he would not undertake to dissolve the Parliament. (Laughter. You will see, gentlemen, your own feelings as Englishmen and men will not entirely sympathise with him. He absolutely impossible for us, after such a course as that, to go on with our resignation, and we have had to meet him on his own ground. Mr. Disraeli again to do that which he had already refused to do. (Cheers.) I, therefore, in full and fair reliance on the last appeal which you had already made to you, and on the opponents in consequence of the time of the dissolution, they have to charge it upon themselves; and I, acting upon the same, appealed to you, you have to charge it on them. (Laughter and cheers.) It is important for you to bear in mind the position of England, to consider what is the nature of the issue which has been raised and submitted to them, and which they have to decide—the distinguished leader of the Opposition has selected his own mode of submitting it, and what has he done? He has complained, he had confessed with pain and with regret that our legislation in the first year of the session presented a multitude of subjects which required the care of Parliament. But Mr. Disraeli, taking a totally different view, declared that there was a great deal too much legislation—(laughter)—and so he declines to draw your attention to the true principle of the case. (Cheers.) Well, gentlemen, we are ready for an examination of foreign policy or any other policy. Only, I fear, that the object of Mr. Disraeli will endeavour to depreciate in your minds the importance of your home concerns, and to fix your attention exclusively upon those domestic and vital interests pressing upon you every day to the neglect of matters and far removed from the sphere of foreign policy. I point out to you that in calling you away from domestic affairs to foreign politics you are called to consider a region where the power of discussing and comprehending, to discuss that which is extremely difficult and requires a study and care of years. You are called away from daylight into the dark, and when it is proposed to examine the policy of our opponents, they come estimates unscrupulously high, and lay burdens on the country unnecessarily great. Now, I am ready on my side to give effect to those designs as to excite various classes as to imaginary dangers on the subject of foreign policy. Wright Hon. Robert Lowe has gone to a very remote part of the globe abroad, has gone to a very remote part of the globe abroad, far far far off from the kingdom of Brobdignag. He carries us to the Straits of Malacca. I will only say, gentlemen, with respect to the question of general policy, that I have touched in my address, that wherever we can deal with them, we shall unhesitatingly do so, and we have already done so. For instance, such a case as that of the licensed victuallers—(hear, hear)—in which I believe we have terminated a question which this dissolution will mainly turn? It is the question of finance and the question of finance is one which I trust, with confidence, we shall be able to deal with. We have stated that in our opinion relief ought to be given to local taxation, coupled with the reform of the local taxation, and we recommended that the relief of local taxation—that is to say, the grant of money now belonging to the Exchequer, to the relief of local taxation—could not be made without a general investigation of the question which I propose to institute in the next Parliament. But local taxation, though a considerable question in a pecuniary sense, is not so large, and would not give so important a shock to the finances of the year, by the demand it would make upon them, as the other subjects to which I have referred. I trust confidently

The Secret Marriage

A TALE OF MYSTERY.

CHAPTER XV.

THE MARRIAGE PREPARATIONS—THE JOURNEY AND THE PRESENTIMENT—THE ANONYMOUS LETTER.

The pleasant little party at Oxford separated, after their week's enjoyment, with mutual regret. Nelly returned to Hanley for a few weeks, instead of a year; after which Mrs. Hartley claimed her for a while, to make acquaintance, as she said, with her new daughter; then she was to go home only for a few months, to leave Dr. Browne's house in the ensuing summer as Eustace Hartley's bride.

"I did not mean to lose you so soon, Nelly," the old man said, fondly; "I meant you to be my little housekeeper for many a year yet. But I think you are going to happiness, my child, and even if there is in the world I would sooner give my daughter to."

Eustace in the meantime was going to travel—secretly against his will in the altered state of his affairs. He would fain have lingered near his youthful bride-elect, but his mother was peremptory. "I meant to have her all to myself for a little while," she said; and her son was obliged to submit.

Herbert Dalton went to visit his father in Italy to tell him of his happiness and good fortune, and Clara returned home with her parents, receiving the wondering congratulations of her friends with such quiet dignity as stopped all gossip at once.

And the Earlsford people talked and wondered, as people in quiet, old-world places will; and were duly astonished that Miss Malcolm should bestow herself and her money upon a mere nobody, as they, in their "young Squire Hartley," who, in their eyes, was fit to mate with nobility, should have stooped to "poor Mrs. Deane's granddaughter." Their good old Mall with her straitened circumstances was yet fresh in their memories. The two brides-elect were very little for the gossip, apparently content in their own happiness; time flew by on fairy wings to them; and Eustace Hartley returned, and autumn and winter passed away, and a bright little figure might be seen flitting about the doctor's house, or riding in the well-appointed carriage, which was always attended by the grim and solemn-looking Andrew, who soon shared in every one's love for his gentle little mistress. There was nothing left for the wedding-man would not have done for Nelly; he half-worshipped the timid, gentle girl who had come to enliven the dullness of his quiet home; and he was ever ready to do her lightest bidding, or attend to her smallest wish.

The doctor's foster-child was to be married first; Herbert and Clara deciding to wait till the former obtained his promised living at Hanley. And laughingly declaring that he was too proud to accept anything at her hands, and he persisting that he would at least have a home over his head before he took a wife. There was not likely to be any great delay, however; the end of the year, nothing preventing, would see them united, and Clara proceeded as delightedly with her preparations as if she were getting ready to marry the eldest son of a duke.

Mrs. Hartley undertook the management of Nelly's trousseau—Dr. Browne thinking her arbiter-bachelor in the matter of expense—and her future daughter-in law was completely bewildered with the magnificence of the purchases made in her behalf, and naively told her friend she did not know what she should do with so many clothes at once.

The summer days lengthened and brightened, and only a fortnight remained before Nelly would leave the old house in Castle street to become the mistress of Earlscourt. She spent much of her time there now, for Mrs. Hartley had learned to love her son's bride-elect very dearly, and the pleasant bachelor never seemed half so cheerful as when Nelly sat there, or her drives so pleasant and lively as when her future daughter was by her side.

Eustace, too, seemed to live in a delicious dream in those few months. He could not have thought more happiness, and that the weight which had rested so heavily upon him was lifted at last, never more to return; that the wife who was to share his home so much misery was in her grave; and that her place was to be filled by a fair young creature, into whose pure mind the knowledge of such wickedness and deceit, as made part of that dead woman's daily life, could never come. He perfectly revelled in his happiness; he took long delightful walks with Nelly through the woods, and by the river, and rides and drives through all the country round, for there was not a village on his estate that they did not visit in company; not a poor pensioner of his mother's who did not know him, and everywhere he received the same welcome from the old, and kindly smiles and greetings met her from the young. Her old servant, Mary, was a shareher foster-child's good fortune as many a time did she receive from the young squire and "Miss Nelly," to her great pride and delight, and to be envy and admiration of her neighbours in the almshouses; she was to go with her darling, too, to occupy a position in her household, and to live with her for ever more, and the faithful creature felt as if her happiness were more than she could bear.

"I am going to leave you to-morrow, Nelly," said Eustace, one morning, about a fortnight before the wedding-day—"to leave you for two whole days, my darling."

Nelly looked at him inquiringly. "Where are you going?" she asked.

"To Liverpool. Why, you look as terrified as if I were going to the antipodes; it is only a few hours' journey. Come next I take," he added, embracing her, "you will be by my side."

"Did I look terrified?" she said; "I did not know it, but I felt so. The very mention of your going seemed to give me a cold shiver. Must you go?"

"I must, in that I have promised; otherwise there is no real necessity; I expected to have gone a month since, at least."

"What are you going for? may I know?"

"May you know? Now, Nelly, what a question! As if there was anything concerning me that you must not know! You remember those poor folks in that outlandish place among the hills yonder, that I told you were going to emigrate?"

"Yes."

"Well, I did what I could for them; helped with their passage money"——

"Paid it all, you mean."

"Well, perhaps; anyway they joined some more who were going out, till there is almost a ship-load of them; and I made a rash promise that whereby did go, poor things, I would go with them and take a look at their accommodations, &c., and bid them good-bye. They were not ready, as they should have been, a month since, and now they are off on Wednesday. What shall I do, Nelly? I have a fair excuse for not going."

"Oh, no, Eustace!" the young girl replied, warmly; do not let them couple your name with a broken promise; they will think as much of the last sight of your face, as if you had sent them a five-pound note each. Your people all love you so; keep your word with them."

"I will, you enthusiastic little woman! If they love me, they will worship you. What a Lady Bountiful you will be! I shall have to restrain you from indiscriminate charities, after you have promised to love, honour, and obey your husband, I expect."

"I don't believe you will," she replied, gaily. "I expect rather you will be guilty of aiding and abetting. Are there any children among them?"

"Four or five families; the youngsters seemed to me numberless when they came about their passagemoney. Why do you ask?"

"Because I want to send them something—may I? May I get some toys, and things? I should like to come with you, and see them."

"You shall do that next time, when you are Mrs. Hartley. Do what you like in the matter of toys; they don't want necessaries, I took care of that; but it takes a woman to think of the babies."

"I wish you weren't going, somehow," Nelly said pravely. "I don't believe in presentiments, but I feel as if something dreadful were going to happen."

* * * * * * *

"What makes you look so troubled, Nelly?" asked the doctor, the day after Eustace Hartley's departure on his journey. "Have you any worries, any cares upon your mind, that you are so grave this morning? does the all-important dress not fit or is the bonnet not the thing, or what?"

"Oh no!" said Nelly, laughing; "all those weighty affairs are over, and settled long ago. I am well dressed, I dare say, but I am troubled about something."

"And what is it?"

"This," she replied, producing a crumpled letter from her pocket. This is the third I have had, all left here by different people who took no look in the first one before he went away, the other two have both come this week."

Andrew was away in Scotland at this juncture; the sudden death of a relation had placed a small property in his mother's hands, and nothing would do but her son must go there immediately to see her good fortune, and arrange her affairs. Andrew went directly with the same double-bedded room he would have shown when a boy,—a quality which, I think, all Scotchmen retain to a time of life when Englishmen are apt to forget their obligations, and to look upon their mothers as bores and encumbrances. He hoped to be back, however in time for Nelly's Wedding.

"Hem!" said the doctor, taking the ill-spelt and worse-written document from Nelly's hand, "An anonymous letter! I think I see the drift of it. Go on, child, when he has not read it to the writer evidently, whatever their motives; I ace your correspondent has written to Eustace, too, but he has taken no notice. You shall answer this letter."

"Answer it!" exclaimed Nelly, in a fright.

"Yes; you see, he or she—when I shrewdly suspect it is—asks you to write to certain initials at the post-office; do so, and ask her to come here at an appointed time; I will settle all the rest. If it really be as I suspect, that some one at Earlscourt has discovered anything, and wants to trade upon it, they shall happen very ill."

"But if it should not be that?" faltered poor Nelly.

"Have no fears, my love; I have known your future husband since he was the height of my knee, and I would wager anything he has never done a base or dishonourable action in his life, so that this mighty matter which this mysterious personage says 'nearly affects your honour and happiness,' will turn out nothing at all."

Nelly said nothing, but her face expressed her uneasiness.

"My dear child," the doctor said, taking her hand, "do not look so unhappy; I am right, depend upon it, and even if I am not, there is nothing to be discovered, I am the proper person to take it in hand. Cheer up, and get your breakfast, and then write and tell 'A.B.' to come here at eight o'clock to-night, and ask for you. No brooding now, on fancying all sorts of dreadful things; Eustace will be here to-morrow, or the next day, to answer for himself."

The doctor went his way, and Nelly did as he desired, and despatched a little note to the post-office addressed to 'A.B.' Towards night she sent to know if it had been called for; it was, and she looked forward to the appointed hour with considerable trepidation. The doctor laughed at her nervousness, and asked her what or whom she expected to see; but Nelly could not shake the feeling off; and it was a relief to her when the hour came, and the servant announced—

"A lady?"

It was a lady, in appearance at any rate, who entered Dr. Browne's room. She was becomingly dressed, though closely veiled, and neither the doctor nor his foster-child recognised their visitor.

"Pardon me," she said, after a short pause " my visit was to Miss Deane."

The voice was strangely familiar, though evidently feigned.

"Perhaps," the doctor replied. "But Miss Deane, as in duty bound, shewed me the letters, which, I presume, have come from you." The stranger bowed. "I will leave you to see to her wishes, Nelly, my dear, there is no occasion for you to stay."

"As you please," she replied, coldly; "though, when Miss Deane hears what I have come about, she will probably regret that you have unnecessarily prompted her to publish, what it would have been her interest to keep secret."

Nelly rose at the words from the doctor, and left the room. Dr. Browne shut the door with a sharp snap, and turned upon the veiled figure.

"Now, Mrs. Harris," he said, sharply, "what is the meaning of all this; you did not expect to have to deal with, I presume, you thought you could frighten and mystify that poor child into believing you had a secret, and make her pay you for keeping it. It was a bold game, but I think you'll lose."

"Shall I?" said Harris—for it was indeed Mrs. Hartley's maid. She had been startled at first by his sudden recognition of her, but the value of her imaginary letter had prepared her with the idea that it shall lose, Dr. Browne; but suppose I refuse to tell you my business here. I had something to tell Miss Deane, and if she is not allowed to hear it, I shall take my wares to a better market."

"Hardly better; it would be to one other person's interest to pay you, as you failed to make your master, and hoped to frighten my daughter, into doing. The more I consider the matter, the bolder I guessed right, as Mrs. Harris's confused manner plainly shewed him.

"If I did my duty," he went on, "I should inform your mistress of your interfering in what does not concern you, and get you dismissed from your situation."

"You could not do that," she retorted, insolently. "I have my mistress's son in my power, as I shall have Miss Deane when she marries him. You could prevent this grand match if I chose," she went on, irritated by his composure; "I could tell my mistress"——

"What, Mrs. Harris? I am a plain man, and I like plain speaking."

"I came to sell my knowledge," she answered, "not to blurt it out for every one to have it at their tongue's tip. I respect my lady, and her sake"——

"Had you come here for no one's sake but your own; you would sell your lady's secrets, as you propose to sell her son's, if she had any; you would sell yourself if you were worth anything!"

"Will you buy my information, then; it is valuable, I can assure you."

"I have it already, or I am very much mistaken."

"I doubt it."

"I will try.—You come here, do you not, to give me some information respecting the young lady (person, I have no doubt you are) from you speak of her) who visited Earlcourt on the night of the great thunder-storm? Ha! I see I am right,—I thought I was."

"It is about her," said Harris, aghast.

"I thought so; well, this young person had, as you fancied, some sinister object in visiting your master's house, and you, putting various circumstances together, have imagined you have discovered a secret of importance."

"I have discovered one."

"That remains to be seen. A secret, Mrs. Harris, cease to exist when it is known to several persons. Shall I tell you who that young lady was?"

"If you can," Harris spoke defiantly; she did not hold the winning cards; she felt that.

"She was Mrs. Eustace Hartley—your mistress —had she occupied the station she might have claimed but for her own misconduct. This was the information you came to sell to my child, was it not?"

"It was!"

"And how much do think it is worth?"

"Just as much as Mr. Hartley thinks he can afford to pay for committing a crime," she replied, with insolent defiance; "just as much as he values your daughter at."

Dr. Brown had had to cope with all sorts of people in his career, but he had seldom met with such cool audacity as this. "You will not get one single penny from either your mistress or her son," he replied; "nor yet from Miss Deane herself, unless you can find some more saleable commodity to offer us. Mr. Hartley will not be a criminal; the unfortunate woman who bore his name has carried it into her last resting-place! She lies in a nameless grave, never to trouble us more! Mrs. Eustace Hartley never asked for my child till he could offer her an unfettered hand. You have no right to her secret, and but the truth is the safest thing in a gossip's mouth."

Harris sat looking at him in astonishment; she had never dreamed such an end as this to her threats and mystifications; she had intended to frighten Nelly into silence by payment, and here she was foiled at the very outset. Of course, she knew nothing of the death of Eustace's wife. The wreck of the "Queen of the Seas" had been duly discussed at the housekeeper's table, but the name of Stella Morton not appearing, they had thought nothing of it. She rose to go. "I think I know"—she began.

"I don't believe you did," he replied; "I give you that much credit, at least. I do not know whether your master would believe it too."

"You can tell him if you like," she rejoined in terror —"or my mistress! I should lose my place if you did!"

"And very properly, too, for interfering in affairs with which you have no concern. I shall be ruled by your future conduct, Mrs. Harris. In the meantime I wish you a good night. I told you, yours was the losing game, and you see I was right."

Harris could have stamped with rage as the doctor politely bowed her to the door, and closed it after her. There was nothing for it, however, but to own herself defeated, and return home.

CHAPTER XVI.

MRS. HARRIS, CREST-FALLEN. THE VISIT TO LIVERPOOL.—A SHIPWRECK.

"I have a great mind to tell Mrs. Hartley myself," thought Dr. Browne, after their visitor had departed. "And I will, too, if I can find her."

"Will—what?" asked Nelly, startled by his exclamation.

"Will do what Eustace ought to have done long since, Nelly;—tell his mother of his marriage."

"But will he like it?"

"Perhaps he will never know she is aware of it; I shall leave it to her own judgment, whether she tells him or not. I have a strong feeling that there is no good in secrecy, and I believe it is only from reluctance to pain her, and not from any feeling on his own account, that he has not told her long ago. I have a great mind to drive over to-morrow, and make a clean breast of our grand secret; Mrs. Harris can do no harm after that."

"I think Eustace would feel glad if his mother knew," said Nelly, hesitatingly; "he said, only the other day, that it was nothing but cowardice which had restrained him so long."

"Then I'll do it," said Dr. Browne, decidedly, rubbing his hands with a triumphant face; "and there'll be an end of the mystery at once, and for ever."

He was as good as his word; he drove over to Earlscourt early the next day, and told Mrs. Hartley the story, and his reasons for not having done so before; which is quite true, and a beating heart to the history of her son's folly and its consequences, and breathed a fervent "Thank God!" at its conclusion.

"It might have been worse," she said, tearfully. "far, far worse," Dr. Browne; marriage is no crime, and my son must have paid, in suffering, the penalty of folly four times as great as that; but I am thankful (if one may be thankful for the death of any human being) that an unworthy woman will never fill my place here." She glanced wistfully round the elegant room as she spoke.

"You may rescue dishonourable, madam, that death dissolved such a union; a mouth of boyish infatuation would have been dearly paid for by years of misery and wretchedness. She was not worthy to be the honourable wife of any honest man."

"No," said Mrs. Hartley, shuddering at the recollection, and clasping her hands nervously; "I heard quite enough when I first thought who she was.

I thank you, Dr. Browne, most heartily for your kindness; my son need never know that his secret has been heard anything of this, until he feels that he can speak of it himself to me. As for Harris"——

"Harris will never imagine she has any power for a long time to come," said the doctor, laughing at the remembrance of what had passed on the preceding evening. "I should like you to have seen her last night, when she found herself recognised and outwitted."

"I have a great mind to discharge her; yet she has been a faithful servant."

"Don't let me be the means of her losing her place; a few words of rebuke will sometimes go a great way."

"You are right," replied Mrs. Hartley, rising and with a sigh, "I will try them."

"Send Harris," she said to the man who entered.

Harris came after a short delay, looking very much crest-fallen. Dr. Browne was with her mistress, and apprehended nothing less than instant dismissal.

"Harris," said Mrs. Hartley, when she had closed the door, "I sent for you to give you a word of caution. When you attempt to trade upon a secret you should be sure that it is a secret before you go. My son's marriage was not an agreeable topic, and was not spoken of amongst us more than was absolutely necessary; there was no necessity for informing the household of it, nor is there any for their discussing it now. You have not mentioned your suspicion of it to any one?"

"No, ma'am?"

"Very well. Then the first time any whisper of it comes to my knowledge from the housekeeper's room or servants' hall, you leave me that day. Do you understand me?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Very well; you may go."

Harris left the room, but the room more perplexed than ever. "She carries it off well," she said to herself, "I don't believe she knew a word about it till to-day. She was all of a tremble, and her eyes were quite red. Well, I have been a fool! I should have known better than to have been found it out. This fine stage madam was dead then."

Whilst these events were taking place at home, Eustace Hartley was at Liverpool fulfilling his promises to his people who were emigrating. He went laden with toys from Nelly for the little ones, who would have no place to play, no green fields to run in for so long; and many a gaily-wrapped parcel was carried aboard people on his fair bride-elect. They parted from him with humble, heartfelt gratitude, and prayers for his welfare, for it is a custom amongst the Scotch in devotion to their landlords in that part of the country,—and many of the passengers were of those humble dependants,—that no man might be from whom so many of the steerage folk took leave with such apparent emotion.

"Gone for a missioner?" said a tall Yankee who occupied a position on a barrel, and was, like Alexander Selkirk, monarch of all he surveyed, by reason of the fire of tobacco-juice he kept up for many feet around him. "You Britishers are so darned sentimental, that anything goes without smelling strong. Now, I'd take leave of all creation without such an almighty hubbub as that."

The poor people were crowding round Eustace, for a last look before he left the ship.

"Where's the boss?" said Harris, aghast.

"Gone for a missioner?" repeated the captain, passing by, with his hands full of papers,—" paid their passage-money—found them clothes, and food, and what not."

"Oh, sh,—overstocked estate, I suppose," struck in another of the passengers —sending them off to your country, sir. There's plenty of room for them there."

"Well, stranger, I reckon there is," replied the American, with a laugh, "room for all England will ever send us, I calculate. There's no such fuss between landlord and tenant in our country, I reckon, could part from our mothers without half those tears."

"Or bury them either," said the captain, overhearing the last remark; "you are far too go about in your country for much feeling, Mr. Yankee."

The vessel moved away, and Eustace Hartley was left among the crowd who stood to watch her departure. As he turned to go, some one touched him on the arm. "Beg pardon, sir," said the man; "they sent me from the office after you. There has been a telegram from the office here that you're to come back to step in."

"Not at all. I'll be there directly."

The man bowed and left him, and Eustace bent his steps to the office of the company to which the steamer belonged. "Well," he said to the clerk at the desk, "what about this mistake?"

"We have overcharged you one passage, sir,—a man who is dead, and will be sent to his friends. That was mine; but if you will step into the other office, the cashier will rectify it."

"Thank you," he said, as he was requested. Into the inner room, and while he was waiting, he glanced round at the various documents about him. Sundry books, bundles of letters with names of vessels in large letters upon them, by everywhere about; while charts of various sizes, bill of lading and departure, and rates of fares and cargoes, hung on the walls. "You are busy people here," he remarked to the clerk.

"Yes, sir," returned the clerk, with official pride. "Our office does a smart business. Our vessels are the finest in the trade, and we have a right to be busy."

"Sometimes that happens to you, of course."

"Rarely, sir,—rarely. The Atlantic is full of packets are well built, and carefully officered and manned. We have never had such a disaster as the one which happened two years since."

"What was that?"

"The Queen of the Seas, sir. She belonged to us."

"Indeed!"

"Yes; that was a heavy loss, sir,—a very heavy loss. It was no one's fault, of course,—those things never are; and, indeed, every one believed that the unfortunate woman who bore his name had carried it into her last resting-place! She lies in a nameless grave, never to trouble us more!" Eustace Hartley never asked for my child till he could offer her an unfettered hand. Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

The following cases have been heard during the week in the West Riding Police Court, at Wakefield, before E. Tew, Esq., (Chairman), W. B. Beaumont, Esq., M.P., G. H. Westerman, Esq., Dr. Holdsworth, Dr. Kendall, & W. H. Leatham Esq.

CAUTION TO CARMEN.—ILLEGALITY OF CARELESSNESS AT ROTHWELL.—John Howbridge, a waggoner, in the employ at the Albion Brewery, at Rothwell, was summoned before the police for having on the 21st of January, at Rothwell, being the driver of a horse and dray, sat upon the latter in such a position that he had not the direction and government of the horse.—The defendant did not appear, and the service of the summons was proved by Police Constable Barraclough, who stated that, while on duty in Rothwell, about ten minutes to one o'clock, on the afternoon of Wednesday last, he saw the defendant who was the driver of a brewer's van proceeding down Bell Hill, a steep hill, on the Wakefield and Leeds Turnpike Road, and leading to Leeds. The van was fastened to the saddle, and he was sitting on the cart without having any control whatever over the horse.—The chairman remarked that it seemed carters would not learn wisdom by being fined, as informations were being constantly laid against them in that police court for carelessness, the consequences of which would not only endanger their own lives but the lives of others. The defendant in this case would be ordered to pay 10s. 6d., or to be in prison for 10 days.

REMARKABLE NARROW ESCAPE FROM SUFFOCATION AT ROTHWELL HAIGH CINDER OVENS.—A man, named Matthew Hudson, who stated that he lived at Rothwell Haigh, was charged with the charge of having been found asleep in the cinder ovens at Rothwell Haigh on the 25th instant. P.-C. Gill informed the bench that, on hearing previous to the apprehension of the prisoner, he was informed that a man was lying dead in the cinder ovens, and was requested to go there. He went, but saw nothing, and see to his removal. Upon reaching the ovens he found Hudson lying on the ground in a dying state. He was carried out, but was quite unconscious, and totally helpless. He (Gil) got him out, obtained assistance, and soon afterwards he was in a conscious state, after much trouble, he recovered and was removed to the police-station. The bench dealt with the case leniently, and cautioned and discharged the prisoner Charles Ramsden, for the purpose of arresting him upon a charge of assault, which had been preferred by several parties in the house, friends of Ramsdens and Sutcliffe. He was accompanied by Police constable Marsden.—Thy'll

SUNDAY-SCHOOL SERVICE OF SONG AT ROTHWELL.

Last Monday evening, a number of teachers and scholars selected from the Wesleyan Sunday-School, gave the Service of Sacred Song, entitled "Sons of Bunyan," by Chrisiansen "in the new and spacious schoolroom.

The singing, which was under the leadership of Mr. G. Ward, reflected much credit on both teacher and choir, and gave evident satisfaction to all who were privileged to hear it. While singing mainly of simple, though generally original, American melodies, a variety of tendering was given to them which prevented any feeling of monotony in the song being given in reference to the particular character of the reading. As a whole, the young people acquitted themselves creditably, and we noticed that the pieces with which they were least acquainted, and had necessarily been most carefully learnt, were rendered with the greatest spirit. The songs as "A Day's March Nearer Home," and "Hark, Hark, my Soul," were rather shaky. "Rise up, rise up, we would speak the word," and "Onward, Christian Soldier." But we think the solo "Lord, remember David," and "Sowing by the Way," which was imported into the service, and the parts of which were so beautifully sung by the Misses Beaumont, Miss E. Lunn, Messrs. Beaumont, Seaton, and Master Lunn, will perhaps have made the deepest impression on the audience.

The shepherd's song, coming as from the distance, was remarkably effective, and we must say, that the occasional bursts of laughter of ladies and gentlemen who took part in it, that we did not anticipate such a well-balanced and delicate performance of the hymn.

The accompaniments were all solos on the pianoforte and organ by Mr. J. Naylor and Mr. J. Sheldon were very creditably done, particularly Farmer's "Home, sweet home," by Mr. Sheldon.

The appearance of the orchestra was very interesting, and on one side most accurately represented the cloud of witnesses, with the young ladies and girls were dressed, and the bright, healthy, happy faces of the wearers, reminded us of the days of our youth, and we were told of the dress of angels, and so many of the audience the sight of our lady singers was so attractive and delightful as the singing. Of the male stores of the orchestra, filled with young men wearing some cloth clothing, we must say that there was an air of manliness and earnestness on the countenances which spoke well for the character of the school of which they form a part. Mr. J. R. Seaton was the conductor. Great praise is due to Mr. Ward for the very interesting and entertaining evening spent, and we are happy to learn that the net result amounted to nearly £8.

NO TRUSSES!!

THE AMERICAN TRUSS IS SUPERSEDING ALL THE OLD KINDS OF TRUSS NOW IN USE.—The Truss has obtained the approval and recommendation of the leading surgeons, and is adopted by the authorities of hospitals and medical institutions.

"The American Truss possesses the following special advantages: simplicity, lightness of weight. It affords a perfect support, and allows the various motions and positions of the body to take place with ease and precision. It does away pain or irritation by unequal pressure, neither has it any metal springs or pads to rust and get out of repair. The Truss can be worn during any exercise at night, and is equally applicable for adults of both sexes and for children.

The Truss are sent to any part on the lowest possible scale The Truss can be forwarded by post on receipt of the Size round the body, and Post Office Order payable at Brighton, to WEST & LONG, Surgical Instrument Makers, 19, Middle street, Brighton, from whom only the Truss can be obtained.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

For all Diseases affecting the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, and Bowels.

These Pills can be confidently recommended as the most simple and certain remedy for all diseases affecting the stomach, liver, and bowels. They do not distress the system, or weaken the frame, but thoroughly invigorate the digestive organs, purify and regulate the stomach and liver, stimulate the kidneys to perform their functions efficiently, and act upon the bowels without griping or any other annoyance.

Diseases peculiar to Women.

These pills medicine equal to Holloway's Pills for correcting the ailments peculiar to females. Their curative and painless action highly recommends them to every household as they may be taken with safety for any irregularity of the system. Any mother, nurse, or young person, guided by the directions which accompany each box of Holloway's Pills can at once avail herself of their celebrated properties, purifying the blood, and expelling from her all gross humours.

Wakefulness, Languor, and Debility.

These famous Pills will immediately remove all symptoms of debility, languor, and weakness, no matter the cause, as they regulate the action of the liver, stomach, bowels, give tone and energy to the whole nervous system, and restore it in a wonderful manner.

Biliousness, Loss of Appetite, and Lowness of Spirits.

The Pills effect a wonderful change in persons subject to biliousness, as they correct promptly every acerbity, relieve disorder, restore lowness of spirits, and effectually cure jaundice, dizziness, nervousness, and sick headache, which are the offspring of disease generated by an unhealthy condition of the liver.

The Kidneys—Their Derangement and Cure.

If these Pills be used according to the printed directions, and the Ointment rubbed over the region of the kidneys for at least half an hour at a time, any derangement of the kidneys will speedily be remedied, and perfect health restored. Should the sufferer, however, be far gone in disease, we would recommend that the Ointment be used in very obstinate cases, in connection with the Pills, as by this combination a speedy cure of disease generated by an unhealthy condition of the kidneys may be confidently expected.

The Pills and Ointment are sold at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment, 533, Oxford Street, London; also by nearly every respectable Vendor of Medicine throughout the Civilized World, in Boxes and Pots, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each. The smallest Box of Pills contains four doses; and the smallest Pot of Ointment one ounce.

Full printed directions are affixed to each Box and Pot, and Full printed directions in English, also in Turkish, Arabic, Armenian, Persian, or Chinese.

The Rothwell Times.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1874.

ALL who take an interest in the Imperial Government of Great Britain and Ireland, and of what shade of politics the executive is likely to consist, will have anxiously watched the daily progress of the party warfare which is being waged all over those realms. Every county, every borough, every town, is called upon to decide who will best serve the interests of his constituency, whose views most nearly represent the wishes of the majority of electors.

Feverish excitement, enthusiastic partizanship, and concerted action have marked the events of the past week, and it is right and natural that men should use their utmost exertions to obtain the alteration, abolition, or passing of measures in which they are deeply interested.

The folly of individual instead of party action has been exemplified in several contests, but in none more clearly than the one at Leeds, where the Conservatives have gained an extra seat, and the author of the disunion will doubtless be looked on with scorn and contempt by Conservatives, while the Liberals will blame him for the defeat, and the Radicals will blame him for the victory. Zechariah burn with anger that by their thoughtless, headstrong votes, they have placed two Conservatives in the Leeds seats. Let the lesson be learned by us, not only in politics but in other everyday occurrences, not to be too selfish, but to consider the feelings of others as well as our own.

Up to the present time, the Conservatives have made a nett gain of 22 seats, and appearances seem to point to a Conservative Government with a small majority, but which over party holds the reins, a very strong opposition will be arrayed against them, and so, it will be by hard fighting that measures will be got through.

Whoever may be the Premier, let us, who have so small a number of votes in the country districts, aim at obtaining that franchise which will give us the same power as the working men use in towns, and let us also not forget the unfair, unrighteous income tax, and claim such a scheme of taxation as will fall with proportionate weight on rich, middle, and poor classes of people.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

ASSAULT UPON A ROTHWELL LAD, AT OULTON AND EWS: MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.—John Haigh, a coal miner, living at Oulton Lane End, Rothwell, was charged with having on the 2nd inst., unlawfully assaulted and beaten a youth, named Johnson Hartley, the son of a sawyer, employed at the Charlesworth's, and who lives very near to him. It appeared that some ten or a dozen families occupy tenements in a yard, at the place indicated, and several of the parties in court have not for some time past, dwelt together on the most neighbourly terms. On Friday evening last, complainant and several other lads were playing at marbles, between his parents' house and that occupied by Haigh; when the latter, whose quietude was disturbed, requested them, as he had frequently done before, to go and ted them, as he had frequently done before, to go and play elsewhere. The lad cool seem impudence. whereupon Haigh became exasperated and pu-hed him away. The lad said he had seized him by the throat, until he was black in the face, and struck him, without his having given any provocation. The evidence heard was somewhat conflicting. The Chairman, addressing the complainant, after the evidence had been carefully read, said: It does not appear, to our satisfaction, that when you were spoken to by Haigh, you did use grossly filthy language or language which it was very improper for anybody to use, and especially a boy like you, when speaking to a man. We have had regard for that; but, at the same time, Haigh, you had no right to threaten, or to severely punish him, and we are of opinion that you used more violence than you need have done. Under all the circumstances, we think in the justice of the case will be met by you paying the expenses, which amount to 11s. The money was paid.

EXTRAORDINARY CHARGE OF BURGLARIOUSLY ENTERING THE METHLEY RECTORY: CLEVER CAPTURE OF THE THIEF.—A respectably-dressed young man, named Thomas Stephens, was on Wednesday, charged before the Rothwell magistrates having, on the 1st of February, burglariously entered the Methley Rectory, and feloniously stolen a gold and a silver watch-chain, and a pair of sleeve links, and £3 in money, the property of the Honorable and Rev. Philip Yorke Saville. A report of the robbery was made to Mr. Superintendent Hall, on Monday, and in consequence of that, Detective Stansfield, went to Methley to make inquiries. From what came to his knowledge suspicion fell upon the prisoner, who was formerly a page in the service of the Honorable and Rev. Mr. Saville, and who left Methley about three months ago. At an eating house, in Briggate, he apprehended him on suspicion, and charged him with having been at Methley on the Sunday night last, the 1st of February, and with entering the rectory, and stealing the articles in question, when he replied "I have not been in Methley for many a week." He searched the prisoner, and found £1 17s. 6d. in gold and silver upon him, and £2. in copper, and then took him to a bedroom, which he slept in, and was about to search the bed on which he slept, when he said, "Well in no use denying any longer, I'll tell you the truth. I did it, and I am very sorry.—you will find the things under the mattress," and there they were found concealed there. We are not prepared to go on with the case to day, and therefore shall have to apply for a remand. (To Stephens:) Have you any cause to show why you should not be remanded in custody? No sir.—Dr. Holdsworth: Then you stand remanded until Friday.—The prisoner was again brought up yesterday, and was sentenced to four months hard labour.

HIGHWAY RATE FOR METHLEY.—On Monday morning last, Mr. Joseph Charlesworth, surveyor of the highways in this town-ship, applied at the Justices' Meeting, held at the West Riding Police Court, Wakefield, for a highway rate of 10d. in the £, which is rendered necessary owing to the labour which has been expended upon the highways, and the creditable state in which they have been placed. The Chairman (Colonel Holdsworth): This is the second in the year, is it not, surveyor? Mr. Charlesworth: Yes, sir. The Chairman: I believe it is not? Mr. Lunn: Yes sir. The Chairman: Well, it is at the end of the year, and that is satisfactory. Dr. Kendall: What arrears are there? Mr. Lunn: about three or four pounds. Dr. Kendall: You have been considerably improving the Leeds and Wakefield road I know. What was the rate before that was put into its present order? Mr. Lunn: The same as at present, 10d.; and this is the first time there has been a second rate asked for, and this is at the end of the year. Dr. Kendall: Yes. I think you have done very well. The Chairman: What part of the road have you? The Surveyor: From Lofthouse to Robin Hood. Dr. Kendall: You don't extend to Robin Hood. The Surveyor: No sir, only to Robin Hood. Dr. Kendall: Your part of the road is very good now, and I must congratulate you upon it, I hope you will keep it up to the mark. The Surveyor: Thank you sir. The Chairman: We accept the precept, and Mr. Lunn thanked them, and retired.

THE LATE MURDEROUS ASSAULT UPON AN OULTON LANDLORD.—Owing to the pressure of business connected with the Parliamentary Election in Wakefield, our correspondent was last week unable to forward us a report of the trial of the men concerned in the recent dastardly attack upon Mr. George King, landlord of the New Mason's Arms, Oulton, which took place on Friday afternoon last, at the West Riding Police Court, Wakefield, before J.C., D. Charlesworth, Esq.—(chairman), Dr. Kendell, and N. Lipscombe, Esq.—It will be remembered that the particulars of the assault were given very fully recorded in The Rothwell Times of the 24th ult.—The defendants were George Ramsden, Enoch Hardcliffe, and Solomon Hardcliffe, all living at Oulton, and the charge against them was that, after drinking freely on the 9th of January, in Mr. King's house, they commenced quarrelling and work ordered to leave the premises. Instead of doing so, they rushed at King, threw him down, and kicked him so fearfully that he was for some time afterwards confined to his bed. After a short consultation, the Justices reluctantly fined each of the prisoners 40s and three months for the assault upon Stead, and ordered that they should indure a further month's imprisonment in default of paying a total fine, including costs of £2 8s or £3 2s. 8d. each, Stead and King being allowed £1 each as compensation for the injuries they had received.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

At the usual fortnightly meeting of the Local Board, held in the Board Room, on Monday last, present:—Messrs. Hepworth, Dickinson, Bumby, Clayton, Kendrew, Webster, and S. Hargreaves, Clerk. J. Charlesworth, Esq., attended.

A conversation respecting the real proprietorship of the old lock-up, which it is alleged could be put to a highways' tool house elicited considerable difference of opinion, and in order to make further enquiry, it was proposed by Mr. Bumby, seconded by Mr. Dickinson and carried unanimously: That the question be postponed till next meeting, for further enquiry as to the ownership of this lock-up. The Surveyor of Highways to be allowed to put the tools into the place in the mean time.

The Chairman said their next business was the discussion of, and decision on Tenders for levelling and surveying the Village of Rothwell, and again repeated his opinion that whatever they did, they must have a good plan, one from which anyone could work hereafter.

Our readers will remember that at the last meeting seven plans were selected from the list of 13, and the several names were duly considered, enquiry has been made respecting several of the gentlemen, and the question being put whether any member had a gentleman to propose, Mr. Kendrew said that he had made enquiries respecting Mr. Critchley's (of Wakefield) abilities, and he believed from what he had heard and seen that the gentlemen would serve us well, that he had been Borough Surveyor of Wakefield, and was now Surveyor to the Birstal Local Board. This estimate was low (£250), and he had great pleasure in proposing that the tender of Mr. W. Critchley, of Wakefield, be accepted for a survey of Rothwell, with a view to the drainage of the village, set forth in the specifications.

Mr. Bumby hoped it would be seen properly done, before the money was paid.

The Chairman having requested that the specification should be read on this particular point, the Clerk did so, and it was found that it is distinctly specified "to be finished in a workman-like manner, and to the satisfaction of the Board."

Mr. Dickinson then seconded the proposition of Mr. Kendrew.

Mr. Sanderson proposed that we accept Mr. Wheater's tender (£20); he knew he would do good man for the job, and while he wished to be as economical as possible, he did not wish to have it done partially he wished it to be thoroughly, and he hardly could be thoroughly at the price Mr. Critchley names, he had heard a very good character of the man.

Mr. Webster: Mr. Wheater is the gentleman Mr. Farrar mentioned, I think.

Mr. Bumby seconded the proposition.

Mr. Kendrew said, he dare guarantee the proper execution of the work, and referred to the great difference in the amount; Mr. Dickinson also urging the large magin of £14 between Mr. Critchley & Mr. Wheater.

A little further discussion on the question showed that a majority of the Members were for the more economical estimate, which was proved on the proposition and amendment being put to the vote, only two members voting for Mr Wheater.

Mr. Jowett said he had many complaints about stone throwing at pigeons, and thereby causing damage to windows and danger to passers-by. The Board thought it was 6 in summer, and from light to dark in winter, saturdays till 2.—Accounts to the amount of £20 were ordered to be paid.

BY ROYAL LETTER PATENT.—I much approve of your J. Hickson's Odonto Compound and Fivellating Teething Pod, Ring and Tool, for assisting Infants cutting their teeth.—JONS STEDMAN, M.R.C.S. To Mr. Hickson, Surgeon Dentist.

THROAT AFFECTIONS AND HOARSENESS.—All suffering from irritation of the throat, cough, hoarseness, or any affection of the throat, at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." These famous "Troches" are now sold by most respectable chemists in this country at 1s. 1½d. per box. People troubled with "Clergyman's sore throat," "singer's," or bronchial affections, cannot too soon try them. Their almost immediate action in giving relief, and their certain cure in severe cases, is proved by numerous Testimonials, which are published by the Proprietors, and may be seen on the Government Stamp around each box.—Manufactured by John Brown, 463 Oxford-street, London, late of 33 Southampton-street, Strand.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless, and very pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by all Medicine dealers everywhere at 2s. 9d. per bottle.—Depot, 17 Hatton-garden, New York, and at 205 Oxford-street, London.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey, falling off, thin, or falling off, use "The Medicinal Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting its growth. Sold in bottles: said spots, where the glands are not decayed. Certificate from Dr. Vermann on every bottle, with full particulars. Ask your Chemist for "The MEDICINAL HAIR RENEWER," prepared by Henry C. Gallof, 293 Oxford-street, London, and sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere.

PEARS' TRANSPARENT SOAP.—TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a pearlie pearly whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is safe and pleasant to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s. 9d. per flacon. Ask for the Liquid and in fact for the Floriline "Powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by Henry C. GALLOF, 293 Oxford-street, London.

CAUTION.—Owing to daily complaints from the public of some tradesmen, for profit sake, palming off a close imitation of my only GOLD MEDAL MARKING INK, I can only be RESPONSIBLE for that labelled as follows:—"Prepared by the Daughter of the late John Bond," 75, Southgate Road. Trade mark, "Crystal Palace." Read the labels and detect the fraud. Inventor of the Pedestal, with ink, pen, and linen-stretcher. Bottles, 6d or 1s. Phœnix ink in no way connected with this Firm.

ROTHWELL CHAPEL ANNIVERSARY.

In connexion with the Wesleyan Chapel Anniversary, two excellent Sermons were preached last Sunday, by the Rev. T. H. Whitamore, who is now being taken for the chapel Funds. On Wednesday, a public tea was provided in the School-room, which was very liberally patronized, and on Thursday, the annual meeting took place in the Chapel, at which Mr. W. Sale, of Wakefield, was advertised to preside, owing to other engagements, he was unable to do so; Mr. Batty, however, was prevailed on to take the chair, which was prized in large characters, the words "Your vote and interest." On these words he delivered a telling and interesting speech, for the vote and interest of the people, especially the young people, for his candidate, Jesus Christ. After extolling the divine excellencies of the Saviour, the speaker went on to review some of the great acts which had been passed, that of universal emancipation from the slavery of the devil, the universal salvation which gave to every man, woman, and child the power to give Christ their hearts, their votes, and other acts of the Redeemer. He believed that Christianity was leaving the world.

The Rev. Thos. Clark, of King's Lynn, referred to the improved state of things in Rothwell, since he first knew the village, and said progress seemed written on everything. As he thought of the past, he felt thankful to be seen in that Chapel, for how many of them were gone, and those who were then but children, were now nationally men and women. For God, he was filled with tumultuous feelings and found it difficult to speak. He said as they had been led in the past, he often met think of resting, but devise new schemes for the glory of God and the advancement of His cause, until every person in Rothwell was brought to the knowledge of Christ.

The Rev. E. Salt, in eulogising the speeches which he had been privileged to hear, said it somewhat was easy for fear he should spoil the excellent character of the meeting, however, he would take the advice a certain Irishman gave to a friend who rode a restive horse, "If you can't be as sly as you'd like, be as sly as you can." The words which had been running through his mind were "work, adaptation, enthusiasm. He believed there was work for everybody, and that every person had special work to do, which none but that person could fulfil, and that special adaptation is given to workers for what they have to do.

Votes of thanks were given to the speakers, to the choir, organist, and to the ladies, some amusement was also caused by Mr. Batty proposing that as they were all in such a thankful vein, the speakers should thank the audience for their kind attention, which was done amid much laughter.

This enthusiastic meeting then closed, with the benediction, the collection amounting to £5 2s. 6d.

THE ASHANTEE WAR.

Sir G. Wolseley telegraphs:—

"All the white prisoners are now in my camp.

"The King accepts the terms I offer, and has agreed to pay £700,000, as indemnity.

"The London papers regard the Ashantee war as at an end."

ELECTION NEWS

THE TWO MINERS' CANDIDATES.

At Stafford, Mr. A. Macdonald, the President of the Miners' Association, and at Morpeth, Mr. Thos. Burt, the secretary, have been elected members of the Imperial House of Parliament, being the first real working men who have obtained seats. We heartily congratulate them on their proud position, and have no doubt they will receive the same attention and respect as their more highly born fellows.

BRADFORD.—A closely contested election took place between four liberals, one (Mr. Schofield) being declared a "working man's candidate." Messrs. W. E. Forster and H. W. Ripley were at the head of the poll.

WAKEFIELD.—Two gentlemen, Mr. E. Green and Mr. R. B. Mackie, both Churchmen, are candidates for Wakefield, and on Monday last at nearly midnight Mr. Green (C), was declared elected.

LEEDS.—On Thursday, the polling for 3 members took place, and resulted in the return of Messrs. Carter, Wheelhouse, and Tennant.

CARTER (R)	15,890
WHEELHOUSE (C)	14,864
TENNANT (C)	13,192
BAINES (L)	11,850
LEES (L)	5,954

SOUTHERN DIVISION.—WEST RIDING.—The Candidates for this Division, in which our readers are mostly interested, are actively engaged in prosecuting their canvass, and we will as usual give an impartial advertising columns. The election takes place on Tuesday next.—The result will be announced by telegram to the office of this paper immediately on the poll being declared.

SOUTHERN DIVISION OF THE WEST RIDING.—The nomination took place yesterday afternoon, at the Leeds Town Hall, the candidates being Sir John Ramsden, Bart., and Mr. Lupton, Conservatives, and Mr. C. B. Denison, and Mr. J. Fielden, conservatives. The polling is fixed for the 13th inst.

MR. J. R. STANSE.—We are happy to state that Mr. Seanor, who has been in such a very critical state since last Saturday, is now getting on nicely, and trust that his large circle of friends will shortly have the pleasure of seeing him engaged in the ordinary duties of life. Special prayer was on Sunday last offered for his recovery in the chapels of the town.

The Secret Marriage.

A TALE OF MYSTERY.

"Did you keep a list of those lost?"

"We had a list of the passengers, and wechecked them off. Would you like to see it?"

"If you please."

"This is the list, sir. Those that were lost are marked with a cross."

He looked at it with a strange interest—nearly every name among them had the fatal sign. His ran" his finger down the columns till he came to the one he sought, "Mademoiselle Clare, dancer,—second cabin, berth 22." He looked up from the book with a beating heart. "This name is struck out," he said, in as careless a tone as he could assume,—"one of the lost too, I suppose?"

The clerk took down the place indicated. "Let me see," he said, reflectively. "What was the reason that lady's name was struck off? Oh, I remember," he added, "Mademoiselle Clare, dancer. I recollect the circumstance perfectly.—She didn't go!"

"You are ill, sir!" exclaimed the clerk, seeing the ashy paleness which suddenly swept over Eustace Harley's face; and springing round his desk he drew forward a chair, only just in time, for Eustace sank into it completely overpowered.

"Water! for pity's sake!" the young man asked, moving towards the door.

"Nothing that you," Eustace said, rousing himself "I am better now; I have not been very well. So the young lady didn't go? I fancy I have heard so. His self-command was recovered, but it could not bring back the colour which had fled from his face, leaving his cheeks and lips the hue of a corpse. "You are quite sure?"

"Quite."

"Might there not have been some mistake about it?"

"No, sir; I remember it very well," replied the clerk, considerably surprised at the questions which have in the doings of a professional dancer. "The young lady came to the office several times about it herself."

"Do you remember her motive for not going? I seem curious, but I know that her friends look upon her as dead."

"Strange they have made no inquiries here. The reason she gave was a very good one, for a lucrative engagement offered her in England."

"It must have been a lucrative one to enable her to forfeit a hundred and eighty guineas money," Eustace remarked, in a bitter tone.

"She did not forfeit it eventually," was the reply. "At least I believe not; she saw the manager about it, and got round them somehow. She was a very handsome woman, sir, and the speaker, with a meaning look and an unpleasant smile upon his face; "and they generally get their own way in the world."

"And you have never seen her since?"

"Never."

"Never heard of her anywhere?"

"No!"

"She may be dead," muttered Eustace to himself, grasping at the faint shadow of hope which presented itself. "If she is alive, she never would have kept silence so long."

"There was something altogether mysterious about her," the clerk went on. "A gentleman who was in here one day when she came, recognised her, and spoke to her; he called her 'Miss Morton' or 'Martin' some name like that."

"What did she say?"

"She blushed, and looked angry at first, and then she laughed, and whispered something to him, and he begged her pardon, and called her "Mademoiselle Clare," and they went off quite friendly."

"Thank you," said Eustace, rising to go, and staggering away from the counter with the groping, bewildered gait of a blind man, and striving in vain with the overwhelming dizziness which had come over him.—"Thank you, and good morning."

"Beg pardon, sir," called the clerk after him, in surprise; "you have forgotten your money."

"So I had," he replied, returning and taking the note the clerk held out. "I was so interested in our conversation, I had forgotten it."

"I have often wondered myself what became of that young lady, sir; she was so very beautiful, it was quite remarkable, so different from the general run of her profession."

"I should be glad to know, if you ever hear anything further of her, ever see her name anywhere, or hear any one speak of her."

"Certainly, sir; I shall be most happy to let you know."

Eustace scribbled an address on a morsel of paper.

"A letter will always find me here," he said, "Good morning." And bowing slightly to the clerks, he left the office.

Eustace left the place and walked quietly to his hotel, feeling as if the whole world were tottering around him. What should he do? What should he do? Should he go home and wring his mother's heart with what he had to tell, and shatter the happiness of his trusting patient Nelly with his fearful story? Should he not rather assume that which he hoped, and consider that Stella Morton was indeed lost to him? Can any one blame him if he did not raise his own hand to dash his cup of happiness from his lips? Surely no one! It always cowardly. And Eustace Harley became a guilty man from the hour he determined to conceal what he had that day learned.

"Dinner, sir?" asked the waiter, as he entered.

"Yes," he replied, shortly. "I shall require nothing, and let me know the time of the first train southwards."

"Yes, sir," replied the man, and descended to the lower regions to report, that "something had happened to Mr. 9, for that he was as white as a sheet, and was off by the first train."

"No. 9," meanwhile sat in his room up-stairs, his head bowed upon his hands, and his whole frame shivering as if with an ague fit.

"What had he done?" he have to himself, that this should come upon him. "Was not what he had endured enough, that his whole life must pay the forfeit of his youthful folly? How long he had he to live? He knew he had nothing till the waiter announced—

"Train in half an hour sir."

"Coming," he replied; "take down my portmanteau, and call a cab."

And in half an hour he was whirling towards home by the swift-going express. Half-way on the road he telegraphed to his mother, to announce his arrival—"She will be in a fearful state," he thought—so that his own carriage met him at the nearest station, (about six miles from Rothwell), and Mrs. Harley and Nelly greeted him when he stepped out of it at his own door.

"I knew how glad you'd be to see her," Mrs. Harley said, as he released her from his embrace, and turned to his bride-elect. "Now, Nelly, speak! Has she not been welcome?"

"Yes, indeed," Nelly replied, rushing to his side, and laying her head upon his shoulder. "Only I cannot help thinking that you have not met with any accident!"

"Nothing," he replied, trying to speak gaily; "the world is going on much as it did two days ago, I believe. I've been two days at sea, and I should come back all right, do you remember?" He remembered that conversation and Nelly's presentiment that he would be drowned, and it been realised! "I believe I am rather pale," he went on, seeing their anxious looks; "I was cold so this morning, but I shall soon get right."

"Pale!" said his mother; "that's hardly the word to apply to you."

"I am hungry, mother; give me some supper, and a glass of wine, and I shall be all right. Nelly here shall pour it out for me, and we'll all be happy for this one evening at least."

"This and many more, I hope," Mrs. Hartley said in surprise, casting a puzzled look upon him; "that's a strange speech for you to make to us!"

"Is it, mother? Well, I suppose I am weary and harassed; tired of waiting, perhaps; I shall be all right after one evening's rest."

They sat down to supper—the ladies each feeling in their own hearts that something was wrong, though unable to form the slightest conjecture as to the cause of the change in Eustace's demeanour; and the days flew rapidly by, and still an unaccountable something seemed to hang over him. He was unequal in spirits; easily depressed at times; at others excited, complained of oppressing headaches; and started nervously at the sound of a strange step, or the sight of an unknown face. Mrs. Harley and Nelly were frightened, and wanted him to consult Dr. Browne, which they each of them privately did, but Eustace only laughed, and said every one was subject to a few of important events, and that he should be better when the eventful day was over.

TO the ELECTORS of the SOUTH-WEST RIDING of the COUNTY of YORK.

GENTLEMEN,

Her Majesty having, by the advise of her Ministers determined to dissolve Parliament, I beg for a third time to solicit your suffrages.

I am emboldened to hope that you will again elect me to represent those Liberal opinions which alike I have in power as well as since in South Yorkshire.

My views on all the principal political measures of the day are well known to you. It will, therefore, be unnecessary for me to address you at any great length.

I trust that during the time which I purpose to remain in office, I may find the old Liberal spirit of the county revived to new action, and that I may again have the honour of supporting however inadequately, the programme so ably put before the country by Mr. Gladstone.

The Conservatives have again disturbed the representation of the Riding. In 1865 they sought to turn out your honoured Member, Sir John Ramsden, but were signally defeated by Lord Milton and myself. The present fight is not of our seeking. Mr. Stanhope and Mr. Starkey have invaded the Riding in opposition both seats, and to vindicate the independence of the Liberals, Mr. William Henry Leatham, and myself, are compelled to appear with the hearty assent of the whole party—for your confidence, and we are sure our appeal will not be made in vain.

I have the honour to be,

Gentlemen,

Your obedient Servant,

HENRY F. BEAUMONT.

Bretton Park, Jan. 29, 1874.

TO THE ELECTORS and NON-ELECTORS of the SOUTHERN DIVISON of the WEST RIDING of YORKSHIRE.

GENTLEMEN,

Her Majesty having dissolved Parliament rather unexpectedly, and two Conservative candidates being already in the field, it has been deemed that the interests of the Liberal party will be best met by compiling a candidate of Moderate Liberal principles with your old Member, H. F. Beaumont.

With some reluctance I have allowed myself to be nominated in this important contest.

I need scarcely tell you that from manhood I have been deeply interested in political questions, that I have invariably supported Liberal opinions, and endeavoured to advance the commercial religious, and social interests of the Riding and Kingdom.

For fifteen years I was connected with an important banking establishment, and became practically acquainted with the industrial and mercantile enterprise of the West Riding. For more than twenty years I had the honour of being one of the county Magistrates, for four years representative, Lord Morpeth, I would humbly endeavour to follow in his steps, for he was the example of high intelligence, of the strictest honour, kindness, great diligence, and great courtesy.

For more than twenty years I have been engaged in mercantile duties in the City of London, and have taken a personal interest in the management of Poor-law Boards, Asylums, Prisons, Assessment and Income Committees.

From 1865 to 1868 I represented my native town Huddersfield, and I am free from family reasons that I retired from that representation.

Should you be pleased to elect me for your representative I shall faithfully carry out to the best of my ability,

Having resided in the country since 1851, I have become acquainted with the landed interest, and I hope therefore I shall be better prepared to enter into any questions which may arise connected therewith come before Parliament.

Should I be sent to Parliament I shall be prepared to give Mr. Gladstone my independent support, on the ground that I believe him to be, by his consummate ability and high principle, the fittest statesman to guide the destinies of England.

I have for thirty years been a member of the Church of England, and shall prepared to see any reasonable reform carried out in Church matters, where dissentients can show that there is real ground for complaint, or reform. I am not prepared to disendow or disestablish the Church.

When in Parliament, I voted for the abolition of compulsory church rates, and had I remained in Parliament should have voted for the disestablishment of the Irish Church, as an anomaly and a grievance to the Roman Catholic population.

It is with no small regret that the Southern Division should not pass over to the Conservative Camp that I have thus unexpectedly consented to join your member, Mr. Beaumont, in this contest.

If we are united, and merge minor differences, we shall retain the Southern Division of the Riding as a tried Constituency.

Ours is the old motto, "Economy, Liberality, Progress."

I have the honour to remain, Gentlemen,

Your obedient Servant,

W. HENRY LEATHAM.

THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE for promoting the ELECTION of HENRY F. BEAUMONT, Esq., and WILLIAM HENRY LEATHAM, Esq., SIT DAILY at the Music Hall, Wakefield, where all letters and communications are requested to be addressed.

CHARLES NEWMAN, Secretary.

TO the ELECTORS of the SOUTHERN DIVISION of WEST YORKSHIRE,

GENTLEMEN,

The duties which you have entrusted to me as one of the Representatives of the Southern Division of Yorkshire, terminated by the Dissolution of Parliament after it had been summoned to assemble in the usual manner. I have, therefore, to solicit that I should express my opinion upon the political questions of the day at the various meetings which I hope to hold in the short compass of a Address.

The Prime Minister in the Budget sentences of his address, promises the consideration of the incidence of Local Taxation in connection with Imperial Finance. Without expressing any opinion upon the impression which the united action of the Conservative party has produced upon the Government, I consider that I should rejoice in the abolition of the Income Tax, I venture to doubt the expediency of a promise on the part of the Government to deal with this question at a particular tax before the time when his financial statement can be fully laid before the country.

There seems to be a few questions now remaining upon which the moderate men of either party entertain any great difference of opinion, and the impression which the united action of the Conservative party has produced upon the Government, I consider that I should rejoice in the abolition of the Income Tax, I venture to doubt the expediency of a promise on the part of the Government to deal with this question at a particular tax before the time when his financial statement can be fully laid before the country.

There seems to be a few questions now remaining upon which the moderate men of either party entertain any great difference of opinion, and it been realised! "I believe I am rather pale," he went on, seeing their anxious looks; "I was cold so this morning, but I shall soon get right."

"Pale!" said his mother; "that's hardly the word to apply to you."

"I am hungry, mother; give me some supper, and a glass of wine, and I shall be all right. Nelly here shall pour it out for me, and we'll all be happy for this one evening at least."

"This and many more, I hope," Mrs. Hartley said in surprise, casting a puzzled look upon him; "that's a strange speech for you to make to us!"

"Is it, mother? Well, I suppose I am weary and harassed; tired of waiting, perhaps; I shall be all right after one evening's rest."

They sat down to supper—the ladies each feeling in their own hearts that something was wrong, though unable to form the slightest conjecture as to the cause of the change in Eustace's demeanour; and the days flew rapidly by, and still an unaccountable something seemed to hang over him. He was unequal in spirits; easily depressed at times; at others excited, complained of oppressing headaches; and started nervously at the sound of a strange step, or the sight of an unknown face. Mrs. Harley and Nelly were frightened, and wanted him to consult Dr. Browne, which they each of them privately did, but Eustace only laughed, and said every one was subject to a few of important events, and that he should be better when the eventful day was over.

GENTLEMEN,

Having seemed good to the first Minister of the Crown to advise his Sovereign to suddenly dissolve Parliament, and a fresh election to take place, I have much pleasure in offering myself for your consideration as a candidate for the representation of this county in conjunction with my former colleague, Mr. Stanhope, and I cordially support his such request.

During the election conquest of 1868, and on numerous occasions since that time, I have had many opportunities of expressing my views on the general policy of the Liberal Party. They will not, therefore, be necessary for me here to do more than briefly refer to one or two of the more prominent questions.

Mr. Gladstone's Government has been in power for the last five years, the result of which has been to overthrow or undermine institutions previously held sacred, and to disturb the social institutions of the country, both in Church and State.

I consider that the settlement of the education question effected by a compromise between the two political parties of the State ought not to be disturbed, and that measures previously before the House of Commons for this purpose should hereafter show that some alteration is necessary. I regard religious education for the youth of the country of all ranks and classes as of the most essential necessity. An agitation is on foot the effect of which would be to deny liberty of conscience to those who are unable to pay for the education of their children. I will strongly resist all such efforts. I am decidedly opposed to the repeal of the 25th Clause of the Education Act, 1870.

With respect to local taxation, I think that some change is necessary for the removal of local burdens, which ought to be borne by the State.

With regard to Imperial taxation, I concur with Mr. Gladstone, that it is desirable to abolish the income tax, and if this can be done with safety, would gladly support its total and immediate repeal. But if it be proposed to substitute other taxes in lieu of the income tax, I can only say that the subject will require the greatest consideration, lest in removing a burden from one portion of the community we shall do a great injustice to the people at large.

Considering the varied and extensive mercantile and manufacturing interests of this great Division, it has been deemed right by the party to which I have the honour to belong, that one of its Members should be associated with commercial enterprise. Whilst far from presuming to be acquainted with all such interests, I may remind you that I have all my life been brought up, and am still connected with, one of the staple trades of the Riding; and should you do me the honour of electing me as one of your representatives, no effort shall be spared on my part to give my experience and energies to such measures as will conduce to the general prosperity of the country, and the welfare of all classes.

It will be my pleasure as well as my duty to visit most of the districts before the polling day arrives, when I can explain more at length my views on the most important questions relating to the Empire.

If returned to Parliament, I will spare no pains to represent the interests of this great and important Division of the County of York, with industry, perseverance, and fidelity.

I have the honour to be,

Gentlemen,

Your most obedient Servant,

LEWIS R. STARKEY.

OUR WATER SUPPLY.

One of the most important requisites for the health of individuals or of towns, is an abundant supply of pure, fresh water, more than dant supply of pure, fresh water, more than we ever did before, do we of Rothwell. Oulton, and Woodlesford feel the want of a good and feasible scheme for supplying ourselves with wholesome water.

Almost the first letter addressed to us dealt with this subject, and ever and anon are there tokens of discomfort and uneasiness being manifested, showing that we have to bethink ourselves, discuss the question, but to gather together, to discuss the question, and bring it to a definite issue.

As will be seen by the report of a meeting at Oulton on "The Water Supply," the Wakefield Waterworks Company have prepared a Bill, giving them power to bring water from Penistone for their own town, and also for villages surrounding, among which are Oulton and Woodlesford. The Rothwell Local Board are without power to purchase water, and might do so from Wakefield, or from Leeds. It has struck us, however, that while Rothwell is in want of a scheme for supplying its inhabitants, as are Oulton and Woodlesford, the former village has an abundant supply close at hand, which is now a source of danger and destitution. Could sister villages are almost destitute. Could not the local Board act with the Rural Sanitary Authorities of Oulton and Woodlesford, to obtain and retail the beautiful water, which is said to so plentifully in the Stourton Well, or bore. Or, if our representatives flemur from any cause, would it not be worth while to form r company of our own. Why should we be so near the very thing we require and not be so supine, so indolent as not to reach out our hands and take it. No doubt there may be some little difficulties in the way, but what then? We must have water; every year finds us in a worse condition than the former; at Woodlesford, one gentleman assured the Monday night's meeting that it would have none left in two years' time; at Oulton there is only one well, and that is priaate, we are informed; and at Rothwell, wells which have supplied people for many years have become dry; the question stares one in the face, and must be answered one way or another at once. The issue before the public is not,—Do we want water? for this is this,—will you have it from Leeds (if they can supply us, which is doubtful) ? will you buy from Wakefield, and pay for not only bringing it six miles, but also a portion of the original cost from Penistone; or will you go into it for yourselves, make a determined and honest effort to obtain a supply so close at hand, and at a price which cannot certain ly be more than the other companies would charge.

We earnestly press upon the people the necessity of immediate action. Only these three plans present themselves, and we know no doubt every thoughtful ratepayer will see the propriety of using his influence to press this all important business to the front. Let a united meeting be called, including the villages concerned—let a small committee of active men be selected to make such enquiries as are requisite, and then with facts and figures irrefragable, lay the case plainly and forcibly before those who represent us, beseeching them at once to take such steps as shall secure to us and our children, within easy reach, and at a small cost, that inestimable wealth of blessing—pure, wholesome water.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

DISPUTED RIGHT OF WAY AT OULTON; IMPORTANT DECISION.—At the Wakefield County Court, held on Tuesday last, an action was brought against Henry Wrigglesworth, a mason, residing at Oulton, for the recovery of the sum of 10s. the amount of damage alleged to have been done to a fence set up upon land, and held by Mr. Henry Hollings, of Carlton, gentleman, and by trustee of Mr. Thomas Hutchinson, deceased.

Mr. Wainwright, previous to the plaintiff making his case, remarked that the parties in court, were neighbours living from three to four miles from Oulton, and that the action had arisen from a question or right of way over a certain footway to a well. The plaintiff had put up some fencing with the view to prevent the defendant and others going to the well in question, and his object in so doing he should hold it over, and continued to use the path as before. He would now ask what right Mr. Hollings had to bring that suit? His Honor: That is what I want to know. Mr. Hollings: I am the trustee, and have been for eleven years. Mr. Wainwright: Let me see the will. Mr. Hollings: I have not brought it with me, but I can swear that the estate is still vested in me, and I am owner. Who is in possession? every remembrance. His Honor: Are you the agent of this property? Mr. Hollings: I am. Mr. Wainwright: Do you receive the rents? Mr. Hollings: I let the houses, but I do not receive the rents. His Honor: Do you keep the property in repair? Mr. Hollings: Yes, I keep it in repair, and have the power to raise the rents or otherwise whenever I may choose. His Honor: Well, that is some evidence. I think Mr. Hardie's words while objecting to the trusteeship, Mr. Wainwright: It will only cause extra expense if it will has to be proved. Mr. Wainwright: Wait a moment, please, (to witness): What is the value of this property? Plaintiff: It is worth above £1,000. Mr. Wainwright: Then I will draw your Honour's attention to the County Courts' Acts Amendment Act, 30 and 31 vict., cap. 142, sec. 11, which provides the right of appeal, and actions where the matter in dispute in any way is involved, can only be brought in County Courts, where neither the value of the lands, tenements nor hereditaments, nor the rent payable shall exceed the sum of £20 by the year. Therefore this action cannot be brought or prosecuted in this County Court. His Honor: Then this resolves itself into an action of question of right of way? Mr. Wainwright: Exactly. Defendant: His plaintiff claims a right of way, but there is no right of way. His Honor: That is just the question in dispute, but I cannot try a question of right of way. His Defendant: Then if you have come to the wrong Honour (to the plaintiff): You have come to the wrong court you know, since you have resolved it into the issue of right of way. Plaintiff: It was simply an act of ejectment, I might. Mr. Wainwright (interposing): But it is not an action of ejectment. His Honor (continuing): If it was simply a question of destroying hedges, I could try it; but if it is an action for the recovery of damages by reason of the destruction of hedges, or other property arising out of a claim of right of way, I cannot try it. You must go to a superior court, as I have no jurisdiction. The parties then left the court.

ALLEGED THREAT TO STAB WOMAN WITH A CARVING KNIFE.—After the hearing of the foregoing case Mrs. Elizabeth Anson, preferred a charge against Henry Arundel, of having brandished a carving knife in her face, and with having threatened to run it through her body. The knife (which was produced by the complainant), was a formidable weapon and blade it would have penetrated so as to cause the accused having been put into execution. Mrs. Anson sworn, and gave her version of the whole proceedings, and, after the evidence had all been gone through, the Chairman said the Bench considered the statement of Mrs. Anson altogether unreliable, and dismissed the summons.

A NOTORIOUS CHARACTER.—"THE PRYING DEMON OF ROTHWELL."—This was the character given by Sergeant Denham, to a man named Harrison Hare, who had been summoned for refusing to quit the house of Mr. William Bulmer, the Hare and Hounds Inn, a few nights since. From the evidence given by Mr. Bulmer, it would seem that the defendant intruded upon a company in his house, and was "spunging" as his termed—upon a soldier, when he (complainant) interfered, remarking, in a remonstrative humour, that such conduct was exceedingly improper. In consequence of Hare's outrageous conduct after the remonstrance, a summonor was subsequently taken out for refusing and neglecting to quit, when required. The Bench imposed a fine of 20s. and costs, in all 26s. with the alternative of one months' imprisonment with hard labour.

OLD SCHOLARS' MEETING—RUNSLET CARR SUNDAY SCHOOL.

A large and very interesting meeting of old Scholars was held in the new school-room, at Runslet Carr, on Saturday last. A large number of persons sat down to an excellent Tea, at five o'clock, when an opportunity was afforded for the renewal of old friendships, and a pleasant interchange of kindly greetings. The meeting included a goodly number of females, who, had in former years been connected with the School, as well as male adults many of whom in the latter being scattered hitherto over. After Tea, the Chair was taken by J. M. Fawcett, Esq., of Armley (one of the members of the Leeds School Board), who gave a very interesting address; he considered that those who laboured in Sabbath School had need of more to an excellent Tea, at five o'clock, when an opportunity was afforded for the renewal of old friendships, and a pleasant interchange of kindly greetings. The meeting included a goodly number of females, who, had in former years been connected with the School, as well as male adults many of whom in the latter being scattered hitherto over. After Tea, the Chair was taken by J. M. Fawcett, Esq., of Armley (one of the members of the Leeds School Board), who gave a very interesting address; he considered that those who laboured in Sabbath School had need of more patience than was generally manifested; we looked too anxiously for apparent fruit; he submitted that meetings of this kind, and classes of old scholars, like the one established here, showed that our past work had not been in vain. He could recall addresses given at the desk, in the school, which he attended when a boy, 20 or 30 years ago, and he could give many instances in which the seed sown in early youth had brought forth precious fruit in late years. The Rev. Mr. Fawcett, Esq., of Armley (one of the scholars, he remarked, generally retained a learning affection for the place where they were educated. He was glad to find such a class of old scholars established as at Runslet Carr, and it afforded him pleasure to be present at such a gathering as this. He had been examining the last syllabus of the lessons of this class and was pleased with the variety, diversity, and excellence of the subjects discussed, there was no romping after out of the way things, nor stooping to sensational, or clap trap, or attempts to catch members by excitement, but rather an indication of steady and thoughtfulness. There was a great demand for amusement, the light literature of our day had a tendency to more interest and amusement, and he instanced the establishment of the adult class under the presidency of Mr. Shaw. During the first year, the class extended to about 60 members, and the average attendance for some time of about 40. The class has since fluctuated in it extent, attendance, and interest, and during the past year the attendance has only been about 12 or 14. Some excellent Bible lessons and papers have been given in the class, qualifying the remark that the scepticism of the day, it was never in a more healthy state than at present. The members continued to have the fullest confidence in the ability, tact, and kindness of the president, whose intelligence, earnestness, and thoughtfulness, had been very conducive to interest in sustaining the class. It was self sup porting; had a useful library of 10 volumes, and had also started, and papered the old vestry in which they met, making it a very agreeable and cozy room.

Mr. S. Mann moved the adoption of the report, and said he was glad to be present at such a meeting, and at the anniversary of such a class. He had been much pleased with the interesting and able report which had been read, and also with the latter received from the teacher. Unless they had such they had certainly made its mark; and there were hopeful signs that it would supply many additions to the school, and to the church. He earnestly desired that this class might be extremely successful, morally, religiously and spiritually.

Mr. C. A. Thorp seconded the motion, and referred to some of the substantial and gratifying items referred to some of the substantial and gratifying items in the report. The establishment of this class were not in any way connected with the school to join this class, and render help to the school, but rather that each certainly made its mark; and there were hopeful signs that it would supply many additions to the school, and to the church. He earnestly desired that this class might be extremely successful, morally, religiously and spiritually.

Mr. C. A. Thorp seconded the motion, and referred to some of the substantial and gratifying items in the report. The establishment of this class were not in any way connected with the school to join this class, and render help to the school, but rather that each class, and each scholar, was needed, not only in the school proper, but also in its various auxilliaries, such as the Band of Hope, the Temperance Society, and similar institutions, which were in a flourishing condition, and afforded scope for more willing service. Before he sat down he would second the proposing the motion, said that he had received much benefit from the class. He remarked that those who learn, and remain away from the school, are like a gardener who does not try to cultivate his land, and not only let it run to waste, but permits it to run to weeds. By attending a class like this, however, the mind gets cultivated, and many a weed rooted out.

Mr. John Oldhill, one of the first teachers and superintendents of the school, over 10 years ago, next commenced the work with him in that school. For 40 years they had travelled together, hand in hand: but who was the greater sufferer, having had a paralytic stroke. He spoke on the luxury of doing good, and commended its practice to his hearers.

Rev. J. Rhodes spoke on the possibility of such endeavouring to be happy, and to make others happy. Rejoiced to see these old scholars' classes established. Religion ought to make people happy. Happiness depends upon finding our proper place, and doing the work pertaining to it.

Mr. James Kirk referred to the object of the meeting—to revive their old scholars' classes—the pleasure having been rather, apathetic, indifference, and other causes. Various subjects are studied in the class, and various methods adopted during the discussions, but they all aimed at being right at the close.

Mr. D. Shaw (the President of the class) gave a brief historical notice to join the class, there were 40 scholars studied, the nature of the dissensions, and the whole tendency of the class, socially and religiously, was to purge the moral atmosphere and to leaven with truth and righteousness the corrupt world around us, like the fertilising influence of a benefactor.

Mr. Thomas Jubb was much pleased with the good feeling from the old scholars' class. Thought that if these classes had been earlier established it would have been better both for our Sabbath Schools and the young men.

Remarks were also made by Messrs. Turner, Tetley, Hall, Hutchinson, Hutchinson, Wood, Fothergill, and Cousins.

The interest of the meeting was enchanced by the choir giving a number of choice pieces.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman brought this interesting meeting to a conclusion.

THE CONDITION OF THE MINES.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

SIR,—Will you please insert the following in your next edition:—We, the undersigned, being appointed by Sir Edward Haigh, have, according to Act of Parliament, examined the mines, and found them to be in good working order. On the 17th instant, there were 1,640,960 cubic feet per minute passing into the mines. The above divided into twenty-two parts, gives to every miner over 1,000 feet of air per minute. The returns are in the ventilating furnace. Great praise is due to Messrs. J. & J. Charlesworth's viewer and foremen, for the good condition of the Beeston Pits.

Yours respectfully,
JAMES MARSHALL.
MATTHIAS, RAMSDIN.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste. It produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and the best known remedy for Diarrhœa, Dysentery and Griping, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by all Druggists in every part of the world. It is 1s 1½d per bottle.—Manufactured in New York, and at 493 Oxford-street, London.

MESSRS. HOWARD'S FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Manitou Hair Restorer," but it will positively restore to every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of sulphur usually imparted. It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting its growth on bald places where the roots are not decayed. Sold in bottles, 3s. 6d., 6s., and 11s. each. Also their Certificate from Dr. Vermann on every bottle, with full particulars. Ask your Chemist for "THE MANITOU HAIR RENEWER," prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford-street, London, and sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere.

FLORILINE!!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "FLORILINE" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all particles of impurities, hardens the gums, prevent tartar, stops decay, gives to the Teeth a pearly whiteness, and imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. The "Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is called close to the gums, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s 6d for the liquid, and 1s per jar for the "Floriline Tooth Paste," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford-street, London.

CAUTION.—Owing to daily complaints from the public of some tradesmen, for profit sake, palming off a close imitation of my only GOLD MEDAL MARKING INK, I can only be RESPONSIBLE for that labelled as follows:—"Prepared by the Daughter of the late John Bond," 75, Southgate Road. Trade Mark, "Crystal Palace." Read the labels and detect the fraud. Inventor of the Pedestal, with ink, yeas, the fraud. Inventor of the Pedestal, with ink, yeas, and linen-stretcher. WATER SUPPLY FOR OULTON AND WOODLESFORD.

On Monday evening, a meeting of the ratepayers of Oulton and Woodlesford took place in the National School-room, Oulton, for the purpose of considering the proposal of the Wakefield Water Works Co. to supply Oulton-cum-Woodlesford in their bill. clude Oulton-cum-Woodlesford in their bill. shortly to be laid before Parliament.

There was a moderate gathering of persons interested in the question, and a deputation from the Wakefield Water Works Co. attended with Mr. Stewart, their solicitor, to explain their bill.

Mr. Douglas having been called to the chair, he requested the Chairman of the Water Works Co. to state their wishes, and the particulars of their scheme.

The Chairman of the Company then spoke to the effect, that they had already drawn their bill to enable them to bring water from Penistone for the supply of Wakefield, and that they also proposed including a number of outlying villages wanting water; the deputation there were now waiting on the various authorities in the district, in order to ascertain whether such villages would be prepared to give Wakefield the preference in obtaining it. They intended having such a quantity as would beasufficient not only for Wakefield, but for Normanton, Whitwood, Oulton, Lofthouse, and other places in the neighbourhood, having only three days' supply in reserve, and next to Glasgow, is the best water in the kingdom. What the Company wished, was, that they should be supported by the local Authorities, which were included in their bill,by means of petition or evidence. In reply to a question, Mr. Horn said, that the Rural Sanitary Authority had the power to lay rates or assess for works as the Local Boards, and that their object in view in calling this meeting, was to ascertain the feeling of the ratepayers on the question, and to ascertain if they were in favour of the water supply, and the scheme pro-posed by the Wakefield Co. The same power which in other places was vested in a Local Board, might be used by the six gua-dians representing the district, and he thought guardians thought this was a question which should be submitted to the ratepayers.

Mr. Douglas said, there was no question that we wanted water, that we wanted it cheap, and at the same time, but whether we get it from Wakefield or Leeds, depends partly on the cost.

Dr. Nowell thought any schemefor water supply should in order to include Rothwell. He would like to remind the deputation that Wakefield enjoys the unenviable notoriety of having the worst water in the kingdom, and that the Royal Commissioners have actually a memorandum written with the water—so bad is the quality. He thought Leeds would supply a much more reliable article, and also at a cheaper rate.

It was announced that the company intended to entirely abandon their present means of supply. With reference to Rothwell, they have a Local Board, which is able to act independently, and as it is largely in the Leeds district, they are likely to be supplied from Leeds, on which account the Wakefield company have not meddled with Rothwell.

Several gentlemen were very much afraid that if the meeting gave its sanction to the scheme they would thereby be committing themselves, and would be forced to take the Wakefield water, thereby shutting off their chance of getting a supply elsewhere, if they wished.

Mr. Stewart explained that they simply asked an indifferent support to the petition, not as emanating from a town's meeting like this; he also stated that while Wakefield would have the preference of supplying the water to those villages included in their bill, if they were unable to supply any village or town by such a time, and at so a low a price, and of as good a quality as any other company, then the Leeds or town would be quite at liberty to apply elsewhere.

The Chairman of the Company having stated that their object in meeting the gentlemen was now accomplished, said they would include Oulton and Woodlesford in their bill, and would present a petition to the ratepayers, which they might sign or decline.

A vote of thanks to the Deputation and to the Chairman was passed, and the meeting separated.

LECTURE ON JUDEA.

On Monday evening, J. Holmes, Esq., of Methley, delivered a most interesting lecture in the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute, on the Land of the Holy Land. Rev. G. Heberden kindly took the chair.

The lecturer was then introduced, and, after stating some particulars about the rise of the Jewish nations went, he described the many places and sights of universal interest, until they came in sight of Palestine. He stated that although called "Holy land," it was not quite so rather to be applied, so far as the people—their habits and pursuits were concerned. Dirt and squalor were everywhere seen on their persons and in their houses, while weeds and other noxious things pestered the land. Every facility was there for its being a "land flowing with milk and honey, oil, and wine," but now, according to Scripture, it is left desolate and wretched.

The lecturer exhibited various very interesting articles, purchased on his journey, also several relics of Jerusalem.

Although three hours were occupied by the lecture, no feeling of uneasiness was shown by the audience, which, though small, was deeply attentive, and seemed thoroughly to appreciate the highly instructive and entertaining narrative.

A cordial vote of thanks to Mr. Holmes and to the Chairman, brought the evening's pleasure to an end.

THROAT AFFECTIONS AND HOARSENESS.—All sufferers from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES." These famous "lozenges" are now sold by most respectable chemists in this country at 1s 1½d per box. People troubled with a hacking cough, a stiff cold, or bronchial affection can not try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious Pulmonary and Asthmatic Affections. See that the words "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" are on the Government Stamp around each box.—Manufactured by JOHN I. BROWN & SONS, Boston, United States. Depot, 493 Oxford-street, London.

MRS. GRANT'S LODGE—THE TIME DRAWING NEAR —LYING FOR REVENGE.

Andrew Grame was not what we have said, far away from Earlsford while these events were happening. He was gone on a visit to his mother—the first for two years—and made his appearance at her home looking, as the proud old woman said, "like any gentleman."

Andrew sat down by the old-fashioned fireside. Suddenly the sound of voices from the next room fell upon his ear. "What's that?" he asked.

"It's just my lodger and her friend," his mother replied.

"Ye've nae need for that, surely?" said her son, with a rather peevish voice; "I wanted you to be comfortable in yer auld years—not stiving and slaving, sell'ing bawbees."

"And so I am comfortable; and I dinna do muckle. I'll tell ye the noo how I came to tak' in the laddy bee there—for she is a leddy in her ways."

"Who is she?"

"I dinna ken; but whisht!—there's Miss Smith coming." The door of this room opened, and a tall, haggard-looking woman came out. She was stabby, almost threadbare, but scrupulously neat and clean. Her face told a painful, worn expression of a life of daily, hourly struggle with poverty, and her hands were painfully thin. She walked with ease and grace, and commanded Andrew's greeting with a finished bow. "Ye're late the nicht," said Mrs. Grame.

"I'm not wanted in the first place," was the answer. "I should have been there before this answer. "I should have been there before this answer. "I should have been there before this

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

For all Diseases affecting the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, and Bowels.

These Pills can be confidently recommended as the most simple and certain remedy for all diseases affecting the stomach, liver, and bowels. They do not distress the system, or weaken the frame, but thoroughly invigorate the digestive organs, gently excite the stomach and liver, stimulate the kidneys to perform their functions efficiently, and act upon the bowels without griping or any other annoyance.

Diseases peculiar to Women.

There is no medicine equal to Holloway's Pills for correcting irregularities peculiar to females. They very mildly but painlessly action highly recommends them to every household, as they can be taken by persons of any age or irregularity of the system. Any mother, nurse, or young person, guided by the directions given with each box of Holloway's Pills, has at once available means for checking disease, purifying the blood, and expelling from the system all gross humours.

Weakness, Languor, and Debility.

These famous Pills will immediately remove all symptoms of debility, languor, and weakness, no matter the cause, and they quickly effect an invigorating tone throughout the system, and soon restore to debilitated constitutions, and brace and strengthen the nervous system in a most wonderful manner.

Biliousness, Loss of Appetite, and Lowness of Spirits.

The Pills affect a wonderful change in persons subject to bilious attacks, and those enjoying a healthy appetite, correct indigestion, remove causes of bile, and effectually cure jaundice, bilious resistances, and all disorders of disease generated by an unhealthy condition of the liver.

The Kidneys—Their Derangement and Cure.

If these Pills be used according to the printed directions, and the Ointment rubbed over the region of the kidneys for at least half an hour at bed-time, an oath is forced into them, it will penetrate to the kidneys, and correct any derangement. Should the affection have existed for years, it is particularly recommended that the Ointment, in such cases, be used night and morning, as by its judicious application the most astounding cures may be produced.

The Pills and Ointment are sold at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment, 533, Oxford Street, London; also by nearly every respectable Vendor of Medicine throughout the Civilized World, in Boxes and Pots, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each. The smallest box of Pills contains four doses; and the smallest Pot of Ointment one ounce.

Full printed directions are affixed to each Box and Pot, and may be had in all languages, even in Turkish, Arabic, Armenian, Persian, or Chinese.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1874.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF A PRIMITIVE METHODIST CHAPEL AND SCHOOL, AT ROTHWELL.

Tuesday last was a day long anticipated and long to be remembered by the Primitive Methodists of Rothwell.

For many years, this estimable body of Christians have been working and giving for the release of their old chapel from the debt clinging to it, and, having cleared it off, manfully set to work to raise money for the erection of a building more convenient and comfortable, and more in accordance with present requirements. Four years' ago, they purchased a piece of ground nearly opposite the Mechanics' Institute, of Mr. Holmes, of Methley. Finding the land was underlaid by a thick bed of good clay, they have, during the past two years, made a large quantity of bricks, the majority of which will be used in the buildings contemplated.

On Tuesday afternoon, the friends met at the old chapel, at half-past two, and, after singing and prayer, walked in procession to the new site, where a large number of people had already assembled.

The proceedings commenced with singing, followed by prayer by the Rev J. F. Parrish, Superintendent of the Circuit. The Rev. G. Warren then read the 3rd chapter of Ezra; after which, a bottle was placed in a cavity of the stone, containing copies of the 'Leeds Mercury,' 'Rothwell Times,' 'Leeds Mercury,' bill of the proceedings, P.-M. circuit plan, bill of the trustees, contractors, Magazine, and a list of trustees, contractors, architect, &c.

Mr. William Hargreaves then stepped forward, and, before performing the principal ceremony, was presented by the Rev. J. F. Parrish (in the name of the trustees) with a neatly bound copy of the 'History of Primitive Methodism since its formation,' inscribed with a few suitable words of blessing and good wishes. After thanking the trustees for their gift, which should be handed down as an heirloom in his family, and for the honor they had done him in asking him to lay the first stone, Mr. Hargreaves proceeded to put on the mortar, and on the stone being lowered into its place, with the customary taps with the mallet, declared the stone duly laid, "in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost," a hearty clap following the announcement. Mr. Hargreaves then laid on the stone £20, being his own donation, on the stone £20, being his own donation, and the second subscription of Messrs. Charlesworth (who have liberally contributed the amount of £35 towards the Building Fund). Mr. Hargreaves then spoke as follows:—

FRIENDS,—I have to-day laid a Foundation Stone, for a new Primitive Methodist Chapel, which I hope will prove a great blessing to the district, both as an improvement to the rising generation, both mentally and spiritually. I sincerely trust it will (through providence) be finished without injury to limb, or loss of limbed life, and likewise that it will sustain no injury from storms or tempest. It would be a great pleasure to me when the building is finished, to see it opened, free from debt or nearly so. The Primitives, I may say from my own experience, are a people that readily seek out those who do not attend any place of worship, and earnestly solicit them to attend their place of worship, and have a certain way of doing much good. The leading men of this Chapel have striven hard for a many years, to free the building first from debt, and have succeeded in doing so, and I say all honour to such men, and we, as a village, ought to feel honour to such men, and we, as a village, ought to feel proud of such men. I believe there are many friends here, who would like to lay a few bricks, in commemoration of the event. I must say that this is a red letter day in my life, and a great honour, and one I shall ever look upon with pleasure. I sincerely trust that I hardly ever feel more pleased than I do at present before the assembly leave the ground, I trust that every one will give his mite, what he or she can afford. I now will give way for the friends present, who are wishful to lay a few bricks.

Presents were then invited to lay bricks, which realized, with £5 from Mr. J. Tempest, of Hunslet, nearly £30, there being 55 gifts.

The Rev. J. Jobling, of Silsden, next addressed the people, urging them to keep up the character for earnest prayer, to which he attributed their success hitherto, and likewise relating the distinctive doctrines of Christianity which he assured them would be preached here in their purity.

Mr. Parrish then moved and Mr. Jobling seconded a cordial vote of thanks to Mr. Hargreaves for his kindness in laying the stone, which was heartily carried.

We understand that the premises are to be built of brick, the chapel being faced with pressed bricks, and ornamented with white and black bricks, and fine stone; it is expected to seat about 500 persons.

The cost of the entire building is estimated at £1,800, towards which, with Tuesday's effort, they have £200 in cash, about £300 worth of bricks, and the old chapel (now sold to Messrs. Scanor and Sons, builders' manufacturers, for £300). The contractors are Messrs. Chapman and Sons, builders; Mr. Lockwood, joiner; Mr. Walter Stocks, Leeds, plumbing and gas work. The architect is Mr. Howdill, of Leeds.

At half-past four, tea was provided in the Mechanics' Institute, at which about 600 persons sat down. The public meeting took place in the same room, there being a large attendance. After singing and prayer, the Rev. J. F. Parrish briefly introduced Mr. Ralph Thompson, of Carlton, who occupied the chair.

Mr. Thompson said he was very glad to be amongst them, though he felt somewhat out of place; he was happy to be able to say a few words, and to promote God's glory in any way he could.

Rev. G. Warren was happy to see their undertaking taken up so heartily, and he was sure they required a more commodious one. Referring to the progress of Christianity in the world, he discerned a providential hand in all the various movements of men, and of dynasties reigning its growth from the early times. Taking his stand on history, he felt sure that still it would increase more and more in the future. As a denomination, they had multiplied most quickly and largely of any other section, and he now called on those whom he addressed, to continue in their efforts; the fathers have gone to their rest, and they call on us to follow them.

Mr. Tempest referred to former scenes in the old chapel, and was thankful for the very great improvement in their circumstances and position. He was glad that education had been spread over the land, and said the time was soon coming when they would have no need to teach their scholars to read, but would have nothing to do in their Sunday Schools but to devote their whole energies to the teaching of religion.

Mr. Webster thought to-night's meeting was grand. He remembered the time when the Primitives used to meet in Leeds in Sally Taylor's cellar in Kirkgate, but things were very different now. Much amusement was caused by his ludicrous tales of the old-fashioned 'Ranter' preachers. He contended that Methodist ley agency had done more to elevate the people than anything else.

Rev. J. Jobling, of Silsden, was quite surprised to see such a meeting, and has been highly pleased with the day's proceedings. He had always found a few earnest men at Rothwell, and he assured the audience that where earnest people were found, there was sure to be progress. He gave several striking incidents from his own experience, which showed that the world was noticing them, and that where earnestness and uprightness were manifested, the world saw it, and remembered it, and help came when most wanted, but from sources least expected. He urged them to go straight forward, to be upright in character, to do justly, love mercy, and to walk humbly with their God.

A collection was then made; after which, a balance sheet of the year's accounts was read by Mr. Jesse Gibson, showing a balance in the treasurer's hands of £60 2s. 0d.

Rev. J. F. Parrish announced that their day's receipts were as follows:

Laid on stone by Mr. Hargreaves	20	0	0
Mr. J. Tempest	5	0	0
55 Bricks laying	25	0	8
Collection on the ground	6	9	8
Trays given	34	13	11
Profit of tea	13	0	0
Collection at meeting	6	3	0

Being a total for the day of £110 5 9½

He should very much like to have another day like that, in about three months' time, when the building was nearly out of the ground, and would like to get four ladies or gentlemen to lay corner stones with £5 or £10 each upon them, and have another tea and meeting like the present. He had put a proposition by moving a vote of thanks to the ladies who had presided at the tea, to those who had given trays, and to all who had interested themselves in the tea.

Mr. Jas. Batty, who had witnessed many blessed scenes in the old chapel, and trusted they would be greatly blessed in the new building, seconded the motion, which, on being put, was cheerfully carried.

Mr. W. Lunn, in a speech brimful of humour and ludicrousness, but at the same time carrying a true meaning, proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman, and to the speakers. He said he would also like to say a word about Mr. Hargreaves, who not only gave them a donation, but had also used his influence with Messrs. Charlesworth.

Mr. Jonathan Bramley seconded the motion, and said he felt thankful that the chapel they were about to erect was for the service of God only, and that it could never be used for any secular purpose. Let them still go on, and God would reward them.

The motion having been carried, the doxology was sung, and the benediction pronounced.

OUR WATER SUPPLY.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

SIR,—Permit me to give a few of the many reasons which led me to urge the meeting of the 9th instant to decline "adopting a petition in favour of the Wakefield Waterworks' Company" and "supplying evidence to support it;" I believed, and said, that our doing so, would practically commit us to their scheme; that if they got their Bill which they have now in Parliament of three years it would almost surely be six or more before we should be supplied, and that their present supply gave them an unenviable notoriety. What I believed, and said at that meeting, I believe and say more emphatically now. The lack of water—I mean good, potable water, is, and has been for some time, matter for anxious and urgent consideration, and it is with the hope of helping to a solution of the difficulty that I write.

It is one of the functions of a Sanitary Authority, and a most important function, in respect to the health of the inhabitants, to provide an adequate supply of pure and wholesome water, and for this purpose such Authority may combine with one or more adjoining Authorities; may acquire land, (either within or without the district) by agreement or lease, or take it compulsorily (by provisional order, or private Act of Parliament) or construct water-works, or finally, may contract with existing water companies, for a supply.

In water, as such, there can be no property; it must, however, be borne in mind, that with respect to any powers, to be exercised by a Sanitary Authority in obtaining water, there exists a great difference between water flowing in a recognized stream, and that which is merely on the surface, or contained in underground channels. In the first case, if any would-be purchaser by diligence, will find water with the stream, the riparian owners below would have to be compensated—a grave liability, which would not be involved in the latter case, although the underground water, by being diverted, might dry up a stream course in which the water previously flowed.

Trusting that this communication (which I am obliged to end abruptly) may contribute to a practical understanding of the subject, I would join you in the suggestion, that the ratepayers of Rothwell, and Oulton and Woodlesford, meet and consider the question in all its aspects, decide on the best means to a consummation of their wishes, and communicate thereon to the Sanitary Authority, who, I feel sure, will be only too glad of such co-operation, in this most important matter.

I am, Sir,
Yours, &c.
JAMES NOWELL.

Woodlesford, Feb. 19th, 1874.

Deaths.

BURTON.—On Wednesday, the 18th, Thomas Burton, of Rothwell, aged 72 years.

BROWN.—On Thursday, the 19th, the wife of John Brown, Esq., Spring Head, Rothwell.

ELLIS.—On Tuesday, the 17th, Walter Ellis, aged 5 years and 10 months; also Emma Ellis, aged 2 years.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—At the present time much watchfulness and care are required. A cough or cold, if not at all health immediately checked, or a slight illness may result in a serious malady. Influenza and sore throat, bronchitis, pleurisy, and all other pulmonary affections will be greatly relieved by rubbing this soothing Ointment into the skin as nearly as practicable to the seat of mischief. This treatment, at once simple and effective, is highly recommended for the removal of coughs disordered by infancy and youth. Old asthmatic invalids will derive marvellous ease from the use of Holloway's Ointment, and a trial will reveal many such sufferers, and re-established health after every other means had signally failed.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use Mrs. Hunter's Restorative, for it will positively do it. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" for it will positively restore in a few days grey or white hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers" in use. It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed, but fortifies it from decay. Dr. Versmann on every bottle, with full particulars. Ask your Chemist for "The Mexican Hair Renewer," prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford-street, London, and sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere.

FLORILINE.—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on the tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the Teeth a peculiar pearly whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is decidedly cool in effect, and therefore highly beneficial to the taste, and the greatest luxury to the mouth in the age. Price 2s 6d for the liquid, and 1s per jar for the Floriline "Powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford-street, London.

CAUTION.—Owing to daily complaints from the public of some tradesmen, for profit sake, palming off a close imitation of my only GOLD MEDAL MARKING INK, I can only refer the public to the Bills delivered as follows:—Prepared by the Daughter of the late John Bond," 75, Southgate Road. Trade mark, "Crystal Palace." Read the labels and detect the fraud. Inventor of the Pedestal, with ink, pens, and linen-stretcher. Bottles, 6d or 1s. Phœnix ink in no way connected with this Firm

LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

On Monday last, the usual fortnightly Meeting of the Rothwell Local Board, took place in the Board-room. Present:—Messrs. W. Hargreaves, Jas. Dixon, Dickenson, Clayton, Bumby, Kendrew, and Webster; S. Hargreaves, clerk.

Mr. Charlesworth being from home, it was proposed by Mr. Stocks, and seconded by Mr. Hargreaves:—That Mr. Kendrew take the chair this evening.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. Critchley, (whose tender for surveying and levelling Rothwell Haigh was accepted at last meeting,) had a short interview with the Board.

He stated that he saw no difficulty whatever, by the casual glance he had taken, in draining and sewering Rothwell; the only question was the outfall. The subject of carrying the sewerage into the beck, would certainly be objected to by Mr. Calverley, but if, (as was hinted at a former meeting), two or three large tanks were made and the sewerage passed, there would be nothing objectionable in the liquid which might then overflow into the beck, the residuum being used for manure.

Also stated that the sewerage in the air acting on the matter would largely diminish anything objectionable. On account of the state of the weather and also of the gardens, he thought the sooner they began surveying the better.

It was arranged, that Mr. Critchley shall write to the clerk, stating when he can come over to make arrangements, and that a small committee be appointed to meet him. The committee to be signated at the next Board Meeting.

Mr. Critchley then left the room.

Mr. Hargreaves said it was most important that the outfall should be decided on; we must not be under a single level till we know where the outfall is to be.

Mr. Dickenson thought they ought to have asked Mr. Calverley first of all, and got his feeling about the matter; here we are talking about drainage and sewerage, and don't know where it is to be taken to.

The Whitehall Field had been mentioned as a suitable place for filtering sewage, and also a field near Mr. Brown's, on the opposite side.

Mr. Hargreaves thought no objection could be raised to their turning the liquid into the beck, if they provided that no privies be emptied into the drain to foul the stream.

It was resolved on the motion of Mr. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Clayton:—That Messrs. Charlesworth, Dickenson, and Kendrew, form a deputation to meet Mr. Critchley, and that they also wait on Mr. Farrer, to advise with him on the above question of outfall; also that the above committe if unable to agree with Mr. Farrer, have power to see Mr. Moore, about his field.

Resolved and carried.

Mr. Dickenson thought the clerk had better write to Mr. Farrer, asking when he could meet the deputation.

The clerk will write accordingly.

The Bye-laws having now laid at the Board-room the requisite length of time, and no objections made as to lying in "The Rothwell Times," will be forwarded to London for final sanction.

The Collector's statement was as follows:—

DISTRICT RATE.

Arrears last month	2	0	0½

To collect -	£0	10	10½

Among the accounts to be paid, was one for £99 10s. 6d., for November and December. Great dissatisfaction was expressed that no invoices or check-notes had been received, although the clerk had checked the weights by the Thwaite Gate weighs, it was considered highly unsatisfactory that such an amount should run on without Mr. Wilby's receiving any account or notes. The clerk has made arrangements to have it all weighed at one of Messrs. Charlesworth's weighs for the future.

It was eventually unanimously resolved on the motion of Mr. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Clayton:—That M. Dickenson, (treasurer,) require every person sending any goods whatever for Board purposes, also to forward an invoice of the same.

Mr. Hargreaves wished to know how it was nothing appeared to be done about paying Bell Hill.

Mr. Dickenson, owing to the elections, had not seen further about it, except that the stone was ordered.

It was therefore proposed by Mr. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Bumby:—That Mr. Dickenson and the clerk ascertain the rates of carriage, and arrange for the much required repairs of Bell Hill at once.

Mr. Dickenson stated he had also had an offer from a person to do the paving at 6½d. per yard, but as the Board thought that was too much to pay, the tenders ought to be sent in, the subject dropped.

Respecting the lock-up, Mr. Bumby had seen Mr. Smith, the overseer, who would let it to the Board for 10s. a year; but as several members were not satisfied that it would be to the poor, the question was again shelved.

Accounts to the amount of £120, were ordered to be paid.

Bryant and May beg to direct special attention to their New Oval Pocket Packet of Vestas, which are entirely free from all Rough Edges and Sharp Corners, and admitted by every one to be the Best and Cheapest Packet Box ever yet published everywhere at One Penny. BY ROYAL LETTER PATENT.—I much admire pictures of your J. Hickinson's Odonto Corrugator and Fretfishing Teething Pad, Ring and Tool, for assisting Infants cutting their teeth.—JOHN STEDMAN, M.R.C.S. To Mrs. Hickinson.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? If so, go immediately to a chemist and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless, and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s 1½d per bottle.—Manufactured by Barclay & Sons, 95, Farringdon-street, London.

THROAT AFFECTIONS AND HOARSENESS.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and bronchia will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." These famous "lozenges" are now sold by most respectable chemists in this country at 1s 1½d per box. People troubled with a hacking cough, a "slight cold," or bronchial affections, cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious Pulmonary and Asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government Stamp around each box.—Manufactured by JOHN I. BROWN & SONS, Boston, United States. Depôt, 493 Oxford-street, London.

The Secret Marriage:

A TALE OF MYSTERY.

"You are a good man, Mr. Grame," she said. "If I had a mother like yours, I might have been a good woman; might have felt as you feel, and not been lying there cursed, and without a friend to have a sigh, or shed a tear, when the earth falls into my fresh-made grave!"

She covered her face with her poor thin hands, and sobbed aloud.

"Take comfort," Andrew said. "It might have been worse; no might have been dying as many did, as, many thousands, without home or friend, but with a roof (accent on the roof) over that, and thank God for what you have, and dinna reproach Heaven with what you have not."

"I might have been better off but for my own folly. Shall I tell you my story? I have one. I am an honest, good man's wife, Andrew Grame!"

"A wife!"

"A wife. A gentleman's wife, though that adds nothing to a man's worth. I will tell you my history; 'tis not long, and it is short.

"If you have any thought of injuring any one 'twad cease your heart mair to forget that. Oh, lassie, stay your hand if it is not too late!"

"It is too late," shook his a grave tone. "What I have done I cannot undo now. The wrong I did was preventing the completion of crime, after all," she continued, as if speaking to herself. "Only staying the hand of justice. What would the world say to a felon's dock, and bring him face to face with offended justice."

"Then your husband lives?"

"My husband lives and thrives, while I lie here dying, starving, and without a friend. I have heard he thinks me dead—drowned; that he buried some one in my place! ha! ha! It will be joyful news to him to find his wife is living. Living for her revenge, for her husband! ha! ha!"

She sank back, laughing hysterically, and Andrew rose in alarm.

"Do not go!" she said, raising herself; "do not leave me to my own sad thoughts. I like the presence of a good man or woman near me; and I believe you and your mother are good, Mr. Grame."

"If you would see a minister——" Andrew began.

"A minister!" she said, bitterly. Yes, to come and call me his 'fellow-sinner,' and to thank Heaven on his own part that he was not as other men are, and to pray for me as if I alone were sinful, and all the rest of the world holy; and to expect me to undo in a few short hours the work of a sinful life! No, no; if there is mercy for such as I—if there is a Heaven that hears, and a God that pardons, I'll seek it for myself; but not to-day, not to-day."

"Hi!" said Andrew, the tears standing his eyes; "don't say that word! There can be no 'if' in the matter of salvation! Don't doubt, whatever ye do."

She held out her hand to him with a sudden revulsion of feeling.

"I like to talk to you," she said. "I do not feel so wicked when you are near. You look good in your way, and when you have heard my story, you will not wonder at my unbelief."

CHAPTER XVIII.

A STRANGE HISTORY RECOUNTED—THE PORTRAIT IDENTIFIED — THE SUDDEN DEPARTURE — THE STRANGE MEN AT EARLECOURT.

There is no need to repeat all the details of the history that Andrew Grame listened to, as he sat beside the fire invalid. It was the old, old story which many a bright and worshipped heroine of the stage could tell:—of a neglected babyhood,—of a childhood passed in the world behind the scenes of a theatre,—of beautiful and cherished girlhood, cared for and pampered, because that same beauty was a marketable commodity, and worth its price,—of a premature and premature womanhood, precocious and premature womanhood, precocious and early training of every sense of right and wrong was dulled and blunted,—of years of vice and dissipation, terrible, because they were so young, till she stood on the history of her marriage.

"He thought me good and pure," she said, bitterly; "such a woman as he could take by the hand and lead to his mother's feet and say, 'Mother give my wife your blessing!' Was it for me to undeceive him? Could you have had me to say, 'I am not what you think me?' I loved him for his wealth, the existence of which I discovered; how, it matters not. I thought of the position I should hold in society as his bride, and I turned from my other suitors, for I knew the wealthy as many a poor girl does, only to be married to a man I loved. I deserved my fate, I know; but I vowed some day to have my revenge upon the cheating. My revenge is terrible, because that same beauty was a remitted me a sum sufficient for all my wants; sufficient to keep me in comfort, and I did think that I should never trouble him. I promised, but I broke my word.

"He sought him?" said Andrew. "Ye shouldna have done that; ye should have left him to seek you, if the fault and the sin lay on your side."

"I could not remain so near the place where my husband lived, went to look at the outside of the house whose mistress I was to have been; only to see it, nothing more; for I would have died ere I would have crossed his threshold unasked. I was overtaken by a terrible illness, and carried in insensible. My husband came and stood by my side, as I lay among his servants, and did not think that his wife would be better accommodation than the servants' hall. Had he ordered his menials to stop their jeering remarks, and offered me a bite or a sup of drink, I had gone my way and troubled him no more; but he hooted me with the rest, and I thenk openly that was his opinion that I was a bad, worthless woman

RUPTURES!!
THE AMERICAN TRUSS IS SUPERSEDING ALL THE OLD KINDS OF TRUSS NOW IN USE. —The Truss has obtained the approval and recommendation of the leading surgeons, and is adopted by the authorities of hospitals and medical institutions.
The American Truss possesses the following peculiar advantages: simplicity & lightness of weight. It affords a perfect support, and allows the various motions and positions of the body to take place with ease and precision. It does not cause pain or irritation by unequal pressure, neither has it any moral springs or pivots to rust and get out of repair. The Truss can be worn during any exercise or at night, and is equally applicable for adults of both sexes and for children.
The prices are arranged on the lowest possible scale The Truss can be forwarded by post on receipt of the size round the body, and Post Office Order payable at Brighton, to WEST & LONG, Surgical Instrument Makers, 19, Middle street, Brighton, from whom only the Truss can be obtained.
A Descriptive Pamphlet, 9 stamps.
Single Truss..... 7s. 9s. 12s.)
Double Truss..... 14s. 16s. 21s.) Postage.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.
Bronchitis, Diphtheria, Coughs, Colds, and all Derangements of the Throat and Chest.
In any of the above diseases, immediate and permanent relief is obtained by carefully rubbing this detergent Ointment twice aday upon the neck, chest, and back, and in all stages of influenza, settled colds, coughs, wheezing at the chest, the same treatment may be followed with efficiency and safety.
Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Sores, Wounds, and Ulcers.
By rubbing this Ointment well into the open and around the affected parts, as well as taking it internally, all running sores, however inveterate, the pain becomes less intolerable, the discharge will be wonderfully reduced, and in a long standing case, Holloway's Pills should also be taken, as they greatly assist in purifying all deleterious humours from the body.
Skin Diseases of all kinds.
In this class of complaints, no matter the age, the sex the place, or under what name the disease may be classified, immediate ease, and ultimate cure, may with certainty be procured, if this Ointment be plentifully rubbed upon the part affected, while Holloway's Pills are taken in appropriate doses night and morning, to purify the blood.
Gout, Rheumatism, and Glandular Swellings.
Every one sufferer from these excruciating complaints should have recourse to the purifying remedies, as they have rescued thousands from a long career of torture, after all other means had failed to give them relief. This Ointment and Pills used conjointly will soon completely and certainly, as to effect cures in the most hopeless cases.
Piles, Fistulas, and Internal Inflammations.
Persons afflicted with these distressing complaints will find in this wonderful Ointment instant means of relief, and all can effect their own cure without explaining their infirmity to anyone. Holloway's Pills, if taken in small doses, greatly assist the Ointment, as they purify the blood and regulate the stomach in an extraordinary manner.
The Ointment and Pills are sold at Professor Holloway's Establishment, 533, Oxford Street, London; also by nearly every respectable Vendor of Medicine throughout the Civilized World, in Pots and Boxes, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each. The smallest Pot of Ointment contains one ounce; and the smallest Box of Pills four dozen.
Full printed directions are affixed to each Pot and Box, and can be had in any language, even in Turkish, Arabic, Armenian, Persian, or Chinese.

THE WATER QUESTION.

We are very glad to hear on all sides that this important and not very difficult subject is being thought about and talked about, and better still, that inquiries are being made by gentlemen in Rothwell, Oulton, and Woodlesford, for the purpose of preparing a sound scheme or schemes to supply ourselves with water.

We shall be most happy by any and every means in our power to assist in obtaining and carrying out any plan for this most desirable object.

GREAT BATTLES WITH THE ASHANTEES.

OFFICIAL DESPATCH FROM SIR GARNET WOLSELEY.

"Coomassie, February 6th.

"Reached this place yesterday, after five days hard fighting. Troops behaved admirably.

"Officers killed—Captain Buckle, R.E.; Captain Nicol, Haunts Militia; Lieutenant Eyre, 19th Foot.

"All other casualties under 300.

"King has left the town, but is close by, and says he will pay me a visit to-day to sign a treaty of peace.

"I hope to commence my march to coast to-morrow.

"Wounded doing well.

"Health generally good.

"Despatches follow by special fast steamer."

The Admiralty received early on Thursday morning, a confirmatory telegram of the capture of Coomassie from Commander Hewett. It is dated Coomassie, 6th inst. The casualties were about 300 killed and wounded. Seven officers of the naval brigade were wounded.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

An Inebriated Pit Sinker at Rothwell.—The following was the only police case which could come before the Justices of the West-Riding, at the Wakefield police court, until Friday morning. Mr. R. B. Mackie was the magistrate, the prisoner being a Welshman, named Edward Rowlands, a pit sinker, living at Rothwell Haigh, who was found by Police Sergeant Denham, lying in a drunken sleep on the footpath, in Church Fields, Rothwell, about twelve o'clock, on Tuesday night. Upon being aroused, he commenced a most violent and foul-mouthed tirade of abuse, accused the Sergeant with having stolen his watch, and levelled a blow at him, which fortunately missed its mark. Upon refusing to give his name he was secured, and removed to the lock-up. The magistrate imposed a fine of 5s. and costs, amounting in all to 15s. 1d., which was paid.

Allegation of Perjury against the Oulton Estate Gamekeepers.—At the West Riding Police-court, yesterday afternoon, an application was made by Mr. Wainwright, solicitor, on behalf of a body of colliers, recently fined for game trespass, on Lord Mexboro's estate at Woodlesford, against Simon Peet, and Jesse Rider, head gamekeeper and under gamekeeper to Mr. Edward Calverley, of Oulton Hall, for having, on the occasion of their recent appearance before the justices, charged their convictions with having committed wilful and deliberate perjury.—The application had been previously made, and adjourned from time to time.—The Bench decided that a summons should be issued against the gamekeepers, but advised that Mr. Wainwright should communicate with Mr. Gill, who had been retained for the defence, and that the case shall be heard before Major Barker and Mr. J. C. D. Charlesworth, upon the return of that gentleman from London, next week.

A Domestic Fracas at Methley.—Sarah Amos, a woman living at Methley, was yesterday charged with having stolen a silver watch, a silver guard, and a suit of clothes, the property of Edwin Haigh, with whom she lived. It appeared that the parties had lived together for some years pretty amicably, but that, upon a disagreement, the woman made off during Hughes's absence, carrying the articles in question away from the house. The goods were valued at £9 10s. A warrant was issued, and the Prisoner was taken at Hanley, in Staffordshire. Upon the parties expressing their desire to forgive each other, and live together again, promising that they would not fall out again, the Bench dismissed the prisoner, upon payment by Hughes of the sum of £2 8s. 1d. the expence incurred, and the parties left the court together.

Assault at Carlton Feast on Shrove-Tuesday.—Moses Birkill, a miner living at Carlton, was yesterday fined 28s. by the Justices, for having, on the 17th instant, assaulted and beaten a nother miner, of the same place, named James Lunn. It appeared that offence had been given by the complainant spreading a report to the effect that the defendant, a married man, had taken another woman to the Leeds Pantomime.

The Tichborne Verdict.

The Hour says it would seem probable, if the necessity should arise, that the Tichborne jury will be kept together in a neighbouring hotel until they are ready to deliver their verdict. It would be most unfortunate if a verdict should fail to be returned for want of sufficient consultation amongst the jury.

On Monday evening, a public tea was held in the United Methodist Free Church School-room, Methley, after which a grand concert was given in the chapel by an efficient band and chorus. Mr. J. Morton, Castleford, was the leader, Mr. G. Atkinson of Methley, the conductor. The concert was given in two parts, the first one consisting of selections from the sacred sorgster, given by the teachers, scholars, and their friends, the second part were selections from the "Messiah," by the band and chorus. The tea and concert were largely patronised, the proceeds of which were for the purpose of purchasing a new organ.

Singular Gun Accident At Wakefield.—On Monday morning, an accident happened to Mr. John Shepley Ash, of the firm of Ash Brothers, maltsters, Agbrigg Kilns, near Wakefield. In discharging the trial powder, some of the powder ignited, and the gun violently struck the right side of Mr Ash's face. The barrel struck him between the temple and the jaw bones, cutting and bruising his cheek, breaking a tooth, injuring the right eye, and rendering him unconscious for a short time. Mr B. Kemp, surgeon, was at once called in, and under his care Mr Ash is progressing favourably.

Reduction in the Price of Coal.—The Ayrshire coal owners on Wednesday reduced coals 1s per ton. A reduction in the colliers' wages is anticipated. This, it is said, will be resisted.

WAKEFIELD INTERMEDIATE SESSIONS.

These sessions were opened on Monday, at the Court-House, Wakefield. Mr. J. Beswick Greenwood, presided, and there were also present the following magistrates:—Colonel Pollard, Mr. W. H. Leatham, Lord Houghton, Dr. Kendall, Mr. G. H. Westerman, Mr. W. Carr, Mr. J. Kaye, Mr. S. G. Leatham, and Mr. Percy Tew.

After the Chairman had addressed the Grand Jury, the trial of prisoners proceeded with, Colonel Pollard presiding in the second court.

Anthony Hopkins, 26, mason, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the shop of Mr. Wm. Lockwood, and stealing thirteen gold lockets, five gold brooches, gold studs, gold pins, gold watch chains, necklets, and other articles, of the value of £1,100, his property, at Hemsworth, on the 11th February, 1874. The Chairman read a long list of previous convictions recorded against the prisoner, and showing that he was confirmed thief. Under these circumstances the Chairman was assured that the court would not be doing its duty if it did not impose the full punishment in their power—14 years' penal servitude, with seven years' police surveillance at the expiration of the 14 years. The Chairman highly complimented Mr. Withers on the clever manner in which the burglar had been discovered, and awarded him the sum of £2 as a token of their appreciation.

On Wednesday, the remaining three cases were tried. John Calvert, who had been out on bail, and was indicted for feloniously embezzling the sum of 9d., the property of the Midland Railway Company at Bradford. The prisoner was employed as foreman carriage cleaner, and occasionally acted as ticket collector. On the 24th January, it was alleged, he collected tickets from the passengers going by express train to Leeds, retained possession of one, and sold it for 9d. to a young lady named Miss Caroline King. The jury found the prisoner guilty of the offence, and he was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment.

In the other court, a middle-aged man named Walter Hirst, a glass bottle waiter, was found guilty of stealing two glass spittoons, two glass butter dishes, and some other articles of small value, the property of Mr. Thomas Ainsworth, Ainsworth and others, trading under the firm of the Castleford Glass Bottle Company (Limited), at Castleford. The jury strongly recommended the prisoner to mercy, and the Chairman ordered him to be imprisoned until the rising of the court.

In the next and last case, Isaac Town, coal miner, was found guilty of attempting to defraud a fellow workman of a certain "Dummies," and the jury were represented for coal, got in the Topcliffe and Colliery, at West Ardsley, belonging to the West Yorkshire Iron and Coal Company. The Chairman sentenced him to three months' imprisonment.

Deaths.

Hardwater—Aged 59, Mr. Joseph Hargreaves, colliery manager, Rothwell Haigh.

MR. MACDONALD, M.P., AT GLASGOW.

A special conference of Scotch miners' delegates was held in Glasgow on Thursday. The reports from the several districts indicated that a material reduction of the scale of wages was being attempted, and it was stated that the miners in different parts had come out on strike rather than submit to the proposed reduction of 1s. a day.—Mr. Macdonald, M.P., for Stafford, said they should look fairly at the announcement pretty generally made of difficulties between masters and men. These difficulties were to some extent due to the state of the market, and one circumstance accounting for them was that the high wages had attracted a large body of men into the trade. The high value of material had also seriously hindered the increase of consumption, and the expansion of the trade in a variety of directions. They should also, in considering the present position of matters, remember that it prevailed on the Continent as well as in England and Scotland. At the present time, too, there was undoubtedly an appreciable reluctance on the part of buyers to purchase, in the belief that better terms would soon be current. The miners, however, should direct their attention to and keep a careful watch over the production, in relation to the demand which existed. In doing so, they would only be acting as the rest of the community did, and although this decision might create considerable excitement, that should not deter them. Extravagantly high prices were not advantageous to the community, and he believed they to a large extent contracted demand; but there was a difference between high prices where men and employers could live and have large returns, and low prices, by which neither employers nor men could live.

Holloway's Pills.—Hale Constitutions.—The expectancy of life is greatly increased when the human frame has become debilitated from the effects of exposure, excesses or neglect, these Pills taken according to the directions will repair the mischief. Holloway's Pills exercise the most wonderful tonic properties in all cases where the digestive organs are weakened, and the circulation is rendered languid and unsteady. They improve the appetite, strengthen the digestion, regulate the liver, and act as gentle aperients. The Pills are suited to all ages and all habits. A Patient writes: "Your Pills to be valued, require only to be known. During many years I sought a remedy in vain, was daily becoming weaker, but when I had taken Holloway's had recourse to them, they soon restored me."

Stanzas

"And these are Dawson's glasses, these
Which he so often handled who gazed
On crowds, whom none better please,
Of worshippers amazed.

Aids, honoured aids, I'll deem them hence,
To one who had no peer
In powerful pulpit eloquence,
The sender or servers.

For tears, in torrents, he could draw
From nature's founts at will;
And terribly on Heaven's law
His fame-toned notes could thrill.

On man redeemed from death and hell,
Through love divine forgiv'n,
His eloquence could dwell,
Inspired, it seemed, by Heaven.

An anxious mother, standing near,
Her sickly babe to clear,
He could depict in trails so clear,
That all who heard would weep.

God's love to our degenerate race,
To Him of Heaven who came,
His vast unutterable grace,
His kind sympathies,

Moved by such love as thus portrayed,
So touching, yet so true,
The trembling sinner wept and prayed,
And sought repentance too.

Thro' views of Heaven, so real appeared,
An echo of its strains;
As to the lost, you all but heard
The shaking of their chains.

Rare Dawson; follow-townsman, I
Long gloried in his fame;
He lives as many wish to die,
A better world to claim.

EDWARD BURLEND

DEATH OF MR. JOSEPH HARGREAVES.

Never since the death of our late Vicar, has the mournful news of a more universally lamented so many hearts as that of Mr. Hargreaves. Though he has for some months been lingering, the fact that his useful life has closed, and that he sleeps in his last, will come with a tremorous chill over the many miners who loved him not only as their "gaffer," but as their friend, and adviser. It is not too much to speak of his life, his illness, his death, but without knowing any of those details which make up the history either of men or nations, we feel that a great life is fallen, that a good man is gone, that his place will not easily be filled.

Never have we heard of a miner who gave Joseph Hargreaves anything but a kindly word, and though outwardly somewhat stern and reserved, when anything affecting the safety of his men arose, the warm passions of his heart would reveal, and he could weep with those that wept.

In next week's issue, we purpose giving a short sketch of Mr. Hargreaves' life and death.

This afternoon, he will be consigned to the silent grave," and touching not the deep grief and sacred hush of the funeral day, we silently stay our pen, and gladly think of the time when the works of men shall be judged, and rewards apportioned, when we doubt not to Joseph Hargreaves it will be said : —"Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

A SUBSTITUTE FOR BALLOT VOTING.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,—It occurred to me, when going to vote, that an alteration might be made, that would be very advantageous to the voter, and much less expensive to the candidate than the present mode of recording votes. Instead of the voters being conveyed to the polling booths as now, in vehicles, by which the electors are frequently bribed or placed, unmistakeably indicating the principles of those people conveyed in them, and thereby in reality nullifying the secret system of opinion intended by the "New Ballot Act."

Which is not be far preferable for each elector to be supplied, a few days previous to the polling day, with all necessary information, along with the voting paper, and a blank envelope, directed for the returning officer of the division to which the voter belonged? This would obviate the necessity and expense of hiring committee rooms in the various villages, as a convenient town in each district might be made a central receiving, examining, and check all the votes thus sent per post.

This would simplify the machinery of electioneering, and essentially tend to bring known to anyone except the appointed persons, to which party the elector attached himself, and thereby do away with a great deal of ill-feeling between parties politically opposed, but who, on other occasions, are on the most friendly terms, and would prevent undue influence of employer over employed, and those in power or position over others socially in a lower station, which is often the case at present exercised.

I am, Sir,

Another advantage secured from the carrying out of this suggested plan is, that it would enable persons, who from illness or infirmity to vote in person, still to make their mark on the voting paper; and thus a larger number of votes would be secured which are otherwise lost to the country.

My remarks are intended to give secrecy to the voting process, which, to be perfect, it ought to possess, and thus avoid that publicity and its evil effects pointed out.

I am, Sir,

The Rothwell Times.

SATURDAY, MARCH 7th, 1874.

THE LATE MR. HARGREAVES.

He was born at an old house in Outwood nearly opposite the Queen Inn, on the 24th of March, 1813, and at 8 years of age, began work at the "trap-door," at the very beginning of a collier lad pit-life, gradually rising through the various grades of a miner's education, till, at 32 he becomes a manager, or steward, and for 27 years has superintended and opened most of his employers' pits. For 31 years has he served Messrs Charlesworths, with only 3 days' interruption, making their business his business; their workmen his workmen; taking a keen and sympathising interest in all that concerned either master or men, and formed a tiring sensitivity in guarding the miners from danger and accident.

Of no one man could it more truly be said "He lived for others, not for himself." Induced to hard work at an early age, passing through all the various stages of a miner's life, acquainted with the many dangers attendant on pit-work, having besides an intimate knowledge of those more subtle enemies which infest the air of the mine, and by hard personal study and extensive enquiry and observation mastered the means and precautions required for the men's safety, he has given his life for the sake of his men, he has sacrificed health, comfort and rest, in order to secure the health, comfort, and rest, of others. Day by day or night by night has he kept for himself, but ever vigilant, ever anxious, he has the proud honour of having saved many a life, which, but for his sagacity and care, would have been lost.

No wonder that years ago, the miners of Rothwell Haigh, tried to obtain his acceptance of some testimonial, and that eventually on September 11th, 1871, they presented a grand procession and demonstration, to present to Mr. Hargreaves, a gold watch and chain, worth £31, as a token of their esteem and regard; after the procession which Rothwell Haigh men (2 sets of which colliery Mr. Hargreaves had been 21 years steward,) were led by the Robin Hood and Newmarket bands, and proceeded to Lofthouse House, when in the presence of 4,000 people, men and masters, vied in doing honour to him, who had now been advanced to the entire oversight of all Messrs. Charlesworths' collieries in this district. The watch and the address used the following words respecting their manager:—We also meet to thank you (the masters) for your judicious wisdom in choosing such managers as we have at our colliery, to watch and protect us from harm; our lives, that once were precarious and dangerous, are now animated with joy and pleasure." "We esteem our managers and consider them as standing high in their position—second to none in the mining fraternity. If our managers are in front we have no fear; we go to our work as free from fear as the plough-man to his plough, or the clerk to his office. "We are blest above our fellows."

In the reply of J. C. D. Charlesworth, he uses the following words:—"The sinking of Beeston shaft, must have been a most anxious time for your manager; I refer to my old and respected friend, and your manager, Mr. Hargreaves, who has been associated with you for 21 years; also, to his son Mr. William Hargreaves, let me join in the kind feeling you have expressed to Mr. Hargreaves and his son, and the confidence you repose in them. In these sentiments, I and my partners cordially agree. You have today presented Mr. Hargreaves with a testimonial that he richly deserves, and I wish him long life and prosperity in the enjoyment of it."—Thus was it done to the man whom both employers and employed delighted to honour.

These collieries are noted throughout the country as the most free from accidents, and we do not wonder such is the case, when they were under the charge of such a man, who day and night was ready for work, and at his post.

For many years, Mr. Hargreaves has been a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, at Rothwell, and assisted in its movements, and was trusted and loved in this direction by the ministers and other friends. The Vicar has also kindly attended him.

Last year, he was elected a member of the Rothwell Local Board, and, while able, took an earnest interest in its concerns.

Worn down by over exertion, he had for several months been unable to attend to business, which has been ably conducted by his son William. Gradually sinking, and harassed by a fearful cough, it was seen that the end was approaching. Some of his last utterances showed that the religion he professed in life and health sustained him not in the dread, and that the beautiful lines

> Other refuge have I none,
> Hangs my helpless soul on Thee,
> Leave, ah! leave me not alone,
> Still support and comfort me, were all his own. Calmly and trustfully leaning on the Saviour, after a life of hard work, assiduous study, and earnest self sacrifice, he quietly and almost unobservedly fell asleep in death on Wednesday afternoon, February 25th, 1874.—His work was done, he takes his rest.

Saturday, February 28th, will not soon be forgotten by the people of this neighbourhood—the funeral day.—From every class and creed people flocked, to do honour to this man's memory. The miners assembled at three o'clock, at the "Cousin's" Pit, which is near Mr. Hargreaves' house. At half-past three, the coffin was brought to the front of the house, and, after a few verses had been sung, was borne a short distance to the hearse, the following taking part in the procession—

560 Miners and Workmen, three abreast,

Tradesmen of the Town,

Officers of the Mechanics' Institute,

Rothwell Local Board,—Messrs. Sanderson, Dickinson, Bumby, Clayton, Kendrew, and Webster.

Mr. Smith, Overseer.

Mr. Ryder, Assistant Overseer.

Mr. Jowett, Surveyor of Highways,

Gentlemen connected with Messrs. Charlesworths' Offices and Works:

Messrs. Guston, Brook, Normandale, & others

Full Brothers, J. Charlesworth, Esq., T. W. Embleton, Esq., Managing Engineer.

J. Heaps, Esq., M.D.,

—Elliott, Esq.,

After the hearse, followed 6 mourning carriages, containing the family and relatives of deceased.

Mr Hargreaves' Carriage,

Mr. Charlesworth's Carriage,

Mr Jowisson's Carriage,

followed by a dozen other conveyances. The mournful cortege arrived at the Rothwell Church at twenty minutes past four, and was met by the vicar, the Rev. G. Hefford-den, who conducted the service. A very large number of persons had congregated in the churchyard, and it is said such a large funeral has not been seen here in the present generation. The short service for the burial of the dead was read over, and the last remains of Mr. Hargreaves were left by his friends to await in the silent tomb the last trump of the great archangel.

As a mark of respect for the memory of Mr. Hargreaves, nearly all the shops in the town were closed during the time of the interment.

As showing the appreciation which his employers had of the deceased's services, the following resolution was placed in giving the following:—

Lofthouse, near Wakefield, Feb. 27, 1873.

Dear Sir,

Mr. Andrew Marshall,

You have our authority to state in your paper, that the late Joseph Hargreaves was trusted and greatly respected by our firm, in fact, nothing could speak more than the length of time he had been with us (50 years) and the large interests we confided to him,—a thoroughly trustworthy and upright man in all his dealings, and one whose loss we will be deeply deplored both by ourselves and our men.

Yours truly,

J. & J. CHARLESWORTH

FUNERAL SERMON FOR THE LATE THOMAS BURTON.

On Sunday evening last, a memorial service for the late Mr. Burton, was held in the Rothwell Wesleyan Chapel. There was a large congregation, including relatives of the deceased.

The Rev. J. Rhodes conducted the service, and preached an impressive sermon from Colossians 3rd chapter, 1st verse: "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God." He said there was first, the facts of the resurrection of Christ, and the resurrection of the believer, and secondly the exhortation based on the doctrine of the resurrection, and the things which are above. After expatiating on the grand doctrine referred to in his text, and declaring that it was to Christianity, what the key-stone is to the arch, he said that the marvellous doctrine of the human body was clearly demonstrated by the Apostle, because of the fact of Christ's resurrection, and that both must stand or fall together. The spiritual reference of the death untosin, and the resurrection to righteousness brought about in the conversion of a man's soul was then delineated, and the people exhorted accordingly to the Apostle, to seek those things which are above, &c.

Frequent reference during the sermon was made to the consistent holy life and present felicity of the well-known old christian whose death had lately been taken.

It appeared that Mr. Burton was born in 1794, at Royd's Green, where he for some time lived, and worked as a farm labourer, but his wonderfully favourable aptitude for watch and clock making, he learnt and conducted that business in Rothwell for many years, up to a few months previous to his death.

For years Mr. Burton had been connected with the Wesleyan Methodists of Rothwell, and throughout that long period, has manifested a beautiful character for humility goodness, patience, and charity.

His death took place on Wednesday, February 18th, 1874, and it was marked by the same quiet peace as had characterized his life.

The bent form and straggling hair which had so long been seen in our streets, and in the services of God's house, are no more to be seen; and the happy trustful spirit of the old pilgrim, is now "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are for ever at rest."

Before the commencement of the service, the solemn dead march was performed on the organ, and after the reading of one of the Scriptures, the choir gave with telling effect the touching sonnet "The Dying Christian."

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

HIGHWAY RATE FOR WOODLESFORD.—Mr. James Morton, of Oulton, assistant surveyor of the Township of Woodlesford, applied to the Justices of the Wakefield Police Court, sitting on Monday last, for their signatures to a highway rate of 8d. in the £, Mr. W. H. Leatham, the chairman, asked whether the former rate was collected? Mr. Morton replied, that it was all collected with the exception of about 10s. Dr. Holdsworth: That is very good in the year, is it not? Mr. Morton: It is. The last rate, which was 8d. in the £ was laid in May under considerably more pressure, and eight penny'orths about very well f r us, but we have been making improvements, laying a new causeway in Hob Lane, thoroughly repairing it, and filling many ruts and holes. The rate was then signed.

LOFTHOUSE MINERS REQUIRED TO SUPPORT THEIR CHILDREN.—Mary Morton and Ann Morton, spinsters, two miners living at Lofthouse, and both of whom are married, were summoned by Mr. John Sowerby, assistant overseer, and one of the Guardians of Wakefield Union, for having failed and refused to reimburse the amount which had been advanced to their mother, Rachel Dewhirst, their mother, as out-door relief From the statement made by Mr. Ker-haw it appeared that the defendants' father died in the early part of February, and was allowed 2s. per week; as she represented that she had no other income, the relief ordered the amount to be paid to her. Subsequently it was found that she had other income, which was, if anything, worse than the one in question; and there was also some six or seven hundred-weight which were sold at the auctioneers, four of the number being unstamped, having lumps of lead loosely attached to them. This sale of things had enabled her some time to live, and as the town had their produce of coal weighed upon this machine, it was very evident that the sale of things had been abandoned in order to avoid their earnings.—Mr. Inman (Justices' clerk) cited the section under which proceedings had been instituted, showing that possession was sufficient to sustain a conviction, the Chairman asked whether there was not a clerk-weighman at the pit mouth?—Mr. Superintendent Hall stated that there was only one person who officiated as weighman, and he was in the service of the Company. There was no check-weighman on behalf of the men.—The Chairman said he could see no force whatever in the argument which had been raised by Mr. Quiggin, inasmuch as there was as much wrong in depriving the men of the value of their earnings as if they would have been in cases of theft. For this reason he could see no difference between the public and miners, it being equally as bad in a gaffer and law, if a customer were given short weight, as if a man were defrauded of his own short weight. This machine could very easily have been adjusted, and kept right by proper care and watchfulness; and therefore, taking all facts into consideration, the Bench thought it an exceedingly bad case, and would impose the full penalty of £5, which, with costs, amounted to £5 12s. 6d.—The money was paid.

MISCHIEF OF PREPOSSESSIVE REMOVING GOODS AT LOFTHOUSE.—At the West-Riding Police Court, Wakefield, yesterday, a man, named George Albert Hall, was placed in the dock upon a charge of having fraudulently removed his goods and clothes from a house in which he occupied, to Outwell Green, under Mr. Richard Johnson, with the intent to defraud him out of the sum of 5s., due to him for rent. The defendant was committed and the Bench dismissed, the defendant promising to pay the amount of rent due, and the complainant to give a proper receipt for it.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

The usual fortnightly meeting of the Rothwell Local Board, was held in the Board Room, on Monday last.

Present: J. Charlesworth, Esq. (Chairman), Messrs. Dickinson, Sanderson, Bumby, Clayton, Kendrew, and Webster.

The Chairman (J. Charlesworth, Esq.) proposed, and Mr. Bumby seconded the following resolution—"That the members of the Board express their sympathy with the family of the late Mr. Hargreaves, (member of the Board) in the loss they have sustained by his death."

The agreement between the Board and Mr. Crutchley, for the surveying and levelling of Rothwell was returned by Mr. Crutchley, who desires the following alterations:—That date 31st Dec. by which the work is to be completed, to be changed to August 1st.; also, that the penalty to be forfeited for every day the work occupies beyond August 1st, be reduced from 10s. to 5s., 10s. being disproportionate to the amount of contract; (£99).

After discussion, both alterations were agreed to.

A letter was read from Mr. Holmes, complaining of the difficulty he has experienced in getting away his night-soil, but as Mr. Sanderson had already set some men to work, the matter rested.

The question, however, caused the Board to decide, as early as possible, to purchase horses and carts of their own, whereby there would arise no cause of complaint of the kind, and in case of nuisances.

A Petition from the promoters of the new scheme of the Wakefield Water Works' Co., was received, and a request made to allow the directors to have an interview with the Board, in order to obtain their adhesion to the plan, and their co-operation in getting the Bill through Parliament.

The Chairman said, they might hear what these gentlemen had to say, and would be better prepared to consider the measures for the supply of water. While the majority of the Board, expressed a disinclination to enter into the Wakefield scheme, it was nevertheless understood that a deputation of the Company would be glad to be heard.

Several members were wishful to use our own resources, and not to be dependent on either Leeds or Wakefield, they thought there was plenty of water in the district, if they could but get it brought into the town.

Several springs of beautiful and wholesome water, were mentioned. There are springs not only at Stourton-well, but on the Haigh, and at Swithope Head, and near Bushy Cliff. The water from Stourton-well would be most easily and inexpensively brought, and eventually, Mr. Charlesworth arranged with Mr. Dickinson and Mr. Kendrew, to go to Tadcaster, on the Wednesday, and see Mr. Bennet (Lord Stourton's agent), respecting the mind of Lord Stourton, as to the water being brought into the town.

As to the supply from Bushy Cliff, the Chairman, was sceptical of the story of springs existing there, as they had been forced out of the workings when attempting to get the coal.

A letter from Mr. Sykes, specified the various positions of four or five springs on a hill, some of which have never been dry; even in the most droughty summers; also stating that the water is of excellent quality.

Mr. Kendrew, would carry out a similar idea as mentioned in a letter, which appeared in The Rothwell Times, whereby the Stourton well water, shall be carried to tanks or reservoirs, in two or three different parts of the town, and by means of pipes to the people. Chairman, asked how the expense was to be covered, to which Mr. Kendrew replied, that the people would be glad to subscribe for the cost.

Mr. Sanderson had no doubt the want of water was very much felt in Rothwell, and hoped some means would soon be adopted.

A letter was read from Mr. Schofield, clerk to the Hunslet Board of Guardians, asking the Board what steps they had taken to obtain a water supply for Rothwell, and stating that the Hunslet Board would be glad to act in conjunction with the Rothwell Local Board.

A reply was directed to be sent, informing Mr. Schofield that no steps had been taken yet, but that they were about to do so.

Mr. Price the collector, informed the Board that the Midland Railway Company had refused to pay their Rates, which, owing to the new valuations are much heavier than before. The Board thought they could do nothing in it, and must await the action of higher authorities in the orders from the Local Government Board.

The Chairman asked whether the time was not approaching when the elections should take place, to which Mr. Kendrew (the Clerk) replied, that they were held last year on the 4th of April. (We believe four seats will then be vacant, viz.: the late Mr. Hargreaves' vacancy, and the seats of the three members who had the lowest number of votes last time).

Mr. Sanderson wished to know on behalf of the Churchwardens, when they shall pull the heap of broken stone now lying near the horse-house.—Mr. Kendrew said it to be carted away to a suitable size, and laid on the lanes from the church to Sr Seanor's Churchfield, and the Board will put on a layer of ashes, and thus make a good road.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which not only thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, arrests the Tooth-ache, imparts pearly whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasantness arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed of the purest of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s 6d for the liquid, and 1s per box. "The Floriline Powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by Henry C. Gallup, 493 Oxford-street, London.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Then go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless, pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers throughout the World. Price 2s. 9d. per bottle. Depôt 205, High Holborn, London.

CAPTURE OF COOMASSIE. THE KING TAKEN PRISONER.

Lord Carnarvon communicates the following private letter from Mr. Goldsworthy, Cape Coast, February 8th :—" News has reached us within the last half-hour that Coomassie is taken, and King Koffee Kalkalli taken prisoner. This is authentic. This will only be a line, as the special steamer is getting up steam to take the news to Madeira."

The authorities do not believe the news.

The rumour is also discredited from the fact that Captain Glover, was at the last advices said to be 40 miles beyond Coomassie.

The Secret Remedy.

A TALE OF MYSTERY.

"Quite possible," Eustace said entering. "Did he tell you what he went for; who I am?

"He told me nothing; he wrote a scrap of a note, but I ken who you must be, and I'm thankful to see you."

"Am I in time?"

"Ay, and only just. You poir creature—poir wife, is it no?—has no money nair hours to dree in this world. Nay, nay, ye must nae see Lizzie the noo; she's fainted, and raving, she" she must be warned o' yer being here first."

"True, true," he said, sadly, sitting down again. "Has she any one with her besides the doctor?"

"She has wanted for nothing sin' she was in my house; I ha'thanks to me, for the spa ky han' play'd her; and there's ane by her side this minute as has been nair nor a sister to the kindest. Ah, the creatures that ye brathed, though she is a playactress."

"Who is it?"

"Charlotte Smith is her name; an auld woman, and enough to be that puir thing's mother. She works through the day, again up till late hour when honest folk should be in their beds; yet for a' that, she'll come here and sit beside yon bed, and speak a kind word the long night through. But will ye no have a cup o' tea? I'm forgetting the lang ane ye've come."

"Thank you," said Eustace, seeing her on hospitable cares intent, and knowing that a refusal would hurt her feelings. "But can you not tell her—my wife, that I am come? Miss Smith will remember me, I am sure. I knew her once, but she may mistake."

Mrs. Grame bustled about setting the table, and putting on the kettle. "I'll speak to her the noo," she said. "We're baith up the night, for I thought a while sin' that it was to be her last; but she's better the last hour. Miss Smith's may be sa'en over too. I'll see."

She opened the door of another room, and sent reclearer the young man in a recess by the fire, thin n of the last time he saw her, but looking more beautiful even as he mured, a light step came to his side, and in a low voice said in his ear.

"I am very glad you have come, Mr. Calcott."

Eustace started at the old name, so long unused, so gently spoken, in such a familiar voice, and many with all the wealth of old memories and associations of years gone by; and looked up to see the worn face of Charlotte Smith.

"You will not remember me, perhaps, Mr. Calcott?" she said,

"I do, very well," he replied, offering her his hand "but do not call me by that name; there is no need for it now you know my real name, and I should for it now you know my real name, and I should say, my surname is they both belong to me."

"Yes," she said, in a grave tone, "I know it, Mr. Hartley."

"Then use it, don't call me Harry Calcott any more. Let us not recall the past of folly and sin; but better, better, pethaps, that I should not conceal it; I might not have been here on such an errand to-night. My—my wife can I see her?"

"She is asleep," was the reply, "and I would not disturb her sleep, there will be an open door to-morrow, and you will know all then; where she has been since the affair of the Queen of the Seas?"

"I do not know, except what she has told me, it was much worse than I heard of her being here, as you could possibly be."

"You had no correspondence, then?"

"None."

"Strange!" mused Eustace, "her dearest friend! But you do know where she was?"

"I know all that I learned from her own lips since I found her lying yonder. Don't ask me, sir!" she continued, the blood rushing to her face in fiery flush, and her eyes filling with pitying tears; "the knowledge will do you no good; let it be."

"Still, I should like to know where she was, that I might find her as effectually that even her husband could not find her out. Tell me, Miss Smith."

"She was in the most of the time, I believe."

"On the stage?"

"No."

"I understand," he said, bitterly. "In Paris, and not following her profession! you need not explain further. She was under the protection of some aristocratic scoundrel. Was it not so?"

Miss Smith bowed her head in mute assent.

"Who was it?" he asked. "Tell me his name! And yet, no, I will not seek to know it. No, do not tell me; I am better in ignorance." I might meet him in society some day, and—and—I am not sure that I should not be guilty of some mortal folly,—might have to hold out the hand of fellowship to the man who paraded my wife in the dishonour of infamy, the guilt and glitter of the Parisian demi-monde! Let me do it in ignorance and unconsciousness, not wittingly!"

Miss Smith was silent. To have spoken the name of her dying friend's betrayer, would have been to make one whom Eustace Hartley knew well and esteemed highly. She knew nothing of him but the old story, and was too young to be convinced—

"And it is upon such a bounty as she has been living here? The pension has supplied the comforts her dying hours needed. O Stella, Stella! I little thought when your trusting eyes looked into my face that what seemed to me a relief of heaven's own purity and innocence what a world of deceit and falsehood, and hidden sin and depths!"

He spoke bitterly and passionately, and his companion hardly knew what to say to soothe or comfort him.

"Remember she is dying," she said at length; "that a very few hours will close her life, and that—that very few hours will close her life, and that—that very few hours will close her life, Hartley."

She has an angel by her side at all events," he said, in a softer tone to the speaker. "Can I see her soon, Miss Smith."

The tears stood in the poor ballet-dancer's eyes; words of comfort were sweet and sweet to her. It was seldom that her lonely life was cheered by even a sentence of kindness.

"I have nothing," she said, when her voice broke ing into a sob; there was so little I could do,"

"You have done more than any one can repay you for," he said, with a smile in his voice. "More perhaps than I shall ever know; but your reward will not be wanting, even in this world."

Eustace followed her advice, and in a very short time was refreshed by food and a cup of refreshment; but all the felt when he undressed as though he were only going to lie down to rest his limbs, not to close his eyes.

Mrs. Grame meantime went about her household affairs; arranged the room, set out the tea-cups, and laid a table for herself and guests, looking only on the face of the sleeper by the fire. "Puir thing!" she said to herself, "I dinna like to leave her, but she'll need to gang hame before reheed-teat time; I'll have a bite ready for her anyhow; she shall not go hungry and faint on the road, whatever else she may feel. I'll make some coffee, and then arouse Miss Smith. "Time's getting on, my dear," she said, kindly touching her by the shoulder. "Waken, and take your breakfast."

OPENING OF HUNSLET TRAM.

A very valuable addition to the tramway system of Leeds, and what will prove to be of vast importance to the districts in which this paper circulates, was opened on Monday last. The new tram, which extends from middle of Briggate to Thwaite-Gate, should have been opened some time ago but for delay on the part of the contractors, was formally opened by the Mayor and a distinguished company of gentlemen interested in the success of the undertaking being drawn in two of the new cars (which were gaily decorated with flags), each capable of accommodating 50 persons, shortly after two o'clock, down Briggate, across Leeds Bridge, and thence out to Thwaite-Gate, reaching the terminus there in eighteen minutes. The journey, about two miles and a half, was accomplished with the utmost ease and smoothness, a pleasing contrast to the jolting often experienced under the old system.

A good site has been secured at Thwaite-Gate on which to build stables for about 110 horses. The fare charged for going the full distance is three pence; for those going no further than Swan junction the charge will be two-pence. The cars will ply at a 12 fare from the junction to Hunslet Carr.

After the return of the company from their pleasant trip, luncheon was served at the Great Northern Railway Hotel, under the presidency of the Mayor.

For the present, the Hunslet cars will run every quarter of an hour, but the traffic leading from Rothwell, Thwaite-Gate, Hunslet Carr, and Hunslet, will soon require more frequent journies.

PARLIAMENTARY.

The first session on the ninth Parliament of the present reign was opened by Commission on Thursday. The Lords Commissioners took their seats at two o'clock, and shortly after the members of the House of Commons attended at the bar of the House of Lords, the Clerk of the Lower House taking the lead. The Lord Chancellor announced, that as soon as the members of both Houses had been severally sworn, it would be his duty to call upon the House of Commons should proceed to the choice of some proper person to be their Speaker, and present the person whom they should choose in the House of Lords to-day for Her Majesty's royal approbation. The members of the House of Commons then withdrew, and the "swearing-in of the peers was proceeded with. Their lordships adjourned at five o'clock, at which hour about 100 peers had taken the oath.

After the members of the Lower House had returned to their chamber Mr. Chaplin moved that the old Speaker be re-elected. Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Lowe, Mr. Secretary Cross, and Lord George Cavendish, who sat on the opposite bench, seconded the motion. There was no other nomination, and Sir Erskin May bowed to the Speaker's chair, and was led to it by the mover and seconder, and again addressed a few words to the House. The House was adjourned, on the motion of Mr. W. H. Smith.

STRIKE OF 4,000 COLLIERS.

A strike of 4,000 colliers is imminent in Somersetshire. The masters assert that the men have had an increase in two years, as coal went up in price, and now that prices have dropped from 8s. to 4s. per ton, with large accumulated stock, they propose a reduction of 1s. per day. The men resist this reduction, that they would prefer being idle two days a week to reduce the stock. Unless they give way twenty-four collieries will stop work on Monday next.

INDIAN FAMINE.

Eighteen famine deaths have taken place in fouu day, in a village near Mozufferpore. The cart transports a number of famine victims daily to the cemetery; the grain supply is, therefore, deficient in the same ratio. Nearly 30,000 persons are employed on the road relief works here; there were only 15,000 last week.

CALCUTTA, March 5.

RUPTURES!!
THE AMERICAN TRUSS IS SUPERSEDING ALL THE OLD KINDS OF TRUSS NOW IN USE.—The Truss has obtained the approval and recommendation of the highest surgeons, and is adopted by the authorities of hospitals and medical institutions.
The American Truss possesses the following peculiar advantages: simplicity & lightness of weight. It affords a perfect support, and allows the various motions and positions of the body to take place with ease and pleasure. It does not cause pain or irritation by unequal pressure, neither has it any metal springs or pads to rust and get out of repair. The Truss can be worn during any exercise or at night, and is equally applicable for adults of both sexes and for children.
The prices are arranged on the lowest possible scale The Truss can be forwarded by post on receipt of the size round the body, and Post Office Order payable at Brighton, to WEST & LONG, Surgical Instrument Makers, 19, Middle street, Brighton, from whom only the Truss can be obtained.
A Descriptive Pamphlet, 3 stamps.
Single Trusses.....7s. 9s. 10s. 12s. Postage.
Double Trusses.....12s. 14s. 21s. 25s.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.
Bronchitis, Diphtheria, Coughs, Colds, and all Derangements of the Throat and Chest.
In any of the above diseases, immediate and permanent relief is obtained by carefully rubbing this celebrated Ointment into a day upon the neck, chest, and back, and in all stages of influenza, settled colds, and sore throat, rubbing at the chest, the same treatment may be followed with efficiency and safety.
Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Sores, Wounds, and Ulcers.
Few sufferers think that such prescription can be relied upon and around the affected parts twice a day, it will penetrate to the tissues below the surface, and by its healing influence on the internal membranes soon diminishes the pain becomes less intolerable, the sore begins to heal, and in a short time, even in cases of long standing cases Holloway's Pills should also be taken, as they greatly assist in purifying the blood and eliminating from the body every element of disease.
Skin Diseases of all kinds.
In this class of complaints, no matter the age, the sex the place, or under what name the disease may be classified, whether acute, chronic, scrofulous, or constitutional, they are pounced, if this ointment is plentifully rubbed upon the part affected, night and morning, for a few days in appropriate doses night and morning, to purify the blood.
Gout, Rheumatism, and Glandular Swellings.
Every one suffering from these excruciating complaints should have recourse to these purifying remedies, as they have proved themselves in thousands of cases of lifting, after all other means had failed to give them relief. The Ointment and Pills used conjointly will act quickly, powerfully and certainly, as to effect cures in the most hopeless cases.
Piles, Fistulas, and Internal Inflammations.
Persons afflicted with these distressing complaints will find in this wonderful Ointment instant means of relief, and all can effect their perfect cure by using the Ointment and taking Holloway's Pills, if taken in small doses, greatly assist the Ointment, as they purify the blood and regulate the secretions in an extraordinary manner.
The Ointment and Pills are sold at Professor Holloway's Establishment, 533, Oxford Street, London; also by nearly every respectable Vendor of Medicine throughout the Civilized World, in Pots and Boxes, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each. The smallest Pot of Ointment contains one ounce; and the smallest Box of Pills four dozen.
Full printed directions are affixed to each Pot and Box, and can be had in any language, even in Turkish, Arabic, Armenian, Persian, or Chinese.

PROPOSED REDUCTION OF MINERS' WAGES IN THE YORKSHIRE DISTRICT.

An important meeting of Yorkshire and Derbyshire coalowners was held at Barnsley on Wednesday, to consider the question of an immediate reduction in the wages of miners employed in those districts.

It was stated at the meeting that four separate advances had been made in the wages of the men, and the last two advances had been at the rate of 17½ and 20 per cent. The selling prices of coal, notwithstanding, were considerably below what they were prior to the advantages being made, and the coal trade was so depressed throughout the whole of the district that few collieries working house coal were giving more than three days a week, and in consequence the colliery owners were losing money. It was thought that immediately these facts were laid before the chiefs of the South Yorkshire Miners' Union, the men would see the necessity of submitting to an immediate reduction in their wages, especially as the coalowners were not likely to press for the reduction of more than 17½ or 20 per cent.

THE ROYAL VISIT.

The Royal visit to London took place on Thursday, when the Queen, the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, Prince Leopold, and Princess Beatrice travelled from Windsor to Paddington, per special train, and following open carriages proceeded slowly amid falling snow along several of the principal streets, now elaborately decorated, to Buckingham Palace, where they were received by the Prince and Princess of Wales, Princess Louise, and the Princess Christian.

The inhabitants were enthusiastic, and the Duchess seemed greatly impressed with the cordiality of her reception.

THE LOCAL BOARD ELECTIONS.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

SIR,—I see by your report of last Board Meeting, that the election for 4 seats will take place in about three weeks. Now Sir, I think we town's people ought to arouse ourselves, and send representatives who will look after Rothwell interests. What has been done for the town during the past year? All the money pretty nearly, obtained for highway rate has been spent (with what result may be seen) on the Haigh roads, especially the Wakefield-road. I do not wonder that strangers passing through the town after that say it our Local Board is doing. The ask what our Local Board is doing. The main street is in a disgraceful state, and I think it's worse than it has been for some years. In fact, no one seems to look at it. All the attention is devoted to this Wakefield highway. If we sent some active and interested gentlemen from the town, we should then have a voice in the Board; as it is now, the Haigh people have it all their own way, while we substantively pay rates for their more especial benefit.

Let the people bestir themselves in time, and show the Board that we are not so supine this year as we were last year, but that we have learnt a lesson or two from experience. I have learnt a lesson or two from experience. I hint we shall hear of a move in the camp, and that men will be nominated in good time, and the people of the town will put their shoulders to the wheel, and help in persons who have the interest of the town at heart, both as regards water, drainage, and roads.

I remain, yours respectfully,

A RATEPAYER.

CURIOUS WILL CASE.

Sir James Hannen has had a rather curious will case before him during the last two days. It is that of Mrs. Ann Cooper, widow of a naval officer who was lost in the St. George more than sixty years ago. She ultimately settled at Weston-super-Mare and formed a strong friendship for her medical attendant, Dr. Pooley. He became her residuary legatee, and the benefit derivable as such would be about £4,000. The will was disputed by the nephew of the testatrix on the ground of incapacity and undue influence. The jury on Thursday intimated their opinion that the will was valid, and the Court allowed costs for the defendant.

SERIOUS STABBING CASE.

On Thursday, a man named Richard Hall was charged at Castle Eden, with having stabbed John Oxley, a miner, while travelling in a third-class carriage on the Sunderland and Hartlepool Railway. Hall and his wife were quarrelling, and on Oxley interposing he was seriously stabbed in the chest, so much so that on Thursday he was reported as being in extreme danger. Hall denied being in custody, and his wife (who was also charged with sibling) were remanded.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—Never at fault.—In all irritations of the skin, sores, ulcers, burns, and scrofula—as inflammatory as ready and easy means of cure, Ointment presents a remedy of most favourable action, which never disappoints the most formidable affections. It manifests a peculiar power in restraining inflammation, removing stagnation, cooling the heated blood, and checking virulence of spreading disease. Whilst the Ointment thus acts healthy discharges. Whilst the Pills are no less remarkable for their power in improving the general condition and habit of body, both processes render the cures complete and permanent. Under the general influence of these potent remedies, the puny infant becomes the robust parent, the pale and emaciated regain colour and vitality, and the dyspeptic eats freely without distress.

WONDERFUL EFFICACY OF MR. CONGREVE'S BALSAMIC PREPARATION FOR CONSUMPTION.—See the new edition (1873) of Dr. Locock Thomas Conquest's book "ON CONSUMPTION OF THE LUNGS, or Decline, and the SUCCESSFUL Curative Treatment," showing that a single successful Treatment," showing that a single successful case is to be curable in all its stages; with absolute success to be curable in all its stages; with absolute distinct Cases of Cures, and Questions for Patients consulting the Author by letter. Post free from the Author, Coombe Lodge, Peckham, London, for Five Stamps.

Bryant and May beg to direct special attention to their New Oval Pocket Vesta Boxes, with Paten Spring Covers, which are entirely free from that Rough Edges and Sharp Corners, and are admitted by every one to be the Best and Cheapest Pocket Box ever produced Vestabel everywhere at One Penny. CAUTION.—Owing to daily complaints from the public of some tradesmen, for profit's sake, palming off a close imitation of my only GOLD MEDAL MARKING INK, I can only be RESPONSIBLE for that labelled as follows:—"Prepared by the Executors of the late John Reed," 73, Southgate Road. ROTHWELL MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

On Wednesday evening, Mr. Frank Curzon, the well-known and attractive lecturer, and agent of the Yorkshire Union of Mechanics' Institutes, gave his very entertaining and instructive lecture on "Hogarth and Wilkie," two of our most eminent representative painters of English character and manners, at different periods of our social history. The lecture was illustrated by a series of old but valuable engravings of Hogarth's, and a few copies of one or two notable pictures of Wilkie's along with two large and expressive Crayon portraits of the artists. Wm. Mason, Esq., president of the Institute, occupied the chair, and after a few appropriate remarks, introduced the lecturer. Mr. Curzon gave an outline sketch in a pleasing manner, of the prominent events in the lives of these two great painters, showing how the appreciation of their works and the money value of them, had increased enormously, (prominent heads were selected and drawn on a larger scale on the blackboard from some of the pictures—in order to explain more fully and to shew the keen insight of the artist into character), with that correctness, facility, and execution in which the lecturer excels.

Hogarth, with his broad forehead, large, piercing eyes and firm nose, and wonderful square and massive lower jaw—altogether a Celtic face with London training, excelled in broad, vigorous, but withal, coarse delineation of high and low life of his period, that is of George II, when vices of all kinds were rampant, and morality at a very low ebb; when on the public-house signs were exhibited the words for 1d. clean sigins were exhibited the words for 1d. clean sigins were exhibited the words for 1d. clean for 2d." Undoubtedly these powerful realistic pictures of Hogarth did much to reform the vices of the age in which he lived, for vice to be hated can first be shewn to be ridiculous. The grouping of the pictures especially in the "Election of the industrious apprentice as Lord Mayor," and the "Execution at Tyburn" is something wonderful, each figure stands out in all its individuality and distinctness—and is a study of itself, in the "Idle and Industrious Apprentice" the downward course of evil is graphically depicted, and the upward course of good and useful life is vividly exhibited. Wilkie lived a hundred years later, when the people were not so wretched, and morbidity was in the ascendancy. He is a more polished painter, and deals more in rustic subjects of every-day life, and customs;—the disgusting and brutalheads of Hogarth do not appear, and in their place we have heads of a higher type of refinement and mirth-loving, but he does not possess the grim humour of the caricaturist of George 2nd's time, but the pictures are more pleasing and refined—by his pictures are more of favourites with the people generally. Several heads in the "Rustling of the will," and the "Village politicians" were enlarged upon with considerable humour, and all had an agreeable sarcasm and wit, but which the lecturer delights hitting as he went along the follies and foibles of the present age, interspersing his descriptions with humourous anecdotes and facel repril, which caused a deal of fun and merriment. The time allowed to the lecturer was far too short to do a tithe of justice to the subject, and was brought to a close much to the regret of all present, who had evidently passed a most agreeable hour.

Rothwell & District Police Entelligence.

EXTENSIVE DEPREDATIONS BY HURRIERS AND OTHERS AT LOFTHOUSE.—Four youths, named Charles Farrar, George Keithley, William Longstaff, and Thomas Keithley, Armley Brothers, stone merchants, Robin Hood Lofthouse,—Longstaff is the son of a pot-hawker, Nowell the son of Joseph Nowell, who until very recently was a publican at Carlton, and the other lads are sons of colliers living at Lofthouse. Mr. Henry Armitage represented the firm, having the complaint, and Mr. Wainwright acted as solicitor for the defendants, one of whom, Nowell, charged Mr. Armitage with having assaulted him.—From the statement made by the complainant it appeared that for a long time past, a number of youths have been in the habit of amusing themselves by breaking and smashing whatever they might meet with, fences, doors, stone walls, windows, and everything else, in fact, their wantonness has known no bounds; and between Saturday night and Sunday morning, as Mr. Armitage asserted, stone slabs had been thrown down, and damage done to the extent of at least £50. They had an engine house, in the window of which there were, he believed, no fewer than sixteen squares of glass, but now there was not a piece remaining of the size of a shilling.—Mr. Wainwright (after hearing the complainant and his witness) remarked that the youths were charged with committing a certain offence, on the night of the 8th ultimo, and asked him to confine his remarks only to the event of that night in question.—The Chairman (Dr. Kendell): You can put it in this shape, that you have suffered very much by injury for some time past.—Complainant: Yes, and I have spent hours upon hours in endeavouring to catch the depredators and bring them to justice. On Sunday week, being a moonlight night, I was on the watch, and was pretty sure that all was right, and after remaining there for about half an hour, I heard a great noise and found that the lads, of whom there were nine or ten, were at their old game. I clearly recognized the voices of the four defendants, whom I saw throw down and break a slab which was worth half-a-crown; I then separated the defendants, and the whole party ran away; but, having gone in pursuit as far as where Charles Farrar keeps a beerhouse, I caught Abel Farrar and Joseph Nowell.—Mr. Wainwright: And you then hit him over a wall?—Witness: I lifted him over.—Mr. Wainwright: Did he not cry?—Witness: He cried, certainly; but it was only from fear.—Mr. Wainwright: Now, is not your quarry open to the road?—Mr. Armitage: Well, we cannot lock it up as we should like, because the stones would remain there if they would leave them alone! (laughter).—The complainant's brother-in-law, witness named William Lamb, hurry driver to Mr. Armitage, deposed, of Robin Hood, who deposed that on the evening in question he went to the stables to fodder the horses, when he saw the defendants and a number of other lads congregated in front of the stables "going" the doors as hard as they possibly could. They were also breaking the windows, and he saw them pull a slab down on to the causeway and break that likewise. He got as near as possible without being observed, and very distinctly recognized Farrar, Keithley, and Longstaff; seeing Mr. Henry Armitage, he stated what he had seen, and Nowell was caught.—Mr. Wainwright then addressed the bench on behalf of his clients, contending that it was simply a youthful frolic.—The Chairman said that the bench was of opinion that the charge of assault was a most paltry and absurd one, therefore the summons which had been taken out against Mr. Armitage would be dismissed. Under the circumstances, the defendants would be ordered to pay the amount claimed, 2s. 6d., together with a fine of £1 11s. and £2 costs, amounting to a total sum of £4 10s. 6d., or £1 2s. 7½d. each.

HURRIERS IN THE METHLEY JUNCTION COLLIERY CHARGED WITH ASSAULT.—Two youths, named Richard Jones and Samuel Afills, were charged on remand from last week with having committed an unwarrantable assault upon another lad, named, Ephraim Dickson. The facts were briefly stated in last week's Rothwell Times.—Mr. Messrs. Henry Briggs Son and Company's pit at Methley Junction, and that the defendants had way-laid and savagely assaulted Dickson after he had informed against them for ill-treating a pond in the workings.—After the case had been proved, the bench bound both of the lads over to keep the peace, and ordered them to pay the expenses, which amounted to 11s. each.

HUNSLET PEDLARS EXPERIENCE THE RESULT OF HAWKING WITHOUT LICENSES.—Joseph Edward Wilson, a respectable attired, middle-aged man, who was described by the police as a general hawker living at Hunslet, in Leeds, was summoned by P.C. Cawson for having unlawfully acted as a pedlar in the Normanton Division without having a proper license, and another person named James Flynn, was charged with a similar offence. The facts which transpired are worthy of note, if only as a caution to forgetfully-inclined persons, and as an illustration of sharp practice" upon the part of a police officer.—On Saturday last Mr. Wilson appears to have gone on one of his usual tours as a packman, taking with him the man Flynn, whom he had met in the morning engaged in acts of charity, to assist him. Arrived at Normanton, they each canvassed separate parts of the town, and Flynn happened to call, amongst other places, at P.-C. Cawson's residence, and asked him, as the merchant of Bagdad might have done, to purchase wares, which consisted of dress-pieces and other goods of peculiar attraction to the fair sex. Cawson having only to be seen in demanded the production of his authority to hawk, and being unable to produce it, Flynn was made a prisoner, and walked off to the station, where he obtained his situation, and stated that Mr. Wilson had kindly given him a day's employment. The officer, learning that Wilson was in the town, immediately set off in search of him, and upon meeting with him demanded his certificate. With all the assurance of a man who had nothing to fear, our Hunslet friend coolly put his hand into his breast coat pocket, to then into another, but unfortunately his license was non est, and he remembered that, shortly prior to leaving home that morning, he had changed outer garments without transferring the important document from one to the other. Explanation was, of course, unavailing, and master as well as man had to submit to the unpleasant ordeal of passing a night in the police cells. The Sunday and Monday might pass by in the same manner, but by Monday morning it was found that the absence of his master's name on Wilson's statement and that of his servant were literally incorrect, and the required certificate had been sent from Leeds, and was the defendant's passport to liberty. The case having been heard the bench remarked that they sympathised with the men who had been comparatively speaking, in "durance vile" for two days simply for an act of forgetfulness. They would now be discharged, without having any expenses to pay, and it was to be hoped that they would never again be placed in a similarly unfortunate fix.—Mr. Wilson, after remarking that "he had paid very dearly for his trifling neglect," thanked the justices, and the parties left the court together.

APPLICATION FOR WARRANT FOR PERJURY AGAINST LORD MERRDHO'S GAMEKEEPER.—Mr. Wainwright yesterday renewed his application against his lordship's gamekeepers, and the Bench, after hearing Mr. Gill, who appeared on the behalf of his lordship's land agent, said it would simply be waste of time to re-open the trial.—Mr. Kendrew withdrew his application.

THE TICHBORNE IMPOSTURE.

MRS. JURY'S DENIAL OF CHARLES ORTON'S STORY.

"NIPPING THE FRAUD IN THE BUD."

The Telegraph of Thursday morning publishes a long correspondence of a very combatative character, when taken in conjunction with Charles Orton's confession. Mrs. Jury denies the statements made by Charles Orton, her brother. A leader in the Telegraph says not only should the evidence of Charles Orton be absolutely disregarded, but if properly secured it might have precluded the first trial. Arthur Orton landed from Melbourne some eight years ago, calling himself Sir Roger Tichborne, and having cash under that name. The family knew that he was a "rogue and a vagabond," but tenderness for the dead honour or collusion of Lady Tichborne kept them quiet. If, however, a public prosecutor had arrested the fellow during his first few weeks on English soil, for obtaining money under false pretences the bubble would have burst in a month. He would not have had time to be coached by Bogle or the "Pore fellows" and at an expense of a few hundred pounds the ingenious impostor could have been easily suppressed.

TWENTY LASHES WITH THE "CAT."

Five garroters on Thursday underwent the punishment of flogging with the "cat" in the Newcastle gaol. They each received twenty lashes, which they bore very badly.

RAILWAY ROBBERY AT HUNSLET.—At the Leeds Town Hall on Thursday morning, William Sandall (29), was remanded for inquiries concerning a charge of stealing a quantity of socks and damask, the property of the Midland Railway Company. At Hunslet, on the 10th inst. a robbery had. Mr. Best appeared to prosecute.

CRUELTY TO A HORSE AT HUNSLET.—At the Leeds Town Hall, on Thursday afternoon, Joseph Stringer, (48,) was charged by Inspector Sinclair, of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, with cruelty to a horse. The prosecutor said that early in Low Road, Hunslet, he saw the defendant driving a horse in a cart, which was in a very emaciated condition, and lame in one of its hind legs. Mr. Murdock, veterinary surgeon, proved the horse to be in a very bad condition, and hardly fit to work. The "knacker's" yard. Defendant, on consenting that the horse should be destroyed, was fined 20s. and costs.

Late on Wednesday night, a goods train embedded in snow on the Caledonian Railway, was run into and crushed by two powerful engines driving a snow plough.

It as been resolved to hold a musical festival at Leeds in the autumn of this year, the profits to be divided amongst the principal charities of the town. A provisional committee was on Thursday formed to raise a guarantee fund of £5,000.

MEETING OF TAILORS AT ROTHWELL.—On Monday, March 2nd, the Tailors of Rothwell and the surrounding districts, held a meeting at the house of Mr. James Steels, Beech and Horses' Inn, Rothwell, when it was decided to put ten per cent., upon the present prices. After the meeting, a Benefit Society was formed, Mr. Samuel Batty was elected honorary secretary, and Mr. James Batty, treasurer.

PARLIAMENTARY.

The House of Commons sat for a short time on Thursday afternoon, when several members were sworn in, and new writs were ordered to fill the vacancies caused by the acceptance of office by Mr. Disraeli, Mr. Cross, Lord John Manners, and Lord Mahon, and by Lord St. Lawrence's elevation to the Irish Peerage. The House adjourned till Thursday next.

The Secret Marriage:

A TALE OF MYSTERY.

CHAPTER XXII.

DR. BROWNE GIVING UP PRACTICE.—STELLA MORTON'S FUNERAL.—ANDREW GRAME FOLLOWS THE EXAMPLE OF HIS SUPERIORS.

Dr. Browne was the first to break the silence. He had closed the eyes of the poor corpse, never more to look upon the light, and had been silently and gently, as if the lifeless clay had been near and dear to himself; and, turning to Eustace, had took Nelly from his arms, and drew her from the room. "Come," he said; "there is nothing more for any of us to do here."

Eustace lingered a moment, looking at the face of his dead wife, and then turned to the boxed form of Charlotte Smith, who, with her face buried in the pillows, was weeping out her sorrow for her dead friend. "Miss Smith," he said gently, "you will stay with Mrs. Grame till I return?"

"Yes," she replied, through her tears; "till—till all is over. No stranger's hands shall touch her."

"Thank you," he said, pressing her hand, and turning into the outer-room. Here, to his surprise, he found Andrew seated by the fire talking to his mother. "You here?" he said.

"Ay, Mr. Eustace," he replied; "the doctor couldna do without me. There is no a time to tell ye what I came for. They're waiting for ye downstairs, sir."

Eustace placed some money in Mrs. Grame's hand. "Do all that is necessary," he said. "No need to spare expence. I shall leave everything to Andrew and you."

"We'll do our best," she replied, as Eustace left the house.

In the street he found Dr. Browne and Nelly. "You must come with us," the doctor said, "and breakfast, and rest, unless you have lodgings of your own."

"No," he replied; "I have not been out of the house since I came. I had no time to send for what I came for. I shall leave everything to Andrew and you."

"We'll do our best," she replied, as Eustace left the house.

MR. THOMAS HUTCHINSON, 21, GASKELL PLACE, DEWSBURY ROAD, HUNSLET, LEEDS, informs the public that he has had thirty years, practice in curing those old diseases that are given up and deemed incurable by those fellows who call themselves Doctors. In 1848, he was forced from a village sixty miles from Leeds to cure those diseases that were under the Leeds Doctors, and has remained ever since in Leeds, after draining the people's pockets, left to suffer and die with their diseases, and go to premature graves, with the belief that their diseases were incurable.
The few following Testimonials are selected from hundreds of cases of cancers, fistulas, &c., that he has cured while practising in Leeds.
TESTIMONIALS.
Sir,—This is to certify, that you cured me two Abscesses on my Leg and Foot in three weeks, after being under Leeds and Halifax first doctors ten years. WM. TAYLOR, Ingram Street, Holbeck.
Sir,—For fifteen months I was in a Decline and confined to bed nearly the whole of the time, I had all the most eminent doctors in Leeds and Holbeck attending me to no purpose, till I took your advice which restored me to good health in one month.—Mary Ann Morley, Clark's Place, Ingram Street, Holbeck, Leeds.
Sir,—For three years I took Pills and could not be cured, till I took your Medicines, which cured them in five weeks.
Mrs. JOHN SMITH, 5, Fenton's Yard, Hollbeck Lane, Leeds.
Sir,—I was confined to bed with Rheumatism in every part of my body for eighteen months, and spent on doctors about ten pounds without receiving the least relief, I applied to you, when you cured my leg-sores with a box of your Ointment.—Mary Grey, Crown Buildings, Dewsbury Road, Hunslet, Leeds.
Sir,—I suffered for five years with Asthma, Dropsy, and Bad Leg, you undertook and cured me perfectly in six weeks.
Nancy Harrison, Holbeck Moorside, Leeds
Sir,—For seven years I suffered greatly from a large Abscess on my Hip, and had doctors all the time attending me but got no better, till you came and applied your remedy only once, which wrought a perfect cure, you charged me one shilling.
James Stringer, Oakwood, Wakefield
Sir,—For fourteen months I was confined to bed with a Decline and had twenty pounds worth of what they call medicine, from Manchester and Leeds doctors, without deriving the slightest relief, I sent for you when you gave me a 2s. 6d. bottle of your valuable medicine which restored me to perfect health, and I have remained so ever since, being in the year of 1870, when you performed the wonderful cure on me. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.
CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Neuralgia, &c.
Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.
SOLE MANUFACTURER—J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London.
From LORD FREDERIC CAVENDISH, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December 1868.
"Lord Frederic Cavendish, during the last year bought some of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half-a-dozen bottles sent at once to the above address."
"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, on the effect that Cholera was fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, 1st December 1864.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, FREEMAN, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July 1864.
Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

WAGES OF COLLIERS ! ! !

The Initiative which has been taken by the Masters in their proposal to reduce the men's wages 25 per cent., is very likely to produce a great amount of wrangling and determined opposition.

It is pretty certain that no advance was made to the men even when the rise in the article made the price from 16s. to 19s., the reduction being complained of under the circumstances that no reduction has been made in that portion, which most affects trade—slack or engine coal,—and until that reduction has been made, the men will, no doubt, refuse to accede to the requests of the masters.

On Monday next, there will be a meeting of representatives of the men, when we hope the good feeling which has of late existed between employers and employed, will be the means of producing a plan by which the difficulty can be got over.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

The usual fortnightly Meeting of the Board took place in the Board Room, on the 17th inst., present:—J. Charlesworth, Esq., (chairman), Messrs. Hargreaves, Sanderson, Dickinson, Bundy, Charnley, Kendrew, and Webster, S. Hargreaves, Clerk.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

In reply to a letter from Mr. Holmes, the clerk was instructed to write, that arrangements for paying for the removal of nuisances was a private one, and that the Board had nothing to do with the matter; the duty of the Board is simply to see that nuisances are removed.

The inspector of nuisances complained of a nuisance upon Mr. Holme's property, by reason of the water of a well being polluted, by the refuse of a privy soaking through the ground into the well. The inspector was ordered to direct the medical officer's attention to it.

Mr. G. Armitage submitted plans of proposed privies upon property near the Black Bull Inn, belonging to Mr. Briggs and others, and for which he is agent; several alterations were suggested by the Board, and the plans were then unanimously approved of.

A letter was read from Mr. J. A. Fawcett, of Thwaite Gate, as to the unsatisfactory condition of the causeway, from Pontefract Toll Bar to the Stourton Hotel. The clerk was instructed to write informing him, that the Board had given instructions for the causeway to be repaired.

A deputation from the Wakefield Waterworks Company, including Mr. Statter, (the chairman), and other gentlemen was introduced and submitted plans, &c., explaining their scheme for bringing the water from Penistone, (which is the second-best water in the Kingdom, and for supplying, not only Wakefield, but the villages and towns surrounding. In reply to the question as to whether, if the Board supported their Bill, they would be compelled to take the Wakefield water, the deputation replied no, but defendants if they took the Board's supply to supply the town, if they could show to the Company that a profit of 10 per cent., would be realized.

The deputation said that their would be no danger of a short supply; that supposing there was a short supply, they did not intend using the water from the river, neither would they give the preference to Wakefield and cut off the adjoining districts.

They also stated that they could not include Rothwell in their Bill, unless the Board petitions to be included, and it was finally decided unanimously to do so.

As announced in the report of the last Board Meeting, Mr. Charlesworth, accompanied by Messrs. Dickinson and Kendrew, waited on Mr. Bromet (Lord Stourton's agent) on Wednesday, the 4th, to ascertain his Lordship's feelings with regard to Stourton Well. The deputation were well received, and were assured that Lord Stourton was perfectly willing to allow the Board the use of the water from the well, on payment of a small acknowledgment by the Board.

SERVICE OF SACRED SONG.

The teachers and scholars of the Wesleyan Methodist School, having some time ago, given the Service of Sacred Song "Christiana" in a very effective and successful manner, offered to repeat it in a more public place, for the benefit of their friends the Primitives. The offer being thankfully accepted, the meeting took place last Monday, in the Mechanics' Hall, a small admission was charged, and the Hall was crowded with representatives of all creeds and no creed. The platform was enlarged for the occasion, and was filled by about sixty persons connected with the choir, namely, Mr. Ward conducting the singers, and Mr. Seanor reading the connective words. Mr. Marshall presided, and after singing and prayer briefly addressed the audience. He said that when it was announced that the service would be agreeable to the Primitive friends, the Wesleyans had but one voice in heartily proffering to repeat it for their benefit. Now that the Wesleyans had landed their "school," ship safely in port, they were most happy to send part of their crew, and lend their sympathy and help to the "Primitive Chapel and School" vessel now struggling with the waves on the open sea; and he doubted not that soon the Primitives would anchor in "out of debt" harbour. Referring to the first juvenile concert given in Rothwell, he told with what little support the idea was received, but what a great success it attained, and said that to-night's gathering proved these concerts still retained their popularity. The service of song was then commenced by Mr. Seanor reading the introduction. As a more particular notice of the various songs was given at the first rendering of this service, it is unnecessary to specify any of them. We never heard the youthful choir sing to more advantage or with more effect, and it was evident from the faces of the audience, and the marked attention and stillness observed throughout, that every one was thoroughly gratified. The somewhat heavy task of reading was well carried out by Mr. Seanor, on whose recovery and reappearance in public, many pleasing remarks were made in the vote of thanks. Mr. Ward the conductor, kept his forces well in hand, and we noticed an improvement in the balance of the various parts.

At the close of the programme, a hearty vote of thanks to the Wesleyan Sunday School, was unanimously passed. After the vote had been passed, Mr. Seanor acknowledged the thanks that had been presented, and in reference to the very critical illness from which he had lately recovered, said he had everybody to thank; from his heart, he thanked our good vicar, the Revd. Mr. Heberden, who had, unsolicited, offered special prayer in the church for him; he thanked his Primitive friends who have so earnestly asked God to bring him to health again, above all he thanked God that he was permitted to do a little more for His glory.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

The following cases have been heard during the past week in the West Riding Police Court at Wakefield.

A LOFTHOUSE MINER ON THE SPREE.—William Sharp, a miner, living at Lofthouse, was charged with having being drunk and incapable on the highway on Sunday, and the 15th instant.—P.-C. Andrew McLaren, deposed that whilst on duty at Lofthouse Gate, about the time named on the morning in question, he observed defendant, (who did not appear) making "an Irishman's effort at progression," taking one step forwards and staggering two backwards! He (the constable) ordered him the best possible assistance, but had considerable difficulty in getting him to his residence.—The defendant's daughter, who appeared on his behalf, stated that her father did not seem to know what he was doing, and what he had being doing upon, on reaching home; but he had subsequently expressed himself very sorry for what had taken place.—Mr. Tew, asked whether this case the defendant's first offence, and the Bench were informed in response to the interrogation, that he had previously being fined 10s. and costs, for being drunk and riotous, and 20s. including expenses, for a similar offence, very recently committed. He was now fined £1 19s. with the alternative of fourteen days' imprisonment, for his present offence.

THREATENING TO MURDER AT LOFTHOUSE GATE: A STRANGE CASE.—A man and woman named Frederick and Emma Allen, who lives in Nook Lane, at Lofthouse Gate, appeared in answer to summonses charging them with having threatened to murder each other.—Police-constable Sugden, who his employed at Mr. Hudson's alum works.—From the the allegation of the man Stead, it would appear that on the day in question, he had occasion to pass the house in which the defendants reside—in fact they all reside in the same locality, and within a short distance of each other.—Upon his passing, the man and woman rushed out, rolled up their sleeves, and declared that they would murder him.—It was likewise alleged by the complainant, that both of the defendants had thrown stones at him.—For the defence, it was argued that the complainant was in the wrong, and was the first to assault the others, and after one or two witnesses had been called to prove that Stead had committed the first assault, and had insulted the defendant's daughter, the Bench said it appeared to them that this was a most strange case, but they would not entertain a doubt that the threats complained of had been used, with having regard to the evidence, the defendants would be bound over in the sum of £10, to keep the peace for three months, and would have to find two sureties in the sum of £5, and pay the expenses 17s. 6d., or go to goal for one month.

A WARNING TO "PITCH AND TOSS" PLAYERS.—Three miners, named William Heaton, George Cooper, and John Blackburn, who live at Lofthouse, were charged with having played at the unlawful pastime of "pitch and toss," on the highway, on Sunday, the 8th inst.—A witness, named Richard Eli, was called to prove that on the afternoon of the day named he saw the three defendants playing at pitch and toss, on the highway at Rothwell. After having watched them for about a quarter of an hour in company with a companion named Henry Bell, just as they were throwing up money, he jumped up on gate, behind which he had being secreted, and cried out "now, then, who is tossing?" The men, thus unwittingly surprised, said nothing, but quietly "sheared off."—The evidence having being informed that Cooper and Heaton had each been previously convicted for drunkenness, imposed fines upon them amounting, with costs, to 25s. each, and a fine of costs, expenses of 10s. upon Blackburn, who had not previously been in trouble.—The magistrates very strongly condemns, not only upon the present, but on all occasions, such breaches of the Sabbath.

NEGLIGENT DRIVING.—A CARLTON WAGGONER RIDING AT EASE THROUGH ROTHWELL.—George Ellis, of Carlton, carter, was summoned by Sergeant Denham, for having about four o'clock on the morning of the 15th inst., whilst in Rothwell, allowed three horses which were drawing his conveyance, to proceed along the highway without having reins attached to them, so that he could exercise no due and proper control over the same. P.-C. Barker, having proved the service of the summons upon the defendant, who did not appear, he proceeded to state that whilst on duty at Rothwell, on the 6th inst. he saw the defendant sitting upon the shafts of a waggon drawn by the horses which were proceeding along the Leeds and Wakefield road, that he had cautioned the defendant directed —The following cases have been heard during the past week in the West Riding Police Court at Wakefield.

A LOFTHOUSE MINER ON THE SPREE.—William Sharp, a miner, living at Lofthouse, was charged with having being drunk and incapable on the highway on Sunday, and the 15th instant.—P.-C. Andrew McLaren, deposed that whilst on duty at Lofthouse Gate, about the time named on the morning in question, he observed defendant, (who did not appear) making "an Irishman's effort at progression," taking one step forwards and staggering two backwards! He (the constable) ordered him the best possible assistance, but had considerable difficulty in getting him to his residence.—The defendant's daughter, who appeared on his behalf, stated that her father did not seem to know what he was doing, and what he had being doing upon, on reaching home; but he had subsequently expressed himself very sorry for what had taken place.—Mr. Tew, asked whether this case the defendant's first offence, and the Bench were informed in response to the interrogation, that he had previously being fined 10s. and costs, for being drunk and riotous, and 20s. including expenses, for a similar offence, very recently committed. He was now fined £1 19s. with the alternative of fourteen days' imprisonment, for his present offence.

THREATENING TO MURDER AT LOFTHOUSE GATE: A STRANGE CASE.—A man and woman named Frederick and Emma Allen, who lives in Nook Lane, at Lofthouse Gate, appeared in answer to summonses charging them with having threatened to murder each other.—Police-constable Sugden, who his employed at Mr. Hudson's alum works.—From the the allegation of the man Stead, it would appear that on the day in question, he had occasion to pass the house in which the defendants reside—in fact they all reside in the same locality, and within a short distance of each other.—Upon his passing, the man and woman rushed out, rolled up their sleeves, and declared that they would murder him.—It was likewise alleged by the complainant, that both of the defendants had thrown stones at him.—For the defence, it was argued that the complainant was in the wrong, and was the first to assault the others, and after one or two witnesses had been called to prove that Stead had committed the first assault, and had insulted the defendant's daughter, the Bench said it appeared to them that this was a most strange case, but they would not entertain a doubt that the threats complained of had been used, with having regard to the evidence, the defendants would be bound over in the sum of £10, to keep the peace for three months, and would have to find two sureties in the sum of £5, and pay the expenses 17s. 6d., or go to goal for one month.

A WARNING TO "PITCH AND TOSS" PLAYERS.—Three miners, named William Heaton, George Cooper, and John Blackburn, who live at Lofthouse, were charged with having played at the unlawful pastime of "pitch and toss," on the highway, on Sunday, the 8th inst.—A witness, named Richard Eli, was called to prove that on the afternoon of the day named he saw the three defendants playing at pitch and toss, on the highway at Rothwell. After having watched them for about a quarter of an hour in company with a companion named Henry Bell, just as they were throwing up money, he jumped up on gate, behind which he had being secreted, and cried out "now, then, who is tossing?" The men, thus unwittingly surprised, said nothing, but quietly "sheared off."—The evidence having being informed that Cooper and Heaton had each been previously convicted for drunkenness, imposed fines upon them amounting, with costs, to 25s. each, and a fine of costs, expenses of 10s. upon Blackburn, who had not previously been in trouble.—The magistrates very strongly condemns, not only upon the present, but on all occasions, such breaches of the Sabbath.

NEGLIGENT DRIVING.—A CARLTON WAGGONER RIDING AT EASE THROUGH ROTHWELL.—George Ellis, of Carlton, carter, was summoned by Sergeant Denham, for having about four o'clock on the morning of the 15th inst., whilst in Rothwell, allowed three horses which were drawing his conveyance, to proceed along the highway without having reins attached to them, so that he could exercise no due and proper control over the same. P.-C. Barker, having proved the service of the summons upon the defendant, who did not appear, he proceeded to state that whilst on duty at Rothwell, on the 6th inst. he saw the defendant sitting upon the shafts of a waggon drawn by the horses which were proceeding along the Leeds and Wakefield road, that he had cautioned the defendant directed the second court, had their attention directed to the investigation of a suit brought by Rebecca Lake, against Robert Ellis, a miner, living at the same place, upon whom she sought to fix the paternity of a bastard child to which she had recently given birth. The space at our disposal will permit of but a brief epitome of the facts adduced in the course of so lengthy a trial. It appeared that the parties had been keeping company in the same village from childhood, and that about two years since became friendly. For the complainant it was urged that Mrs. Ellis, the defendant's mother, who keeps a public-house at Carlton, had both before and subsequent to the birth of the child, endeavoured to effect a "settlement," by giving her a certain sum of money.—The defendant had likewise threatened to murder herself and her child, and she became, at length, so terrified by his conduct and menaces, that she had asserted to anyone who interrogated her that she was enceinte by a young man. The backbone of the defence; but, as the chairman remarked, "the morals of these people were so very loose that no importance could be attached to anything they might have said; but must judge, as best they could, from the preponderance and credibility of the various witnesses."—Thomas Lake, the complainant's brother, a miner, living at Carlton Selina Thackeray, (who admitted that she had given birth to five illegitimate children, some of them to married men); and other witnesses gave evidence for the prosecution to the poor relief Board. After devoting a most patient hearing to the case, the Justices remarked that, whatever might have happened in a general way, they therefore made an order against Ellis to pay the sum of 3s. 6d. per week, their decision, which carried all costs with it, being greeted with mingled hisses and applause.

THE LOCAL BOARD.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

SIR,—In your edition of the "Rothwell Times" last Satuguay, I observed a letter signed "Ratepayer," which endorsed remarks that appeared to me to have been rather too-personal feelings, as they seemed to critisise very severely one or two of the most active members of the Board.

As to the Wakefield Road, which he mentions, I believe 'Ratepayer' will find that if it is to be kept in repair it will always, as a rule, take the lion's share of the highway rate, and I am glad to see it coming to Rothwell as well as any other place.

The Board only having had existence short of one year, cannot be expected to do all in that time, that 'Ratepayer' seems to expect of them, and I think the Board should consist of those active and interested gentlemen of the town (?) which he refers to, could have made more progress than the present Board. As for the drainage, &c., contracted for by the surveyor, Mr. Burt, of the town, which, I suppose, will have to be done before the draining can be proceeded with.

And as to securing candidates having the interests of the town at heart, I believe two of the retiring members of the Board are townsmen (as we may term it) and all the three know what it is to be Ratepayers. Therefore, I think they cannot help but have the interests of the town at heart, and both all due respects to 'Ratepayer') ought not to be slighted with many letters like his.

I am, &c.
ANOTHER RATEPAYER.

ROTHWELL PUBLIC CLOCK.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

SIR,—I think, by and bye, we shall surely get Rothwell into a town, for I observe with pleasure, amongst other signs of progress, that our spirited townsman, Mr. S. Varley, watchmaker, has erected a neat, substantial, and ornamental correct time-keeping clock over his business premises, which both day and night (when it is always illuminated) furnishes gratis to everyone the useful information of the minute, and the hour, besides being a new and striking feature, and, I may say, an ornament to the village. Well, it struck me that it would be a most graceful and proper act of our honourable Board, who of course represent the wishes of the inhabitants of (to use a parliamentary phrase) our large and important village, to assist him, seeing the object is decidedly a public convenience, to bear the burden of the expense, and its maintenance, by providing him with gas, free of charge, for the sole illumination of this "time indicator." Surely friends I have only to look to other towns for the precedent of this line of action.

I trust that as wise men they will always encourage the efforts of the townsmen to improve our ancient village, certainly much needed in its sanitary condition, and architectural aspects.

I am, &c.,
A LOVER OF TRUE PROGRESS.

EXILES IN SIBERIA

It is easier to express than to realise the wish to see liberty among nations, for its realisation is hardly such as to tempt the free colonist to settle within its limits; and thus the Russian Government, which would willingly see its more temperate regions covered with flourishing towns and villages, can only expect an increase of population from the slow growth of time, aided by the annual influx of the involuntary emigrants whom it sends across the Ural to the East. The murdered Emperor has been doomed to trace this melancholy path, particularly during the last century, when the all-powerful favourite of one period was, not seldom sent to exile by the next succeeding revolution. This dwelling was now a simple hut and the spade of the labourer replaced the pen of the statesman. Domestic misfortunes aggravated his errors, and he died from the fatigue of the journey; one of his daughters soon after fell a victim to the small-pox, his two other children, who were attended by the same malady, recovered. He himself died in the year 1729 in a miserable hour his daughter at Berezow, the seat of his exile. Like Cardinal Wolsey, after his fall he remembered God, whom he had forgotten during the swelling tide of his prosperity. His conduct in exile showed him to be a true penitent, which showed him the way to everlasting happiness. He built a chapel, assisted in its erection with his own hands and after the services gave instructions to the congregation. The inhabitants of Berezow preserve his memory, and revere him as a saint. They were confirmed in this belief by the fact that his body, having been disinterred in 1821, was found in a state of perfect preservation, after ninety-two years. One day, as his daughter walked through the village, she was accosted by a peasant from the window of a hut. This peasant was Prince Menschikoff, who had been banished the court who had caused her father's banishment, and was now, in his turn, doomed to taste the bitterness of exile. Soon after, the princess and her brother were banished by the Empress Anna, Dolgorouky took possession of their hut. Young Mentschikoff was finally reinstated in all the honours and riches of his father, and from him descends in a direct line the present defender of Sebastopol. —The Polar World

Thomas Halliday, and John Worrall, president and secretary of the Miners' Amalgamated Society, with seven agents, were charged at the Manchester Assizes on Thursday, with conspiracy, to induce the miners to leave their employment. The Jury not agreeing, were dismissed.

KAY'S COMPOUND ESSENCE OF LINSEED, for Coughs and Colds, is now sold by all Druggists.—Beware of spurious imitations.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—With the changing season it is prudent to be on the alert to rectify any existing disorder of the liver, but it is incumbent on the aged, suffering under ulcerations and similar sources of debility, to have them removed, as, if neglected, worse consequences will follow. This Ointment is their remedy; on its powers all may confidently rely; it not merely heals the sores, but expurgates the mischief at its root, extracts the corroding poison, and stimulates nature to fill up the cavity with sound, healthy substance, which will abide through life. Under this treatment bad legs soon become sound, scrofulous skins cast off their scales, and foul ulcers cease to annoy. Such hope for the diseased was unknown in former days.

WONDERFUL EFFICACY OF DR. CODARTH'S REMEDY IN CONSUMPTION.—See the new edition (116th) of Mr. George Thomas Congreves book "ON CONSUMPTION, ITS CAUSE, CURE, and Decline, and Only Successful Treatment;" showing that formidable disease to be curable in all its stages; with additional Cures, Cases, and Testimonials from the poor relief Board. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s 1½d per bottle.—Manufactured in New York, and at 493 Oxford-street, London.

DINNER TO MR. MACDONALD, M.P., AND MR. BURT, M.P.

A complimentary dinner to Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Burt, the working-men representatives of Stafford and Morpeth, as well as, to the other Labour candidates at the late general election was given on the 11th, at Anderton and Flest-street, London. The chair was occupied by Mr. W. Allan, president of the Labour Representation League. There was between 70 and 80 guests present. After dinner, the chairman briefly proposed the health of Her Majesty the Queen.

At the Chairman's request,

Mr. Lloyd Jones presented Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Burt two addresses, engrossed on vellum and suitably framed—they were identical in language—expressing satisfaction at the return of Messrs. Burt and Macdonald, committing to their care the interests of working men, and promising to increase the number of working-men's representatives as speedily as possible.

Mr. Macdonald, who was loudly cheered, said he and his colleague, Mr. Burt, would steadily and unhesitatingly endeavour to discharge their duties to the satisfaction of their constituents. They had taken their seats on the side of the Liberal party, but they were there unhamstrung by party, for they would pursue that policy to do as they thought for their constituences and the country.

Mr. Burt who was also cheered attributed their reception not to personal considerations but to the fact that they had been able to break that restriction that had hitherto kept labour representatives out of Parliament. He should be sorry, however, if they should be regarded as merely class representatives. He thought that it was their duty to look at the class question from the broadest and most general principles for the welfare of the people.

ARTHUR ORTON IN PRISON.—As already stated, early on Saturday morning, Arthur Orton was removed from the gaol at Newgate to Millbank Prison under the charge of two warders. Had it not been that the governor professes the Roman Catholic religion he would have been taken in the first instance to Pentonville Gaol to complete the first part of his penal servitude—namely, nine months. On his arrival at Millbank he underwent the usual treatment of a convict on being received at the gaol, and was then weighed, when although he had fallen off in flesh somewhat since he last appeared in the Court of Queen's Bench—the scale proclaimed the astonishing figure of 392 pounds. At present the governor of the gaol is somewhat puzzled to find a cell large enough to suit the enormous bulk of the convict. A special dress is being arranged for him, and will stay at Millbank for nine months, at the end of which time he be sent to Chatham or Portland.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT HUNSLET.—On Tuesday, Mr. Emsley, the Leeds borough coroner, held an inquest on the body of James Henry Rhodes (21), who was employed at the Airedale Hematite Ironworks, Hunslet, and was accidentally killed at the works on Monday night. About 9 o'clock deceased was on duty above the furnaces, and was standing on a platform connected with a hoist by means of which ironstone is hoisted to the mouth of the furnaces. Wishing to communicate with the men beneath, instead of ringing a bell which was there for that purpose, he approached to the mouth of the hoist and fell a distance of 57 feet, and was killed instantaneously. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death," but recommended that, if practicable, there should be a fence put round the mouth of the hoist to prevent the work people from falling down. The manager of the works, who was present, said that the proprietors would do all they could to prevent such accidents.

A PEDDLER SUING HIS EMPLOYERS.—At the Leeds County Court yesterday, before Mr. V. Thompson, deputy judge, Caleb Jukes Pedder, sued Messrs. Hudson, Middleton, and Co., Hunslet, for £9 10s. Mr. Malcolm appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Middleton, of Middleton and Sons, for the defendants. Mr. Malcolm said that on Saturday, the 20th of December last, the plaintiff received a written notice to leave the works, and he attended in the usual course the place of employment, but was not supplied with materials for work during that fortnight, and he stated that he could have had work in and during that time. For defendants, Mr. Middleton said the works were simply closed because of the Christmas holidays, when puddlers would not work, and because the firm could not work, and because he would nonsuit the plaintiff, but would not make any order as to costs. It was a hardship to him, but he could not say the plaintiff was entitled to recover wages when no one else was working.

ANNUAL DINNER OF THE EMPLOYES AT THE LOFTHOUSE-GATE ALUM WORKS.—PRESENTATION TO MR. SAMUEL KAY.—Connected with all social re-unions there are features of a more or less pleasing nature, but certainly none can be less gratifying than when, added to the ordinary festivities of annual meetings of employers and employed, the proceedings are characterized by that reciprocity of sentiment and that kindly feeling which pervaded the customary yearly gathering of the principals and subordinates of Messrs. Roberts, Hudson and Company's alum works, at Lofthouse-Gate, on Monday evening last. The party of which we speak, numbering some eighty persons, met at the house of Mr. John Dickinson, the vault, after partaking of a most substantial repast, which reflected great credit upon the host, not simply for his culinary arrangements, but for those minor attentions which constitute the Summum bonum of such occasions, there remained the most interesting duty of all to perform—and that consisted of the presentation of a handsome silver lever watch, and of a gold albert chain and locket, to Mr. Samuel Kay, the workmanship of Mr. C. W. Ramsden, jeweller, etc., opposite the Parish Church, Wakefield. The inscription upon the same was as follows:

There were, of course, the necessary accompanying flattering and highly eulogistic speeches in favour of the worthy recipient, after which Mr. Kay replied in a manner that will be well understood, by the simple fact of the presentation, to Mr. Kay, he is held in the highest possible esteem by those with whom he has so long communed, and that the kindly feeling exhibited on this occasion pervades every grade of employé, and extends to the heads of the firm, to whom Mr. Kay has proved himself a tried and trusty servant. We have only to had that the workpeople were indebted to the kindness and liberality of their employers for the goodly repast of which they partook, and for their subsequent enjoyment.

A TALE OF MYSTERY.

CHAPTER XXIII.

ANDREW PROPOSES.—THE INTERVIEW WITH DR. BROWNE.—THE WEDDING PRESENT.—THE GOSSIP IN THE CITY.—THE NAMELESS GRAVE REVISITED.—THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER.

How spad Andrew's wooing while his master sat there, and his girlish mistress walked in the deepening twilight by her future husband's side? His heart beat like a hammer, as he climbed the stair to his mother's house. Would Charlotte Smith refuse him? Would she tell him that her heart was another's? Would she say to him, "There's no harm in asking her, at all events," he said to himself; and with the spirit of this adage, "Andrew pushed open the half-door "uppermost in his mind, he knocked at the door. It was opened by Mrs. Grame.

"I've been long away," she said.

"Ay, mother," he replied; "I had much to say to the master to-day, so I had to tell him before I could go any further. Is she in?"

"Ay, she's in; she's seeing for me. She's a neat hand at her needle, Andrew." Mrs Grame said this in a half-apologetic tone; it seemed as if she were searching for something to set against the antecedent of the woman whom her son wished to make his wife. "She was speaking," she went on, "about your coming for me, and—Miss Smith sat by the table sewing, in the same black dress she had worn all day. She looked very pale when I passed out at his entrance. "Are you come to bid us good-bye, Mr. Grame?" she said; "you leave early to-morrow, you mother says."

"Yes, we go pretty early," he replied. "And I have come to say good-bye, but that's not all I've to say to you."

There was something in his tone that startled her, but she only said, "Indeed?"

"No," he said; "I've something to say to you, only you, before I leave Edinburgh. May I say it now?"

She looked up from her work, startled; she began to comprehend; and her pale face flushed scarlet as she listened. She was a quick-thinking girl, of few words, he told his hopes and wishes. She did not speak, but her head bent lower and lower as he went on, till it lay upon the table, and she burst into a passionate fit of weeping. Andrew spoke soothingly to her.

"I've startled you!" he said. "Ye werena prepared for this from an old man like me; but I'll no hurry ye. Take time! I'll think of what I've said to ye; ye're quite safe here with my mother, ye ken."

"Oh, it's not that," she said, passionately, through her tears. "I little thought it would ever be my lot to win the love of such a man as you. You are so good, too generous, Mr. Grame. You cannot, must not marry me."

"And why cannot I? why must I not? If I love you, and you can make up your mind to take me," he continued, drawing her to him as he loud rested on his shoulder. "Shall I tell you something?—I know all about this terrible past. You have been true that was your fault—but I forgive you. I told me of it; told me how you had striven and struggled for a better life, how you had striven, long, and poverty, and toil, to atone for what came upon ye, when yer face was fair, and yer knowledge of this world was little. Now, dear one, that temptation ye had resisted. Let be hurry the past in to-day's open grave, and ye shall begin a new life and self reproach, I'll never place to gratitude and joy; his nobleness of heart overcame her. "Well," he said, after a pause, "are ye afraid?" Poor girl! She made no reply, but her hand was placed trembling in his, and their compact was sealed. And so the day for their wedding was fixed upon, even till Mrs. Grame's patience was exhausted, and she came in; Andrew, happy in his prospects, remained not much on his future wife. Charlotte, her heart filled with thankful love to him who was going to snatch her from a life of drudgery, to one of comfort and ease, from one she had always deemed unattainable to her,—an honest man's wife, and the mistress of a happy home.

"It's all right, I suppose," said Dr. Browne, with a smile, as Andrew entered his room to put the finishing touches to the packing of his master's portmanteau.

"Yes, sir," said Andrew respectfully. "It's all as I wished; she will stay with my mother awhile, till you get back to Earlsford, sir; and then—"

"And then she will be transformed into Mrs. Andrew Grame, I suppose."

"Yes, sir."

"I shall have to look out for a wife myself," the doctor said, laughing, or I shall be completely forsaken in my old years. Perhaps you are right, Andrew. I saw you lay a stratum of shirts under all those miscellaneous articles you are cramming into that portmanteau; even love won't make it hold everything, Andrew."

Andrew started and laughed; he was stuffing a many a piece of note and beauty that she had read of, and dreamed long day-dreams about, when she lived with her grandfather and her faithful love. She traversed many a battle plain made memorable by the terrible wars, which set brother in arms against brother, friend against friend; or where freedom, poor in all except love of right and justice, raised itself against oppression, strong in the arm of might, and prevailed in the unequal struggle. From English memories of the mighty past, they turned to the wars of their own poor Holden Field, where the lost battle struck the death-blow to a monarchs' broken heart; upon wild Culloden with its wasted moors and heather, where the last descendant of his kingly race, who vainly tried to win back a crown, for ever passed away, saw the wreck of his hopes, his life, his ambition, and turned, a fugitive from the land of his fathers. They saw the glorious battlefields, too, in all their autumn beauty; and when the weather grew cold they turned their faces homewards.

Dr. Browne had visited Ireland as well, but they lingered solong in the north, that they could not spare the time. "We are to have an extraordinary Christmas here, Jessy," he said, "and you will need some little time for preparation."

FUNERAL SERMON FOR THE LATE MR. HARGREAVES.

On Wednesday evening last, the Rev. J. Rhodes, of Wakefield, preached in the Wesleyan Chapel, Rothwell, with special reference to the life and death of the late Mr. Hargreaves. There was a large congregation, including many relatives of the deceased.—The text chosen by the preacher for his text was Rev. vii, 9. He said that the words of his text referred to the church triumphant gathered in heaven, and that their meeting that night had special reference to the removal of one to that church, who had for esteem and respect, and he asked his hearers to fix their thoughts on heaven and its inhabitants.

He said the first thing which would strike Brother Hargreaves on entering heaven, would probably be the great number of its inhabitants, as it had evidently caused astonishment in the mind of John, in his apocalyptic vision. — Notwithstanding the immense number of wicked and heathen people in the world, they were not few who would be saved. It was a glorious fact, that all our little ones go right to heaven. When the millenium began to dawn, and wars gradually cease, and men live temperately in all things, the population of the world will be greatly increased, and the Kingdom of peace and Christ spread more amazingly, till then heaven will become more quickly populated. It will be a multitude which no man can number. After a most eloquent and impressive discourse, Mr. Rhodes read a short notice of Mr. Hargreaves, with which our readers are already acquainted, and urged his hearers to imitate those qualities which make his memory fragrant.—"Our brother being dead, yet speaketh."

During the service, the choir sang, 'Vital Spark,' in an effective style, and at the close, the 'Dead March' was played, in honour of the much-respected deceased.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.
CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
From Lord FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December 1868.
"I have used your CHLORODYNE with this Hour look very favourably some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful Medicine, will be glad to have half-a-dozen bottles sent on since to my address."
From Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging terribly in that city and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st December 1864.
CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY and IMITATIONS.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the Defendant, FREEMAN, was deliberately guilty of Perjury, which he repeated in court, and had been sworn to similar facts in July, 1864.
Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.
SOLE MANUFACTURER—J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London.

Chapter I. is as follows to Sufferers from Debility, and other Authors, resulting from Exhausting power, Self-abuse, Impaired Health, Nervous Irritation, and Prostration. Which have been successfully treated by Dr. Smith's Scientific and Medical Treatment, and have been cured by the New ELECTRIC MEDICINES.
The Pamphlet is sent FREE by post to any address, on receipt of two stamps. Should be read by all who value health, strength, and happiness.—Address, DR. SMITH, 9, Dorset Crescent, London Road, Liverpool.

MR. THOMAS HUTCHINSON, 21, GARDEN PLACE, DUNCOMBE HILL, HUNSLET, LEEDS, informs the public that he has had thirty years practice in curing those old diseases that are given up and deemed incurable by those fellows that call themselves Doctors.—In 1848, he was fetched from a village sixty miles from Leeds to cure those diseases that were under the Leeds Doctors, and has remained ever since in Leeds, after draining the people's pockets, left to suffer and die with their diseases, and go to premature graves, with the belief that their diseases were incurable.
The few following Testimonials are selected from hundreds of cases of cancers, fistulas, &c., that he has cured while practicing in Leeds.
TESTIMONIALS.
Sir,—This is to certify, that you cured me two Abscesses on my Leg and Foot in three weeks, after being under Leeds and Holbeck-field Doctors ten years. Wm. Taylor, Ingram Street, Holbeck.
Sir,—For fifteen months I was in a Decline and confined to bed nearly the whole of the time, I had all the most noted Doctors in Leeds and Holbeck attending me to no purpose, till I took your Medicine which restored me to good health in one month.
Mary Medley, Clark's Place, Ingram Street, Holbeck, Leeds.
Sir,—For three years I took Pills and Medicine to be cured, till I took your Medicine, which cured them in five weeks.
John Slater, 5, Peasel Street, 16 cottages, Meadow Lane, Leeds.
Sir,—I was confined to bed with Rheumatism in every part of my body for eighteen months, and had spent on doctors about ten pounds without receiving the least relief, I applied to you, when you cured me in a few weeks with a box of pills. Mary Hartley, Carver Buildings, Dewsbury Road, Hunslet, Leeds.
Sir,—I suffered for five years with asthma, Dropsy, and Bad Leg, you undertook and cured me perfectly in six weeks.
Leg, you undertook and cured me perfectly in six weeks. Nancy Harrison, Holbeck Moorside, Leeds.
Sir,—For seven years I suffered greatly from a large Abscess on my Hip, and had doctors at the time attending me but got no better, till you came and applied your remedy only once, which wrought a perfect cure, you deserve great praise.
James Stringer, Burwood, Wakefield
Sir,—For fourteen months I was confined to bed with a Decline and had Doctors' Medicine to no purpose, I then purchased a box of your Pills, and before I had taken the eighth part of the first, I sent for you when you gave me a 5s. bottle of your valuable medicine, which restored me to perfect health, and I have remained so ever since, being in the year of 1870, when you performed the wonderful cure on me, Sarah Walker, Blackhorse, Wakefield

OF
Spring Novelties.
Messrs
have pleasure in announcing that their Spring arrangements are now complete. The whole of their purchases, amounting to over £14,000, have come to hand, and been marked off, on the smallest remunerative scale of profits. As they still adhere to their principle of paying ready money for everything, thereby securing many advantages, their prices will be found to compare favourably with those of any warehouse in the United Kingdom.
They would also beg to remind those who are in the habit of making their purchases in London through Patterns or otherwise, that should such visit their Bazaar of Fashions in Boar Lane, Trinity Street, and Bank Street, they will be easily convinced that a richer and better assorted Stock of fresh and fashionable Drapery Goods, at more moderate prices, is not to be seen anywhere, while in many instances they can be served quite 10 per cent cheaper than in London Houses.
Having an agent in Paris and London, any article they may for the moment be out of can be had on the shortest notice, bought with care, taste, and judgment. They have also found it advantageous to purchase their trimmings and dresses with regard to a perfect match, thereby saving much trouble to their customers.
Annexed is a List of Purchases made this Season in the leading departments:—

SILK DEPARTMENT.
Never at any period have silks been so cheap as this season; they have consequently bought more largely and of a richer class than on former occasions.
Lot 1. 13 pieces Coloured Glace, 2s. 7½d. per yard.
2. 11 pieces ditto "any length cut," 3s. 3½d. per yard.
3. 18 pieces Rich Gro Grain French, 3s. 9d. per yard.
4. 15 pieces Extra Rich French, 4s. 9d. per yard.
5. 30 pieces Fancy Stripes and Cheques, suitable for young ladies wear, 2s. 4½d. and 3s. 6d per yard.
6. 50 pieces Rich Japanese, all the new colours, 2s. 3½d. per yard.
7. 25 pieces Black Glace from 1s. 11½d. per yard.
8. 16 pieces Gro Grain, wear guaranteed, 2s. 11½d. per yard.
9. 30 pieces Very Rich Black Silk, all the leading makes, 4s. 6d. to 12s. per yard.
10. Every New Shade in Trimming Silk, Turquoise, Satins, &c.
Real Irish Poplins.

FANCY DRESS DEPARTMENT.
In this department they will show over 4,000 yards of the Newest Materials for Dresses and Costumes, including Homespun Silk Serge, French Diagonals, Satin Laines, Cambrian Cloths, &c.
Lot 1. 5,000 yards Plain Balerne Cloth, Glace Alpacas, Poplins, and Serges, in every new shade, 7½d. per yard.
2. 6,000 yards Diagonal Serge, Roman Repps, Camlets, Poplins, Glace Alpacas, and Homespun, 9½d. per yard, worth 1s. 2d.
3. 7,500 yards Silk-finished Balernoes, Silk-striped Poplins, Homespun, &c., 1s. 0½d. per yard, worth 1s. 6d.
4. 6,000 yards Norwich-made Dress Goods, including Silk Serge, Silk Warp Alpacas, Mohairs, Silk Stripes, Balernoes, Cambrian Cloths, Homespun, &c., in every new shade, 1s. 6½d. per yard.
5. 5,300 yards Bright Silk Terry Cords, brilliant colours, 2s. 6½d., to 12s. per yard.

MANTLE AND COSTUME DEPARTMENT.
J.M. and P. having opened their much-enlarged and greatly improved Show Rooms, they will be found to contain a magnificent display of New Seasonable and Fashionable Goods; Black Silk Costumes, neatly trimmed, from five to fifteen guineas. Fancy Material Costumes in all the leading designs of the season, and made of the newest materials, from 14s. 9d. to seven guineas. Silk, Velvet, and Cashmere Jackets and Mantles, this season's designs, at exceedingly moderate prices. A large assortment of new Shawls. One special lot of 300 Algerian Stripes, 7s. 11d., worth at least 10s. 6d. Homespun Polonaises.

LACE AND FLOWER DEPARTMENT.
Having secured a stock of Edgings and Flowers, about half-price, they would direct special attention to the following:—
Swiss Flounces, 10½d., 11½d., 1s. 0½d., usual price, 1s. 6d., 1s. 9d. 1s. 11½d. per yard. A beautiful assortment of new Flowers, Trails, Feathers, Diaries, &c. The Lace Department contains all that is new in patterns and make. New Brussels Washing Net, New Veils, Collars, Cuffs, Sleeves, &c., &c.

RIBBON & FANCY DEPARTMENT.
New Rich Sash Ribbons, including the Czarevna, Alexandra, &c. All the New Shades of Bonnet Ribbons, with narrow widths to match. Fancy Scarfs: The variety in this department is too numerous to mention in detail; everything that is new and beautiful in a Scarf from 7½d. to 11s. 6d.

Ladies' Satchels and Parasols.
The richest and largest Stock of Sachels ever shown in Leeds, from 2s. 9d. to 27s. 6d. New Parasols arriving daily. 150 all Silk Umbrellas, 6s. 4d., worth 9s. 9d.

The Glove department contains every available make of Kid Gloves. Their 1s. 11½d. Danish highly recommended. Silk Thread Taffetta and other makes in Spring Gloves. Ladies' Gents' and Children's.

PRINT DEPARTMENT.
Our Print department has gained such a celebrity for cheapness and fast colours, that no comment is necessary. 70 pieces White Pique, 7½d. per yard.

LINEN & CALICO DEPARTMENT.
Linen Damask Table Cloths with Slips and Napkins to match.
Every make of Linen for Sheeting, Shirting, etc.
Quilts, Towelling, and Calicoes, have not been so cheap since the Lancashire famine.
160 Dozen Linen Handkerchiefs, 5½d. each.

MOURNING DEPARTMENT.
This department is one of the most complete of its sort in the kingdom, nothing being admitted into stock unless wear and dye can be guaranteed.

MILLINERY
Ladies are invited to walk round the Millinery Show Rooms. Spring Millinery daily arriving from the leading Court Milliners.

BABY LINEN AND UNDER-CLOTHING.
This department never was so full of variety in Children's Pelisses, Infants' Robes, and Chemises, from the lowest price to the richest goods manufactured.
Satin Skirts, excel in beauty of design, in new Pletings, Flutings, etc. Coloured and Black.
Several Cases of Stays, from 2s. 9d. each.

BOOT DEPARTMENT.
It may not be generally known that Milling and Partners have a very large stock of the above in every size and make. Some of their best goods, being confined to themselves, will be found well-made and excellent value. White Kid and Bronze Boots, Slippers, &c.

BERLIN WOOL DEPARTMENT.
In this department will be found a fresh supply of Worked Slippers, Cushions, Fender Stools, and everything pertaining of Fancy Work, the young lady in charge having returned from the Bazaars of Fashion, in London and elsewhere.

THE LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

In a few days our readers of Rothwell, Rothwell Haigh, and Royds Green, will be called upon to say who shall occupy the four vacant seats at the Local Board, and to decide on the most likely men, to use their money to the best advantage. The columns of this journal have lately borne constant reminders of this fact, and have also been a useful medium, for the expression of the various views held by our correspondents.

Our object in writing now, is to set before our readers, the importance of giving their votes carefully and intelligently. Let us remind you that the men you elect this year, will be, so far as they are concerned, the leviers of your rates, the executors of reforms, the mouth-piece of the electors, the spenders of your money for three years. This year, also, you have four men to send—nearly half the Board, a privilege you will probably not have the opportunity of exercising next year. During these three years, very important and very expensive schemes will be brought forward and decided to be executed. The Drainage of the town will have to be thoroughly perfected; the water supply will occupy immediate attention, and have to be faced; the streets of the town, and the highways must be looked after, and put into respectable condition; and besides these great works, all the innumerable and at present, perhaps unknown, improvements, removals, alterations, &c., &c., which are ever coming to the front.

It becomer every elector of the district, to consider well, the importance of his decision, and to exercise his choice so as to secure the very best men; and if he has a personal crotchet, complaint, or wish, to select those persons who will forward his wishes, and remedy his complaint or coincide with his pet idea.

As there are eleven nominations, three of them being the old members, surely everybody will have the fortune to hit on "the right man for him."

If "another ratepayer," is quite satisfied with the conduct of the retiring members he will be able to express that satisfaction by returning them. If "a ratepayer" would like some new blood, there are eight gentlemen to choose from If "an elector" is anxious to introduce dissenters and liberals into the Board Room,—there are no less than five persons nominated who would represent his wishes.

Surely every ratepayer will find "a man after his own heart," and to all we offer this counsel. Vote in a manly, upright fashion; don't be influenced by fear or favour. Use your vote as a sacred trust, and act according to your own sense of right and let others do the same. If you get in the men you desire, you will have the pleasing consciousness of having assisted them; and if you do not obtain the seats for your candidate, you will have the proud assurance of having acted according to your conscience, and that no wrong means have been made use of.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

The following cases have been heard during the past week in the West Riding Police Court at Wakefield.

THE BEGGING NUISANCE AT ROTHWELL.—A miserably clad man, named William Hinnigan, who stated that he was a tramp, who had for some time been working at Wigan, and who has lately been wandering about Leeds and Hunslet, was charged with having, on the 22nd inst., unlawfully wandered abroad at Rothwell Haigh, and solicited alms. The Chairman said he would have to go to gaol for seven days, where he would have the pleasure of doing at least a little bit of "hard labour."

A ROTHWELL HAIGH INNKEEPER SUMMONED FOR RATES.—Mr. Thomas Birkinshaw, publican, Rothwell Haigh, was summoned by Mr. Keithley, overseer, Lofthouse, for the non-payment of two highway rates for the non-payment of two highway rates amounting altogether to £1 16s. 7d. The defendant did not appear, and, in compliance with the overseer's application, the Bench granted a warrant against him.

THE BOARD ELECTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

SIR,—I am glad to see that some interest is taken in the doings of our Board, and while agreeing with some remarks made in the letters of "A Ratepayer', and 'Another the Ratepayer,' I think there is still another side of the matter, which has not been looked at. Our present Board consists of one class of people,—in several respects, and it seems to me, that some equitable representation could be obtained by sending some members, who would be specially charged with looking after Relarals to Liberals in politics, dissenters in religion, and the labour question socially. I am not wishful to make the election a party question, I should like all opinions to be represented.

Trusting this will find a place in your next issue.

I am, &c.,

AN ELECTOR.

The adjourned Meeting held on Tuesday, at the National School-room, was only thinly attended, and no further progress made.

The business is again adjourned.

The Secret Marriage:

A TALE OF MYSTERY.

This exceedingly interesting Tale will be concluded next week, and arrangements are making for other Tales of equal merit.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE DOUBLE WEDDING—A GENERAL RECAPITULATION AND WINDING-UP—A DISCOVERY — THE END.

Six years have passed away since the double wedding, when Clara Malcolm and Nelly Deane stood together at the altar, and gave "their hands, with their hearts in them" to the men of their choice. Happy assentiful years they have been, for Earlsford is a quiet place, and little ever occurs in its even course to disturb the peaceful tenor of its inhabitants. Dr. Browne is still to be seen, hale and hearty as ever, doing a good deal of business in the way of advice, greets among his patients, but no way interfering with the aristocratic practice of his popular successor. They are near neighbours and fast friends still even the Doctor's staunchest allie are happy and content in Dr. Mildmay's care. A thorough man of the world, as well as an experienced physician, he has managed, by his winning manners and professional tact, to ingratiate himself with all, and his popularity bade fair to equal his predecessor's, even in these latter days. In addition to his own good qualities, he had looked out that the handsomest girl in Earlsford was his wife, and she managed his house and headed his table with such finished elegance, and whose pleasant soirees and lady-like dinner parties would birth and education, was actually a baronet's first cousin! and relation, was actually a baronet's first cousin! and immediately "society" received her with open arms and declared her a most desirable addition to their ranks. Mrs. Mildmay perfectly understood all this, and laughed in her sleeve at it, but accepted the position notwithstanding.

The doctor's old house in Castle Street has long ceased to be quiet or dull; unwonted noises disturb the silence now, the patter-patter of tiny feet, and bursts of ringing laughter, and feeble infant cries—for Nelly is a mother, and her house fairly teems with life and excitement,—and merry romps take place in the room were patients used to wait in trembling eagerness for the entrance of the doctor, where not a word or sound unheeded on the floor above but a speck was allowed to remain in the field of days. The very sanctum of the doctor once seems to have changed the atmosphere of the place; even the housekeeper, formerly sopring, grim, has softened to "little darlings," and allows them to tormount her as they please. There are three: the young heir, a lovely boy, just five years old, Eustace Henry Browne Hartley. His father protested against his second name, as recalling all sorts of painful memories, but Nelly willed it so, and Nelly's will was law. Then there was Nelly three years old; Ellen Augusta, the child of Nelly's elder sister, and baby Ethel, named after no one in particular, but called so, as her father used laugh ingly to say, in a romantic fit of his wife's, aided and abetted by Mrs. Dalton. Those little people are the darlings of Dr. Browne's heart, and have lived in Castle Street ever since their parents went on long discussion over their health and happiness, and their future well-being: did the doctor hold with his father-and-law, or the grandmother on that Andrew showed Nelly and her grandmother on that windy March morning when Mrs. Deane first sought his master's aid.

Andrew is established in a tiny cottage close at the back of the doctor's house, with his nice-looking wife by his side—for Charlotte has improved wonderfully in these few peaceful years, and looks far younger in these few peaceful years, and looks far younger than in the old Edinburgh days of sorrow and distress.

Mrs. Grame is very much thought of in her sphere of society, and looked up to, as a person who knows a great deal of high life, seeing that she is sometimes called in to attend at the doctor's, and sometimes at the house of Nelly's father, who is very fond of her, extremely fond of his mother's friend, and though his daughters look down on the Andrews as mere nobodies in their care, they like the little lassies very much, with her quaint, old-fashioned ways, and her slight Scottish accent, which she has caught from her father. Little Jessie is a prime favourite with the sturdy young heir of Earlsford, and many a happy romp they have spend in the lovely gardens round Eustace Hartley's mansion.

One thing the good folks wondered about Andrew and Charlotte never at all to their satisfaction, and that is, who Mrs. Grame can possibly have been. All guessing in vain, and agree, or she would have looked lady, lived with her cousin, and so well higher; but then she came of a very large family, fitted out. Andrew would say that her "things" must have cost "a power of money," but they cast come to no definite conclusion on the subject. Andrew was evidently ashamed of pumping, and his wife put an impenetrable reserve when any one tried to pump her, so the secret is safe with all the world, except Andrew and the poor ballet-dancer is his face who know it, and the poor ballet-dancer is happy at last.

Clara Malcolm was not far off; her husband had a living within the compass of a morning's drive, and the intercourse of the two families was uninterrupted. Their married life had not been without its trials; she had lost her only child, a charming little girl, for whom she grieved sadly, and the rector of Bullingham family, and the rector of Bullingham family, and the rector of Bullingham family

MR. THOMAS HUTCHINSON, 21, GARDEN PLACE, DEWSBURY ROAD, HUNSLET, LEEDS, informs the public that he has had thirty years practice in curing those old diseases that are given up by the Leeds Doctors, and has remained ever since in Leeds, after declining the people's pockets, and to suffer and die with their diseases, and go to premature graves, with the belief that their diseases were incurable.
The following Testimonials are selected from hundreds of cases of cancers, fistulas, &c., that he has cured while practising in Leeds.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

The usual fortnightly Meeting of the Board took place in the Board Room, on Monday last, present:—J. Charlesworth, Esq., (chairman), Hargreaves, Sanderson, Dickinson, Bumby, Clayton, Kendrew, and Webster, S. Hargreaves, Clerk.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

A letter was read from the Local Government Board, asking what steps had been taken by the Board during the prevalence of the late severe epidemic, and also what was the present state of health.—It being thought desirable, the Medical Officer was at once sent for, with a view to a reply.

The 'water supply' from Stourton Well having been introduced, the question of how the expense was to be met occupied the attention of the Board. There are three ways of doing this—by subscription, rate, or private company.—Mr. Sanderson said if they laid a rate, there would be much ado about it, and an inspector would be sent down from London who would go in for something grand and thorough.—Mr. Kendrew thought the plan of piping down to Church Well would supply all Rothwell, and would be the most inexpensive method. He was disinclined to lay out a lot of money on a grand scheme, but would utilise the springs they had water we have by bringing it nearer, and then buy the Penistone water of the Wakefield Water-works Co.—The Chairman reminded the Board that they could do nothing definitely, till Mr. Bromet's draft arrived; the Clerk was instructed to write for it.

In a conversation which ensued, it was stated that there is a very strong spring of splendid water at Rose Pit, which belonged to Mr. Hargreaves, might be depended upon for a constant supply, while it was quite certain that, sooner or later, the water from Swithin's and Bushy Cliff will be taken by the pits.—The plan of bringing the water from Stourton Well in pipes, down to the Churchyard, seems the most probable means to be adopted; Mr. Bromet has agreed to allow a reservoir or cistern to be made there, and it is proposed also to have a smaller tank as close to the main street as possible, near Mrs. G. Dobson's.—In reply to other various, the Chairman said the agreement with Mr. Bromet did not in any way touch the vexed question which was raised some years ago, between the people of Rothwell and Lord Stourton, as to whom the well belongs to, that is left as it is, undecided; Lord Stourton gives permission to lay the piping through his land, for which we shall pay 5s. per year, acknowledgment.—Mr. Hargreaves stated that he will be glad to bring to the Board, some measurement and calculations he had previously made, which would enable them to estimate the cost of the Stourton Well scheme.—It was cost of the Stourton Well scheme.—It was then proposed by Mr. Sanderson, seconded by Mr. Bumby and carried,—that Messrs. Hargreaves, Dickinson, and Clayton form a committee to enquire into, and report on the probable expense of above scheme.

The inspector of nuisances being called upon to make any statement or report he wished, said he had seen Mr. Holmes, who, in reference to the report of last Board Meeting, said he would be glad to remedy any defect or reason any nuisance pointed out to him, without its being mentioned at the Board; with reference to the privies complained of, the inspector stated that they were about 5 feet below the surface, and that there was a well of Baines's within 4 or 5 yards of them, but which was not used at all for drinking purposes.—The inspector was requested to ask Mr. Holmes to fill up the places to a level with the surface.

The letter from the Local Government Board having been handed to Dr. Heaps, of the clerk was instructed to forward a copy of the letter to the Doctor, who will reply as to the precautions and remedies taken by his directions during the prevalence of fever in Rothwell.—In reply to a question, the Medical Officer said there were no cases of fever in his district. It having been understood by some members that a resolution had been passed to request the Medical Officer to furnish a monthly report of health of the town; Dr. Heaps asked that the minutes and the letter copy-book might be looked through, as he had received no official intimation to that effect, except once during the fever, when he attended and reported.—The clerk having examined the proceedings, could find no resolution or letter of the character alluded to, and the Board there upon acquitted the Doctor of any negligence. The Doctor said he should always be happy to attend a meeting, or make report when desired. Replying to other questions, he said—that in all contagious diseases, the case ought to be isolated, or, if possible, removed to the patient to a temporary hospital and disinfect the house and clothing.

Several cases of overcrowding are known to exist in the town, and the Board gave directions to have them looked into.

The inspector was ordered to write another notice to Mrs. Dickinson respecting the cinder heap, and about new cow-building

A letter from Mr. Good, Wakefield Road, asking whose duty it is to empty the ashpits, was then read,—the clerk was instructed to reply that it is the business of the tenant to have it removed.

The Chairman introduced for discussion, the mode of distributing and collecting the voting papers to be used at the coming election, and recommended that the papers be sent out doubled in four, the electors being requested to return them in the same way.—It was suggested that the collector carry a sort of box locked, and with a slit at the top, into which the paper may be dropped, thus preventing any one seeing the votes of the elector, until the boxes are unlocked and emptied by the returning officer and the clerk; all arrangements, however, will rest with the above persons.—The voting papers to be distributed on Wednesday, and collected to-day, the counting up and declaration on Monday.

The clerk was instructed to obtain an order book to use for every order from the Board, and all invoices must be signed by the clerk.

Mr. Hargreaves urged the necessity of having some stone on the streets and roads of Rothwell.—After some discussion as to the best and cheapest mode of having the stone delivered, it was decided that as there is an arrangement with Messrs. J. and J. Charlesworth, to bring trucks of material for the Board, at the rate of 3d. per ton, that some load shall be brought up to Rose Pit, to be emptied by the Board, who have also the leave of Messrs. Charlesworth to break the stone near the pit, the metal can then be led to those streets which require it.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "FLORILINE" (forming a new tooth-brush) produces a pleasant lather, which cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the Teeth a peculiar pearly whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delightful to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s 6d for the Liquid, and 1s per jar for the Floriline "Powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford-street, London.

THE OULTON WATER SUPPLY.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,—Seeing in your last issue the adjourned meeting of the Oulton Water Supply, I ask why should it not be adjourned, when we have plenty of water at home, only wants sinking for; the sinking of Woodlesford Town-well, has being going on this last fortnight, and what is the result? there is plenty water to supply the whole village if there was no other, rt a depth of 28 yards, and there is plenty in Oulton if it was sunk for, and what would be the cost of two or three wells sinking to the cost of the supply from Wakefield? It would be a mere nothing! Then I say, why should we not put off these meetings, and seek water at home, to the benefit of our health and pockets?

Hoping this will find a place in your next,

I am, &c.,

WEDDING SUPPER AT ROTHWELL.—Mr. Hutton, Thomas and Wm. Pickersgill, and Thomas Bedford, respectable-looking young men, were charged with having been guilty and riotous, at Rothwell Haigh, on the 23rd ult.—Police constable Balfour spoke to seeing the defendants near a private house, and kicking up a row on the highway. A report was brought to him that Hutton and Pickersgill were fighting; he found the former stript, the latter with shirt, and Pickersgill was in his shirt sleeves, and they were evidently in for a row.—One of the defendant's told the Bench that the reason of all was that there had been a wedding in the neighbourhood, had been a wedding in the neighbourhood, had been a wedding in the neighbourhood,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.
CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphteria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
THE ONLY GENUINE.—From JAMES FREETH CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December 1868.
"Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half-a-dozen bottles sent as once to the above address."
From Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, 1st December 1866.
CAUTION.—BEWARE of PIRACY and IMITATIONS.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of Mr. Newton, FREETH, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July 1864.
Sold in Bottles at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, & 4s 6d and 11s each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.
Sole Manufacturer: JOHN T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London.

GRAND OPENING SHOW!
OF
Spring Novelties.
Messrs
have pleasure in announcing that their Spring arrangements are now complete. The whole of their purchases, amounting to over £14,000, have come to hand, and been marked off, on the smallest remunerative scale of profits. As they still adhere to their principle of paying ready money for everything, thereby securing many advantages, their prices will be found to compare favourably with those of any warehouse in the United Kingdom.
They would also beg to remind those who are in the habit of making their purchases in London through Patterns or otherwise, that should such visit their Bazaar of Fashions in Boar Lane, Trinity Street, and Bank Street, they will be easily convinced that a richer and better assorted Stock of fresh and fashionable Drapery Goods, at more moderate prices, is not to be seen anywhere, while in many instances they can be served quite 10 per cent cheaper than in London Houses.
Having an agent in Paris and London, any article they may for the moment be out of can be had on the shortest notice, bought with care, taste, and judgment. They have also found it advantageous to purchase their trimmings and dresses with regard to a perfect match, thereby saving much trouble to their customers.
Annexed is a List of Purchases made this Season in the leading departments:—

SILK DEPARTMENT.
Never at any period have silks been so cheap as this season; they have consequently bought more largely and of a richer class than on former occasions.
Lot 1. 13 pieces Coloured Glace, 2s. 7½d. per yard.
2. 14 pieces ditto "any length cut," 3s. 3½d. per yard.
3. 18 pieces Rich Gro Grain French, 3s. 9d. per yard.
4. 15 pieces Extra Rich French, 4s. 9d. per yard.
5. 30 pieces Fancy Stripes and Cheques, suitable for young ladies wear, 2s. 4½d. and 3s. 6d per yard.
6. 50 pieces Rich Japanese, all the new colours, 2s. 3½d. per yard.
7. 25 pieces Black Glace from 1s. 11½d. per yard.
8. 16 pieces Gro Grain, wear guaranteed, 2s. 11½d. per yard.
9. 30 pieces Very Rich Black Silk, all the leading makes, 4s. 6d. to 12s. per yard.
10. Every New Shade in Trimming Silk, Turquoise, Satins, &c.

NEW SCHOOLS FOR LOFTHOUSE, CARLTON, AND ROBIN HOOD.

On Thursday evening, a public meeting of ratepayers in Lofthouse-with-Carlton, Robin Hood, and Thorpe, was held in the National School-room, Lofthouse, to consider the insufficient school accommodation in the district, and to decide what steps shall be taken in order to make the necessary provision. The Rev. R. Chadwick, incumbent of Lofthouse, having been called to the chair, he stated that it had been evident for some years that more provision should be made for the education of the children, and that the question was not whether more accommodation was needed, but what were the best means to be used for the accomplishment of this end,—whether they should endeavour to raise funds by voluntary subscriptions, or from a School Board, and pay rates. He believed he was correct in stating that a School Board system would cost about £4 a child more than if they were to build the requisite new schools themselves. Their present National School could only hold 164 boys, girls, and infants. The order of the Education Committee was that there must be a new school at Carlton for 150 children, a new school at Robin Hood for 60, and further accommodation at Lofthouse for 80. It had been estimated that the present National School at Lofthouse might be enlarged and the two new schools built for about £1,600, if done by voluntary subscriptions.

Mr. Charlesworth asked what probability there was of the means being raised by themselves; and in reply, it was stated that Messrs. J. and J. Charlesworth had promised £200, and J. Charlesworth, Esq., £200, and a site had also been offered by E. Calverley, Esq., of Oulton; a canvass of 100 houses had also been made in order to obtain an approximate idea of the amount likely to be realized by subscriptions, and it appeared about £150 might be reckoned on. It was stated that the funds can be obtained for the voluntary scheme, it was eventually decided by a majority of three that means should be tried.

The proposition for a School Board was moved by Mr. Appleyard, seconded by Mr. Armitage (Robin Hood), and counted 14 votes.

The amendment, advocating the voluntary scheme, was proposed by Mr. Hammond, seconded by Mr. Hartley (Quarlewell Green), and counted 17 adherents.

On the decision being ascertained, Mr. Scarth wished to have the names of those who voted for raising the £1,000 by subscriptions, and what amounts they would give, the proposal causing considerable amusement and hub-bub; but the question was ruled out of order.

During the meeting it transpired that in the event of a School Board being formed in any rural district, the Board rate would be paid with the Poor rate, and by those who now pay Poor rates; also, that the payment of the cost of Board schools may be spread over a lengthened period not exceeding fifty years; also, that every occupier has a vote at School Board elections.

After deciding that they should first try to collect funds for the erection of voluntary schools, a committee was formed to act with the three managers of the present school in obtaining promises of subscriptions and assisting in the promotion of the scheme. After several gentlemen had declined, the following were duly appointed :—Messrs. Appleyard, Oliver, B. Keighley, Parker, Clarkson, and J. Keighley.

The committee are to make their report at an adjourned public meeting. A vote of thanks to the Chairman, which was duly acknowledged, closed the proceedings.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevent tartar, stops decay, gives to the Teeth a peculiar pearly whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s 6d for the liquid, and 1s per pot for the Floriline "Powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HENRY C. GALLOY, 493 Oxford-street, London.

WESLEYAN SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION.—The annual gathering of teachers in the Wakefield circuit took place at Ossett-cum-Gosh Erisday. In the afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the Teachers' Conference was held in the chapel, presided over by the Rev. I. E. Page. The first subject introduced for discussion was "The best method of teaching the Catechism," in which Messrs. Sugden, Wice, Seanor, Skinner, and others took part. Most of the schools use the Catechism, and the importance of teaching it well and interestingly was strongly urged. This other subject to which attention was called, was "The best means of checking the increase of infidelity and superstition." Mr. Sugden also opened this serious question, and pointed out the two dangers of the Church,—on the one hand infidelity, on the other, the various superstitions and errors seen in some of the creeds and ceremonies of the present day. Remarks were also made by Mr. Marland, of Lee Moor, where Ritualism is working hard to win proselytes; and by other speakers who felt impressed with the necessity of working for spiritual results. At half-past four, a plentiful and good tea was provided in the School-room, to which ample justice was done. At six o'clock, the Public Meeting was held, Mr. Page again taking the chair. After singing and prayer, the annual report was read, from which we learn that seventeen schools are connected with the Union, Oulton having been added during the year. He was happy to say there was an increase in every item. The Union embraces 495 teachers, increase 70; scholars under seven, 755 increase 150; young men and women above fifteen, 494, increase 28; total number of scholars 2877, an increase of 291. Number of Volumes in the libraries, 1868, increase 110. The Delegates appointed by each school, were then called upon to address the meeting. Serjeant Major Hart, (West Parade,) said he was but young in Sunday school work, having spent twenty-one years in the army,—but thought more attention ought to be paid to the ability and character of persons proposed as teachers, and that great discrimination should be exercised, as to the class for which are best suited. The Major also gave a few notices of his life and experiences of children in India. The Armitage (Rothwell,) was next called upon, and said that nearly all children being able to read now, we, as Sunday school teachers must use all powers to draw our scholars to Jesus, and show them the way to heaven. Mr. Smith, (Woodlesford,) referred to former experiences of Sunday-school work, and dwelt on their present improved state. Mr. Stephenson (Lofthouse) after assuring the Union of the pleasure the Lofthouse friends had in seeing them again, in an excellent speech on some of the requisites for a good and useful teacher; first, let the teacher learn to obey, and he will then be able to exercise a command over his class; he must be consistent, regular and punctual in attendance; let him go direct to his class, and be prepared to welcome his scholars as they come in,—he should be willing to take extra duty, of which was illustrate christian affection. Mr. Marland, (Lee Moor,) next spoke on the power of kind words, as against the punishment system,—and also strongly denounced the system of the Romanizing teachers who are now so busy, giving some striking passages out of their publications, proving his point that Ritualism was but popery disguised. Mr. Armitage, (Ardsley,) Mr. Smith, (Normanton,) Mr. Simpson, (Kirkham Gate,) and Mr. Alcock, (Alverthorpe,) also delivered short addresses on Sunday school management. The usual votes of thanks having been passed, and benediction pronounced, this very pleasant and interesting gathering broke up.

ROTHWELL WESLEYAN EASTER TEA.

On Easter Monday, the teachers of the Wesleyan Sunday School held their annual Meeting in the new Schoolroom; Tea was provided at 5 o'clock at which the youngest teachers of the School presided. After the public Meeting was held at half-past six, Mr. S. Batty taking the chair, and opening by singing and prayer.—Mr. Marshall, the Secretary, read the report in which he congratulated the audience on holding their first Easter Meeting in the new Schoolroom. After referring to the opening of the new premises last May, and the success which had attended the undertaking, he was happy to say that the school itself is out of debt; although a small promissory note is still owing by several of the Committee, which will shortly be paid off.

The closing of the school for five weeks on account of the fever in the town, the success of the musical union in their services of song, and the remarkable increase of fourteen in the number of teachers were next dwelt on.—They have, it appears 51 teachers, male and female, 210 scholars, and a library of 250 volumes; during the year, one teacher has died, Mrs. Brooke, who though long suffering, was ever happy and patient. The deaths of several children was also feelingly noticed.

The Chairman in addressing the company felt happy to be connected with their work of faith, and labour of love; he was glad though there seems but little likelihood that the funds can be obtained for the voluntary scheme, it was eventually decided by a majority of three that means should be tried.

The proposition for a School Board was moved by Mr. Appleyard, seconded by Mr. Armitage (Robin Hood), and counted 14 votes.

The amendment, advocating the voluntary scheme, was proposed by Mr. Hammond, seconded by Mr. Hartley (Quarlewell Green), and counted 17 adherents.

On the decision being ascertained, Mr. Scarth wished to have the names of those who voted for raising the £1,000 by subscriptions, and what amounts they would give, the proposal causing considerable amusement and hub-bub; but the question was ruled out of order.

During the meeting it transpired that in the event of a School Board being formed in any rural district, the Board rate would be paid with the Poor rate, and by those who now pay Poor rates; also, that the payment of the cost of Board schools may be spread over a lengthened period not exceeding fifty years; also, that every occupier has a vote at School Board elections.

After deciding that they should first try to collect funds for the erection of voluntary schools, a committee was formed to act with the three managers of the present school in obtaining promises of subscriptions and assisting in the promotion of the scheme. After several gentlemen had declined, the following were duly appointed :—Messrs. Appleyard, Oliver, B. Keighley, Parker, Clarkson, and J. Keighley.

The committee are to make their report at an adjourned public meeting. A vote of thanks to the Chairman, which was duly acknowledged, closed the proceedings.

THROAT AFFECTIONS AND HOARSENESS.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." These famous "lozenges" are now sold by most respectable chemists in this country at 1s 1d per box. People troubled with a hacking cough," a "slight cold," or bronchial affections, cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious Pulmonary and Asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government Stamp around each box.—Manufactured by JOHN I. BROWN & SONS, Boston, United States. Depot, 493 Oxford-street, London.

HUMOURS OF THE WHISKEY WAR IN AMERICA.

The general plan of operations varies little in different places, and is very picturesquely described by one of the liquor sellers, who finally succumbed—a man who kept a saloon in Mt Arthur, Vinton county, who says:—"They climbed up my place, a week ago last Friday night, fifty—four of them, young and old rich and poor, some in rags and some in fine broadcloth. Each of the fifty—four carried a demijohn upon his shoulder, and hoped I'd get a new soul. Of course I had to treat 'em politely. There was only one lamp burning in the room when they came in, and I had other for them to make it lighter. Then they took out their hymn books and all sang together. One or two of them had and the rest joined in. After they had sung fifteen minutes or so, they all got down on their marrow-bones and prayed. There was one woman there that could pray loud enough to be heard all over the village, which was only eight hundred inhabitant. A woman would pray, and the rest would join in with an a-a-amen, a long and loud one. One of the women that prayed was forty years. She prayed so long and so strong that she got herself all of a tremble, and had to be lifted to her feet and carried down stairs. One time they called, all got down on their marrow bones, on the outside, and sang and prayed. They are very kind in their prayers at first. They pray for a fellow's soul, and then stick a petition before him. If he don't sign to quit, they pray for lightning to strike his shop. There was nothing else to do but close up when they were carrying on that way. They closed everything in the village down to an old deserted saloon where the folks were in the habit of playing a game of cards to see who'd pay for tea stews, a place where there wasn't a drop of liquor sold." One of the most unique specimens of literature called forth by the crusade is this letter from William Weingadner, a German liquor-seller in Morrow, begging off from his pledge :—" Kind ladies, you have come to see me, and I am happy to see you. I receive you kindly, and with all the respect a gentleman can. Can you plead with me to quit the business while I have a wife and three little children depending upon me for a living ? I have no trade, and have built my house for the purpose you see, and I feel it my duty to feed and clothe Christ's blessed children, and the love I feel for my little children cannot be broken. Now, can I appeal to you to stay your proceedings, and let me live quiet-like in my little home ? God placed each and all here for free thought and free speech, and why cannot you allow me these blessings ? I will plead with tears in my eyes, and I shall trust in God to result. I do not know the ways of the country as well as I should. Ladies, I signed your paper, and am not sorry for it; but I have some to sell yet, and I ask you to leave it and wait. I want a committee of men to come and buy them. Well, Ladies, I have reconsidered this matter, and wish to say to you that it is my business and I cannot afford to sacrifice my goods, for it is out of my power to withdraw from my business at present. So I don't wish to be bothered with your singing and praying any more. This is my final decree. I live in such places the whole populace seems to be carried away with excitement. Thus we read that at Washington Court-house, last Monday, a meeting was held at eight o'clock in the evening, at ten o'clock in the morning, the banks and business houses all being closed, the citizens gathering in crowds at the Presbyterian Church, reinforced by a large delegation coming in from the country round. An hour was spent in singing and prayer, during which one of the liquor-sellers sent in his surrender, and then the people marched in procession, with a temperance band and went to the different saloons, pleading with the proprietors to give up the business. Among others, they visited a German named Beck, who, upon being asked if the women should come in the yard and pray, said: "No, no, no. I don't want no more of dese vimens. I dont vant no more sing and pray. I can't sell no beer if I do. I don't want no more of dese vimen." After some talk he proposed to stop for two months, but this was not satisfactory and his besiegers kept at it till, finally, he threw down his arms and said: "Shentlemen, I'm dies—I'll stop. I von't sell no more lickers so long as never." Then three ringing rousing cheers were given for Beck, and the party returned to town, where bells were rung and there were general congratulations. The temperance movement of the women continues to spread in all directions, though it is not followed in all cases with the success which has crowned its efforts in the smaller towns of Ohio.

EASTER FESTIVITIES.—Rothwell Feast has been held during the Easter holidays, and, according to the busy aspect of the town, people have enjoyed themselves in the usual pastimes of such occasions. Easter has been commemorated by the various bodies with various services on Good Friday and Easter Sunday, both at the parish church and at the chapels.

ALTERATION OF POLLING PLACES.—That the polling districts and polling places in the southern division of the West Riding be altered as follows, viz.:—That the township of Oulton-with-Woodlesford be transferred from the Loftouse-with-Carlton Polling District to the polling district now called the Lofthouse-with-Carlton Polling District, and that the polling place for the last-mentioned polling district be the township of Rothwell-with-Rothwell Haigh and Royds Green, instead of Lofthouse-with-Carlton, as at present; and also that the Bolderstone Polling District be done away with, and the district called the Stocksbridge Polling District.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—IF YOUR hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Original Mexican Hair Renewer," as it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

On Monday evening, the usual fortnightly meeting of the Board took place in the Board-room.—Present: J. Charlesworth, Esq., Messrs. Hargreaves, Sanderson, Dickinson Clayton, Kendrew, Bumby, Smith, Lunn, and the Clerk.

Being the first session of the newly-arranged Board, the business of the meeting was commenced by a proposition from Mr. Kendrew (the highest on the late polling) that "Joseph Charlesworth, Esq., who has so ably, and courteously filled the chair during the past year, be again elected Chairman of the Board." Mr. Sanderson seconded the motion, and had great pleasure in testifying to the kindness and impartiality which had characterized their late chairman, during his term of office. The motion having been put and carried unanimously, Mr. Charlesworth, took the position he was called, and in reply, returned thanks for the kind words the proposer and seconder had used in speaking of him, and to the whole Board for the hearty manner in which they elected him to the honourable office of chairman. He continued that he hoped they as a Board will all work for the benefit of the town and people, and at the same time, would exercise proper economy in using the money of the ratepayers. In referring to committees as to their past year's doings, he wished again to remind the public of the disadvantages under which an entirely new and unexperienced Board laboured, in having every thing to learn and find out; and also the unfortunate delays which they had undergone in getting the Bye-laws into use. From the local Government Board had them, and had presented the Board using such means as they would, and they the authority of the Bye-laws to support them; he trusted that the Board, in the year they would make a very great improvement in the township.

Mr. Bumby proposed and Mr. Clayton seconded a proposition:—That Mr. Dickenson, who has ably supplied the late Mr. Hargreaves' place as deputy Treasurer, be elected Treasurer to the Board.

On an amendment, proposed by Mr. Sanderson, seconded by Mr. Kendrew:—That it being desirable that the Treasurer should be a Banker, Mr. Clayton is proposed as Treasurer.

On a division, Mr. Clayton was declared elected as Treasurer.

The following members were elected to attend to the duties of the various Committees:—

SANITARY COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Clayton, Bumby, Smith, and Lunn.

HIGHWAYS COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Dickinson, Sanderson, Bumby, and Smith.

BYE-LAWS COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Hargreaves, Dickinson, and Lunn.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Hargreaves, Kendrew, and Sanderson.

PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Hargreaves, Kendrew, and Sanderson.

BUILDINGS AND PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Sanderson, Dickinson, and Kendrew.

Dr. Heaps, the Medical Officer, presented a letter to the Board and also a report in reply to the London Board enquiries of the Health of the town at the time of scarlet fever, which he states was in a very bad sanitary condition.

In a very lively conversation which ensued between members of the Board and the Medical Officer, great umbrage was [illegible] by the doctor [illegible] town, which, in little better appearance than health than the [illegible] when he was [illegible] he Doctor gave a [illegible] of the whole [illegible] port the same [illegible] Board had [illegible] no satisfaction [illegible]—had [illegible] epidemic [illegible] ...ase [illegible] ...ed [illegible] ...ppose [illegible] ...made water-tight, we [illegible] be again [illegible] by a sinker if not worse disorder. [illegible]ble just been to the Black Bull Hill, and although that was one of the first nuisances complained of, it is to-day as bad as ever—nothing is done.

Several members agreed in saying that this nuisance has been the longest complained of, and expressed their surprise that there was nothing yet done, save the plans which were passed a month ago.

Mr. Kendrew, in reference to the report, asked the doctor how it was that a fortnight ago he attributed the fever to contagion, and yet to bad drainage and to-night he stated that the disease was largely due to a defective supply of water, bad drainage, and over-crowding. Mr. Kendrew also said scarlet fever has been all over the country, and even the healthiest and best supplied places are visited by it.

The Doctor said he had simply given his opinion as far as he could,—he feared it was very much in consequence of these facts. It was true his houses to say the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Several members were quite sure that hitherto the disease had been attributed to contagious and imported; and that the doctor had stated the other reasons might have been accidental.

Mr. Sanderson heartily thanked the medical officer for the care and truthfulness he had displayed in his reports, and thought every member ought to be thoroughly satisfied with the way he had done his work. He fied with the way he had done his work. He fied with this way in the Sanitary Committee for not going so thoroughly into their work as they ought.

Mr. Hargreaves, while agreeing with Mr. Sanderson as to the pains Dr. Heaps had taken, and the plain statements he had made, yet strongly objected to the wholesale censure Mr. S. had cast on the Sanitary Committee. They had done a great deal, but were continually hampered by the want of our Bye-laws.

The Chairman said another reason was the want of their carts and horses. He was happy to say that they had now got two horses, and hoped they would soon have them at work.

The Doctor recommended that every privy should be numbered, and that a book be kept by the Inspector, also numbered, in which he should write off the various numbers as the places are cleansed, and this [illegible] be done at stated times.

Mr. Lunn wished to know if the water generally drunk by the people was objectionable.

The Doctor replied that many people drank rain water off the lead, and stated that this water was frequently charged with decomposed matter, which was prejudicial.

The Chairman was very truthful to have the different wells, &c. analysed, in order that they might be able to say which was good and which was not fit to drink.

During the conversation which ensued, Mr. Lunn (who had a good specimen of a fine healthy man, wished to know if the Board would accept him as a living example of the good quality of Stourton Well water, of which he drank a great deal.

A Committee to consider and bring up a reply to the letter of the Local Government Board was appointed, consisting of Messrs. Sanderson, Clayton, and Mr. Kendrew, such report to be submitted to this Board at a special meeting on Monday next.

The Chairman having another engagement, it was resolved that Mr. Hargreaves take the chair.

Mr. Hargreaves introduced the importance of at once setting to work for the removal of the contents of ash pipits, privies, &c.

It was arranged that several horses and carts should be at the disposal of the Inspector on Wednesday, and that they all commence operations for a thorough crusade against these fragrant depots on Wednesday morning.

Mr. Lunn asked whether it would not be well for the Sanitary Committee to see the various ashpits after they were cleared out, and as far as possible have them made water tight.

Agreed to.

The rough ashes to be carted on to Royds' Lane.—Two horses having now been bought for £87 10s. 0d., the members of the Board offered the loan of carts.

The Inspector was requested to ask the medical officer the names of those whose houses are overcrowded, and then to inspect the same.—Accounts to the amount of £200 were ordered to be paid.

WOODLESFORD AND OULTON MECHANICS' INSTITUTION.

On Monday last, a grand concert (the last of the Session) was given for the benefit of the above Institute, by a party of Gentlemen Amateurs from Leeds and the neighbourhood, in the new Club-Room, recently added to the Two Pointers' Inn, kindly lent for the occasion. The attractive programme which was well carried out, comprised the following gentlemen:—Messrs. J. Maw, J. Sheppard, Haigh (comic), J. Feetham, and B.W. Higgins, as vocalists. Violin, Mr. C. Dyson; violoncello, Mr. B. Winder; with recitations by Mr. G. Wilson. Pianist, Mr. E. Crosby. The opening Trio, an operatic gem of Bellini's, arranged for violin, violoncello, and pianoforte, was tastefully rendered with admirable precision and effect, and the concert proceeded throughout in a highly satisfactory manner. In the absence of Mr. J. Maw, Mr. Sheppard, a gentleman possessing a pleasing effective voice, though perhaps rather deficient in power, took one of his songs in addition to his own, and in both of the other, a novelty was introduced in the shape of a violincello obligato by Mr. B. Winder. Without ignoring the claims of the rest, we may specially notice the programme of Mr. C. Dyson, who in an Air and Rondo (accompanied), displayed considerable ability and command over his instrument, his performance being marked with extreme delicacy of touch and purity of tone, exciting much applause and a hearty encore, which was responded to. We must not omit also to notice the elocutionary talent displayed by Mr. G. Wilson, whose recitations were delineated with a graceful propriety of manner and gesture, and much vigor and effect. Both Mr. Feetham in "fifty years ago," and Mr. Haigh in "the Jolly old Farmer," both of which were sung in character, received considerable applause. Notwithstanding the unfavourable nature of the weather and the unfortunate engagement of a concert at Rothwell Institute, for the same evening, there was a very numerous attendance. The concert being a success in every respect, the performers not only for their gratuitous service, but also for a liberal subscription amongst themselves and friends for the extinction of a debt which still remained on the piano, but which is now, thanks to their liberality, quite clear of debt. In moving a vote of thanks to the performers for their services, the Vicar alluded to the discomfort and inconvenience experienced in former concerts and entertainments through want of accommodation, &c, at the Institute. It was [illegible] to be regretted that the people [illegible] district do not more cordially support [illegible] urage the committee in their efforts [illegible] se better and more suitable accommodation [illegible] this useful institution, possessing [illegible] add library unrivalled by any village [illegible] kshire, easy railway accommodation, [illegible] d every facility for carrying on instruction in all its various branches. It requires [illegible] nothing but a suitable building in a central situation to make its influence for good of great importance, and would mainly depend upon the active co-operation and support of those for whose benefit this and similar Institutes are established, but which somehow do not seem to understand the value of the advantages and means for improvement which are thus placed within easy reach of all.

Deaths.

HAINSWORTH—April 12th, aged 4 years and 8 months Clarence William Hainsworth.

NORTH.—April 13th, aged 20 years, Maria Norton, daughter of George and Harriet Elliot.

FIELD.—April 15th, aged 4 years, Harry Field.

ROTHWELL MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

An excellent concert was given last Monday evening, in the Large Hall, by the "Leeds Choral Society," ably assisted by Miss Butterfield, the eminent soprano, and Mr. Willie Bray, the versatile boy in vocal and mimic.

Miss Butterfield sang Bishop's "Tell me my heart," a difficult and trying song, in splendid style and with thrilling effect, proving the wonderful compass of her voice and her brilliant vocalisation.

The Glees, Quartetts and part Songs were rendered with that soft, full and stirring effect, and with due regard to just and well-balanced light and shade for which this society has become somewhat famous, Mr. Thompson (Tenor), Mr. Morton (Bass), and Mr. Wainwright sang a few quartetts, assisted by their masterly execution a correct knowledge of the beauties and technicalities of their enchanting art.

Mr. Willie Bray proved a great favourite by the amount of enthusiastic applause he was greeted with, he appeared in several characteristic whilly wanderer habited considerably to the amusement of the audience, especially by happily avoiding anything offensive facial expression, or vulgar, or saucy of double entendre, confine our remarks to two examples, as instances more especially of his cleverness as a mimic, namely, the exquisite imitation of singing birds in his personation of "Tell a Teller," which was something remarkable, and the burlesque of the "German Clarionet Player," which by its drollery and humour, kept the people in a complete state of merriment; he is, however, not at home in serious pieces, as instanced in the song of pathos and true natural feeling in his recital of the Showman's Child.

Mr. J. Wainwright (pianist), was a valuable addition to the party by his skill in manipulation, and in correct accompaniment.

The audience was numerous and respectable, and evidently appreciated highly the efforts of the talented performers.

COLLIERY ACCIDENT.—A terrible colliery explosion occurred at Duckinfield on Tuesday evening last, whereby 54 miners were killed. The whole of the bodies have been recovered. 102 persons [illegible] escaped.

ROTHWELL CHURCH ALTERATIONS.

In consequence of the alterations now in progress, the Parish Church of Rothwell was closed last Sunday. It is intended to remove the "unsightly and unused gallery," and to restore the north aisle to uniformity with the south aisle, by building arcads with and introducing clerestory windows, also by placing an oak roof in the north side of the nave.—These improvements and repairing of the tower and of the roof of the nave, are comprised in the scheme which will probably cost £1000, towards which amount £500 is promised. Messrs. Oddie, the Vicar, E. Calverley, Esq., and J. Oddie, Esq., have subscribed £250.—Mr. Chorley, of Leeds, is the architect; and the principal contractors are Messrs. Stainer and Son, for the masonary; and Mr. Lockwood, for the joiners' work. The work is now in full progress, and the north side is completely boarded up and partitioned from the nave and south aisle. Service will be held as usual to-morrow (Sunday). It is hoped every assistance will be rendered to this important work by the donations to the building fund, of those interested in the improvement of our ancient church.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence

The following cases have been heard during the past week, in the West Riding Police Court, at Wakefield, before E. Kay, Esq. (Chairman), J. Charlesworth, Esq., Dr. Holdsworth, and W. H. Leatham, Esqrs.

EXTRAORDINARY WOODLESFORD GENTLEMAN.—Mr. John Dobson, a gentleman of independent means, residing at Woodlesford, was on Saturday last summoned before the above-named justices, upon a charge of having "wilfully and obscenely exposed his person to a young married woman named Matilda Wainwright." Mr. Wainwright appeared on behalf of the defendant.—The complainant stated that on the 30th of March, a fortnight ago, she was in the Station Lane, Woodlesford, when the defendant, who was walking in the same direct on, accosted her and began talking "all sorts of impudence," to her. She stated the language he used, which was both disgraceful and filthy; and attempted to lift up her dress with his stick, and offered her money for an immoral purpose.—Mr. Wainwright: Why did you not take out the summons before?—Complainant: I was waiting for my husband's consent.—When did you tell your husband? I told him that every afternoon.—And did not send to Mr. Dobson to ask what he would give to settle it. I went to his house in a week's time, and I did not go to "force" money out of him. I went to see if he was aware how he insulted me. I am not my own master, or I would have gone before. When I got to the house I asked him if he remembered the occasion mentioned before. He said he replied, "I do; in the Station Lane. I know all about it," and he afterwards ordered me out of the house—A sister of the complainant, who went with her to Dobson's house, corroborated her as to what took place there.—In defence, Mr. Wainwright described the charge as an attempt to extort money.—A little girl, the child of Charlotte Little, twelve years of age, who was in the Station Lane at the same time as complainant and defendant, was called to speak to what took place, and she said that she saw no wrong conduct on the part of the defendant. When she met the complainant the latter said to her, "did thou turn off the path for that fool? I did not see him." In the path for that fool? I did not see him." In this witness was cross-examined at length, and was severely criticised, and while the magistrates were considering whether one so young should be sworn, the defendant's counsel had conducted himself in the most irrepressible manner, and asked her if she knew the Lord's Prayer—a question which caused considerable hilarity, coming from such a source.—Within Little, father of the previous witness, who was in Dobson's house when Mrs. Calverley went there, spoke to what transpired. Dobson, he said, denied having anything about his offence with which he was charged, and then told complainant that she was wanting to draw money out of him.—Mrs. Harris, housekeeper to Dobson, said that she had followed complainant to the door, and asked her what Mr. Dobson had done, and complainant said all he did was to look at her and her dress and other parts, but she had foolishly told the affair to a neighbour, and it had gone from one to another till it had got to the pits where her husband worked, and it had been made twenty times worse than it was.—The Bench in giving their decision said they believed that Dobson did that with which he was charged, but they hoped he did it not remembering what he did, he would be fined 5s. 6d., and with expenses he would have £1 to pay, or seven days imprisonment. They allowed complainant 2s. 6d., and her witness 2s.

THE BOVA-FINE TRAVELLER QUESTION AGAIN.—Jeremiah Green, landlord of the Railway Hotel, at Lofthouse, was charged with a breach of the Licensing Act, 1872. Illegal Hours, and Alfred Wilby, George Newby and William Wilks, were charged with aiding and abetting in the commission of the offence. The offence which was proved by P.C. McLaren and another officer, was committed on the 6th of the present month, when the constables found seven men in the house, and a beer before them—the three defendants, and four men from Morley.—Mrs. Green, who filled the beer, said she thought all the men were friends. They were not drinking, and have given them any. None were more particular than they about filling at late or unlawful hours.—And this was the first time that she had been "taken in" for nineteen years. With fine and expenses, the defendants had 15s. 6d. each to pay, or seven days; and in the case of the landlord, the Bench said they would not endorse the license this time.

DRUNK AND RIOTOUS.—The Smiths.—William Smith, a coal miner, living at Rothwell, who did not appear, was charged with being drunk and riotous on Saturday, the 4th inst., at West Ardsley.—P.C. Baker proved the case.—The defendant was fined 7s. 6d. with costs.—George Smith, a coal miner, living at Rothwell, who did not appear, was charged with being drunk and riotous near the Black Bull, at Rothwell.—P.C. Gill proved the case, and the defendant was fined 5s., and with costs 10s., or in default, seven days imprisonment.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills—At the present time much sickness and disease is exercised, and the most violent accidents of ill-health immediately check, or a slight illness may result in a serious disease. Fevers of various kinds, dysentery, quinsey, croup, hooping cough, bronchitis, and most other pulmonary affections will be greatly relieved by rubbing the cooling Ointment into the skin as nearly as practicable to the seat of mischief. This treatment, at once quick and effective, is admirably adapted for the removal of such diseases during infancy and youth. Old asthmatic invalids will derive marvellous ease from the use of this Ointment, and sufferers have brought round many such sufferers, and re-established health after every other means had signally failed.

PILLS AND OINTMENT, LONDON, DUBLIN, MOSCOW AND VIENNA.—We observe that Messrs. Bryant and May have now obtained four entire medals for their Patent Safety Matches, which are not Poisonous, contain no Phosphorus, are entirely free from smell, are not in any way injurious to those engaged in their manufacture, are not liable to spontaneous combustion, and Light only on the Box. Trade mark, an Ark.

As a safe, permanent, and warranted cure for Pimples, Scrofula, Sunrey, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, we do with confidence recommend DR. SLARK'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE. Sold by Gemist; every where, [illegible]

From Lord Francis Conyngham, Mount Charles, Donegal, Ireland, December 10th, 1864.
"I have used Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for many years, and have found it a most valuable remedy. I have given it to my children, and to the poor about me, and have never known it to fail."
Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most valuable remedy. I have given it to my children, and to the poor about me, and have never known it to fail."
From Lord Francis Conyngham, Mount Charles, Donegal, Ireland, December 10th, 1864.
"I have used Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for many years, and have found it a most valuable remedy. I have given it to my children, and to the poor about me, and have never known it to fail."
Mr. Davenport, the eminent Analytical Chemist, says:—"I have analysed the Chlorodyne of Dr. J. Collis Browne, and find that it contains the active principles of Opium and Indian Hemp, but that it does not contain any of the poisonous properties of those drugs."
From the Lancet, November 14th, 1857.
"Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered for Cholera, Dysentery, &c. Its effects are marvellous and unfailing. SATURDAY, APRIL 25th, 1874.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

At a special Meeting of the Rothwell Local Board, held in the Board Room, the minutes of last Meeting were read and confirmed.

During the week's letter had been received by the clerk from certain owners of property at Thwaite-gate, asking as to the Board respecting a main sewer for their property, to which the clerk replied, that they might send a deputation to the Board, at their ordinary meeting, on Monday, 21st inst. It appears, however, that through some disappretension, the parties had under stood last Monday, and a deputation was therefore announced as waiting to lay their case before the Board.

The deputation, consisting of Mr. Mather, and Mr. Fawcett, accompanied by the solicitor, Mr. Bulmer, having been introduced; Mr. Bulmer said he appeared on behalf of Mr. Fawcett and Mr. Mather, who were large owners of property on the Stourton Lodge Estate. They had lately received a letter from Lord Stourton's agent, intimating that the sewage, as now disposed of, had the effect of fouling his Lordship's water. He urged upon the Board the necessity and importance of laying down such a drainage and sewage system as would enable the proprietors to comply with the request of Lord Stourton's agent.

The Chairman said the Board was quite aware that sooner or later some means would have to be taken for the benefit of those whom the deputation represented, but the question would require serious deliberation, and having now heard what the gentlemen had to say, the Board would consider their proposals in due course.

The Board next proceeded with the preparing of a reply to the Local Government Board, in answer to their various enquiries respecting the health of the town prior to the outbreak of scarlet fever, and also certain particulars as to the precautions taken. The question as to whether the Board regret of the Medical Officer (made in June last) should be sent to London or not.—(We may inform our readers that this report contains a detailed statement of all nuisances, &c., in the District.)—Dr. Heaps thought the report should go to London, as they would then see the state of the town at the time the Board was formed, and would be able to form some conception of the work before the Board. He also would state (as the reply from the clerk does state) that the Board was only formed in April last, that the Medical Officer was appointed in June, and the Inspector of Nuisances in August, and also that the fever broke out in September, thus showing that the Board had got into working order as soon as possible, but that they could not take so many precautions and remove so many nuisances, &c., as they would have wished. He considered everything had been done which could possibly have been done by a newly-formed Board.—Mr. Kendrew complained that the Medical Officer had not reported the first case of fever in the town, to which Dr. Heaps replied, he did not know of it till some time after.—A sharp and somewhat personal dispute here ensued between Dr. Heaps and Mr. Kendrew, as to the duties of the Medical Officer, and whether those duties had been and were now properly performed, after which, Mr. Lunn asked the Clerk to read the duties of the Medical Officer, as laid down in the Act. The various requirements having been read seriatim, the Doctor said he had attended to them all.—On the withdrawal of Dr. Heaps from the room, Mr. Hargreaves said he felt for Mr. Kendrew, and thought that every member who was sent to that Board should be treated with proper respect; he was sorry such remarks had been made respecting Mr. Kendrew, as they had just heard.—Returning to the consideration of the reply to the Local Government Board, they revised the original draft.

The agreement draft respecting the Stourton Well was read to the Board, and several alterations in time suggested, one of the principal alterations in time being that instead of 6 months' notice on either side, instead of 6 months' notice on either side, that 3 years' notice be given of any intention to break the agreement; the way in which the agreement is worded, also caused some anxiety in the minds of the Board as to whether, by accepting the water as a great "boon" from Lord Stourton, to the people of Rothwell, we should thereby surrender any claim which Rothwell believes it has on the well as a "public" well; the acknowledgement to be paid is 10s. a year.—It is required as a principal condition, to build the well over, so that nothing will get to it to foul the water, or stay its course, and also if at any time, this agreement should be dissolved, that the pipes be taken up, and the ground restored to its former state and all made good.

After some discussion it was unanimously decided that legal advice be taken on the agreement as now presented, as to how far our rights are interfered with.

Mr. Charlesworth kindly consented to see Mr. Dibb respecting the above.

Mr. Hargreaves having said there was a serious question as to the present unprotected state of Bell Hill, which is now in course of being paved.

The chairman kindly intimated that the Board could have the use of lamps, and o but for the man, belonging to his firm.

This precaution would be at once adopted.

ROTHWELL CHURCH ALTERATIONS.

(To the Editor of the Rothwell Times).

SIR,—In your article under the above heading in last week's paper, there is an error in figures which I should be glad to correct. The estimated cost of the restoration of the church is £1,340, in addition to this, there will be other expenses which are not included in the estimates. I shall be much obliged if you will kindly publish this correction, that every one who is interested in the Parish Church may know what is needed—that any donation which he may feel disposed to give will be gladly received.

I am, sir, faithfully yours,

G. HEBERDEN.

Rothwell Vicarage,
April 21st.

We are much obliged to the Vicar for correcting the error, the figures having been taken from information supplied before the estimates came in; we trust the people of Rothwell and neighbourhood will heartily respond to the call for donations to the restoration fund.—ED.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—There is nothing in the whole "Materia Medica" like these medicaments for the certainty of there action in lumbago, sciatica, tic douloureux, and all flying or settled pains in the nerves and muscles. Diseases of this nature originate in bad blood and depraved humours, and until these are corrected there can be no permanent cure. The ordinary remedies may afford temporary relief, but in the end always disappoint the sufferer. Holloway's Ointment penetrates the human system as salt penetrates meat, and the Pills greatly assist and accelerate its operation by clearing away all obstruction, and giving tone to the system generally. The prophylactic virtues of Holloway's remedies stand unrivalled.

THE LATE MR. ODDIE.

On Wednesday last, the remains of Joseph Crompton Oddie, Esq., of Woodlesford were laid in their last resting place in the Rothwell Church-yard.

Mr. Oddie was born at Woodlesford in the year 1794, and has passed most or all his life in that village. Devoting his entire attention to farming operations, he lived a quiet, unobtrusive life, rarely turning from the tenor of his way, and gradually increasing his property and stock by careful and prosperous investments. He was never married, and leaves no near relatives. Many stories are told of his eccentricities, and his simple mode of life. In his gifts he seemed wishful that the donor might not be known, and several instances are told in which the recipients, having discovered the anonymous giver of presents they have received, have thanked Mr. Oddie, and the thanks have offended him, and the gifts been stopped.

Strongly attached to the Established Church, Mr. Oddie liberally subscribed to the various projects connected with that church, his name also being included in most of the lists of donations to the charities and public efforts of the neighbourhood. Among other gifts, he contributed £1000 for the endowment of Woodlesford Church, and has been a large supporter of the Rothwell Parish Church, to which he has subscribed £500 for the restoration now in progress.

The funeral (which was ably and attentively carried out by Mr. Rich, Hardwick, East Parade), was of a most thorough and costly character. The body is enclosed in a shell, entirely furnished, which is again enclosed within a heavy polished Oak Coffin, with brass fittings. Seven double-horsed mourning coaches followed the hearse, after which, came the carriages of several gentlemen of the neighbourhood, among which, were those of Alderman Cliff, Mr. Henry Bartley, Mr. Heptonstall, and Mr. Douglas.

Shortly after half-past eleven, the cortege left the quiet and unassuming retreat of the deceased gentleman, and arrived at Rothwell Church a little after twelve, when a procession was formed consisting of friends, tenants, and workmen of the deceased.

The pall-bearers were Alderman Cliff, Herbert Harrison, Esq., Rev. Sidney Greenwood, T. W. Batholomew, Esq., W. Mathews, Esq., J. Webster, Esq., H. Bentley, Esq., Richard Harrison, Esq.

The body was followed by Jas. Oddie, Esq., Alfred Dawson Oddie, Esq., J. G. Turner, Esq., W. Price, Esq., Rev. Mr. Wooller, J. Farrer, Esq., C. Jewison, Esq., T. W. Jewison, Esq., — Sangster, Esq.; after whom came the male and female servants of Mr. Oddie. Among the gentlemen who were present, we also noticed Rev. H. Hamilton, and Rev. J. R. Crawford. The Churchwardens received the body at the principal door of the church.

The solemn service for the Burial of the dead having been read by the vicar, Rev. G. Heberden, the coffin was lowered into its place, on the east-side of the Church Yard, into a stone-vaulted grave.

The poor of Woodlesford will keenly miss the liberal doles which the old gentleman frequently sent them; extremely careful and somewhat eccentric in his habits, he has left behind him a large amount of property, respecting the disposal of which many rumours are afloat, but until authoritatively declared, it is quite unknown how the great riches he is said to have amassed, are disposed of.

ENTRY OF LORD LIEUTENANT INTO DUBLIN.

On Saturday his Excellency the Duke of Abercorn made his public entry into Dublin. The Duke crossed from Holyhead in a special steamer, and reached Kingstown about noon. On landing at Kingstown he was received by the Corporation of the town, and the Chairman read an address of welcome, to which the Duke returned a gracious reply. The ships in the harbour dressed their masts, and the forts fired a salute on his Excellency's landing. Lord Sandhurst, the Marquis of Headfort, Lord Monk, the Marquis of Waterford, and a number of other noblemen greeted the Duke on his disembarkation. The Duke proceeded by special train to Dublin, and was met at the Westland-row Station by the Lord Mayor and Corporation. In accordance with time-honoured custom the Lord Mayor laid at the Duke's feet the keys of the city, and the Duke restored them to his custody. A procession was then formed, and the Lord-lieutenant proceeded to the Castle on horseback. He was attended by Lord Sandhurst, a brilliant staff, and a very large military escort. The cortege was a most brilliant and imposing one. Vast crowds lined the streets, and the Duke was loudly cheered. Some cries of "Home Rule" were raised, but on the whole the reception was of the most hearty and respectful character. The Marchioness of Blandford and other ladies of the Duke's family, who were in an open carriage, were also loudly cheered. On arriving at the castle the Duke held a reception, at which the judges and other dignitaries attended. Previous to and after the procession much disturbance was caused by the conduct of the students of Trinity College, who, from the roof of that building rained squibs on the crowd below.

PLAIN SPEAKING.

The Paris Correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette writes:— "An interesting sale of autographs has just taken place here. One of the most curious letters disposed of was one written by Mme. de Cavayan in the year VII. of the Republic to Joseph Bonaparte. It contained such extraordinary passages as this:—

"The citoyenne Leclerc entered my house six months ago, and has made astonishing progress as she can read and write.

"The lady in question was Napoleon's sister Pauline, who first married General Leclerc, who perished in St. Domingo, and was afterwards left a widow as the the lovely and rather dissolute Princesse Borghese. It is strange to learn that the writer of the first captain of the age was, perhaps, unable to sign her marriage contract. Another Bonaparte letter was quite as well worthy of notice as the above, being addressed by Lucien Bonaparte to his uncle, Cardinal Fesch. The language is not such as should have been used by a nephew to a Prince of the church. The Cardinal, most likely prompted by Napoleon, had advised Lucien, who always exhibited an extraordinary amount of independence, to put away his wife, and Lucien replied:—

"'I have been outraged by you once more in a manner of which I hardly considered you capable. I have received mamma in details being willing to suffer anything from her, As for you, cease this want of respect. Be consistent and have some noble feeling; at least have the good sense not to assimilate me to Jerome (father of the present Prince Napoleon), and spare yourself the shame of your useless and cowardly advice. I have left leave off writing to me until religion and honour, which you tread under foot, have dissipated your blindness; and if you are destined to remain such as you appear in your letter, at least hide the baseness of your sentiments under the mantle, and make your way in silence along the road of ambition. These are my last counsels; they are worth more than yours, and I wish you enough honour and judgment to profit by them. YOUR NEPHEW.

EASTER GIFTS TO THE POPE.—The Westminster Gazette says:—"Shortly after Easter a deputation will proceed to Rome to present to the Holy Father the purse containing the offerings, amounting to about £3,000, are regarded with especial favour by the Holy Father, as a "tribute of fealty and affection on the part of the most innocent and feeble of his children, at a time when he is forsaken by so many of the mighty ones of the earth. His Holiness commenting recently on such exhibitions of Catholic faith on the part of the young, is reported to have said, 'that to the Catholic youth belongs the future of Europe.'"

BREACHES OF PROMISE IN FRANCE.—The breaches of promise are rare in France. The law does not admit compensation for injured feelings, and to sustain a suit of this kind it is always necessary to prove special damage. Gerfaut, a correspondent of the Echo de Paris writes that the attempt to do this has just been made before the civil trebunal of the Seine by a lady calling herself Madle. Decoisne. She sued a gentleman with the curious name of Hericart de Thury, and laid her damages at 10,000 francs, because on the faith of the engagement she had given up a place of companion to a person of rank, and had bought a trousseau. The defendant's defence was that M. Marriage (aged 45) had not sought either fortune or beauty, but he desired youth, and the plaintiff had deceived him about her age. She alleged that she was but 22, but afterwards owned to 26. Though disappointed, he had made up his mind to put up with this difference; but he had found out by the register that she was in reality 32, and that therefore he could not accept. Amid shouts of laughter, caused by a humorous speech of M. Gatineau for the recalcitrant Marriage, the court pronounced a verdict for the defendant.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—At the present time when hitchhikers assess must be exercised, the earliest evidences of ill-health immediately checked, or a slight illness may result in a confirmed disease. Sore throats, bronchitis, quinsey, coughs, hoping cough, bronchitis, and most other pulmonary affections will be speedily relieved by using these unrivalled remedies. Rub the Ointment into the skin as nearly as practicable to the seat of mischief. This treatment, at once simple and effective, is unequalled for the removal of such diseases during infancy and youth. Old asthmatic invalids will derive marvellous ease from the use of this Ointment, which have brought round many such sufferers, and re-established health after every other means had signally failed.

PRIZE MEDALS, LONDON, DUBLIN, MOSCOW AND PARIS.—We observe that Messrs. Bryant and May have now obtained four prize medals for their Patent Safety Matches, and that the Matches contain no Phosphorus, are entirely free from small, are not in any way injurious to those engaged in their manufacture, and are free from spontaneous combustion, and Light only on the Box. Trade mark, an Ark.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—To the hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Certificate from Dr. Versmann on every bottle, with full particulars. Ask your Chemist for "The Mexican Hair Renewer," prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford-street, London, and sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve them IMMEDIATELY—depend upon it. It is perfectly harmless, and as pleasant to taste as honey. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless, and as pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s 1½d per bottle.—Manufactured in New York, and at 493 Oxford-street, London.

THE WIFE OF TWO HUSBANDS.

At a small, humble, but prettily situated cottage, built in a vale, in a picturesque part of Essex, dwelt a young couple, who had been married about five years. They were most affectionately attached to each other, and they had been united for a period certainly long enough to eliminate different opinion or disparity in temper, yet they had not once in the term quarrelled; nor, indeed, had passed an angry, or even unkind word on either side. They were blessed with two children; and these small gifts only tended to cement their fondness for each other, and render their union yet closer.

The husband, Harry Mitford, held an excellent situation with a farmer, who owned an extensive farm, and a great distance from their pretty abode, known as the Valley Cottage, from the circumstance of its being in the centre of the vale in this wood; and, as he was steady, industrious, and skilful, the farmer took a great interest in him, and improved every year the value of the post he entrusted to him. The wife kept her little household in the neatest order, and ministered to the wants of her children and the comforts of her husband in a manner which not only made him the happiest of men, but won for her the good opinion of all far and near.

One night, as she sat, with her children at her knee, watching at the window for the return of her husband, a man, whom she had observed pass from the plantation, at no great distance from the cottage, advanced direct to the window, and accosted her. "Have you forgotten me, Nell?"

"Forgotten you!" she echoed, faintly.

"Ah!" he said, with a coarse laugh "have you forgotten your husband, Reuben Gale, pr'ythee?"

The young woman sank instantly into his face, uttered a shrill cry, and fell senseless on the floor. The children screamed with terror; but the man, pushing the latched door open, entered the cottage, and raised her off the ground. He placed her in a chair, and then ran for some water, with which he bathed her temples.

"Dang my buttons!" he murmured. "I did not mean to fright thee, lass, like this!"

Poor Nelly was a strong fit; for when the water brought back animation, the very sight of the fellow's countenance sent her into convulsions. The man fetched more water in his hat for her face, and without being able to rescure her to calmness and consciousness. The children screamed alternately, and thus added doubtlessly to them, they became more terrified.

In the midst of all this, Harry Mitford appeared. For a moment he could be beheld, when he opened the cottage door, almost paralyzed him. Another minute, however, sufficed to make him fasten upon the chest of his wife's betrayer.

"Scoundrel!—thief! murderer!" cried Mitford, with frantic excitement; "you have killed my wife!"

Reuben Gale was a strong, muscular fellow, and, by an exertion of violent strength, he flung Harry off.

"Keep back!" he said. "Are you mad? Nelly Mills is my wife, and you know it. I am Reuben Gale, and Nelly is Reuben Gale's!"

"With a groan, Harry Mitford sunk back in the chair, and looked upon him aghast.

"A!" said Reuben; "you have thought I was dead,—You wished me so; but here I am, come for Nely—and I mean to have her, too!"

Harry put his hands before his eyes, and burst into tears, sobbing in dire agony.

"Come, come!" cried Reuben, with a sneer, "it's no use snivelling. You had better set to work and recover Nell.—She'll heed you. I am a stranger to her, you see!"

Harry dashed the tears from his eyes, but there was an air of strange determination about his features. His brow was knitted, his lips were set closely together, and his teeth were clenched. He went to Nelly, and raised her up. Then going up to Reuben, he said in very decisive terms "you must leave me."

"I shall not," he cried defiantly.

Harry, producing a pistol, said "I will shoot you as a dog, if you do not leave instantly."

"Why, you would not dare," he said, "to shoot me, cried Reuben, beginning to dislike the steady aspect of the muzzle of the pistol.

Would that prolong your life one minute, cried Harry.

Nell is my wife, she must come with me, said Reuben, doggedly.—We will settle that hereafter, returned Harry. Go from here now you must and shall, or within half-an-hour you will be under four feet of ground in the plantation.

Reuben rose slowly up, and walked out of the cottage, accompanied by Harry, to the coach-road leading to the nearest village; and when the latter suggested that Reuben was far enough on his way thither to render prospects of his immediate return unlikely, he turned back to the cottage, made Nelly put on her bonnet and shawl, and dress the children also. When this was done, he took them under his charge, and went direct to the farmer who employed him—a man of considerable intelligence and experience. His employer, who was about retiring to rest, was astonished to see him, and apprehending that something was wrong, ushered them into his parlour, where he could lis-on undisturbed to what they had to relate.

"Well, sir, Harry here—no—oh, heaven!—Harry Mitford and I were brought up together at Mannungtree, and from children we loved each other dearly. When we were old enough to know what love meant, we plighted our troth together, and vowed to be true to each other. Well, sir, my father fell into difficulties, and Harry's mother was poor. A situation offered down here, and he came to take it. After he was gone, Reuben Gale, the son of old Gale—"

"What! the son of old Ralph Gale, who kept the 'Bell and Waggon so many years?" asked Mr. Grant.

"The same, sir," returned Nelly; "he took a fancy to me and asked me to have him, but I refused him. He persecuted me for years, and always avoided him—indeed I did, sir. But he had great control over his father, and he set him to work to persuade me that Harry was not true to him, for I loved Harry too well, and I was sworn to him. Well, sir, old Ralph Gale was father's landlord, and father owed him a great deal of money, and he threatened to put father in gaol unless I consented to marry Reuben. I was not fifteen then, sir; and I agreed to father not to urge me to consent. I told him I would beg for him rather than I would marry the man I now hated; but they were all like thieves to my prayers, for I prayed to them all. Then father was on a sick bed, and the men came to take him to gaol, and there—ah, heaven—then they promised to let him off scot-free if I would marry Reuben, or killing my father by sending him to prison; and I—I—consented—and I did marry Reuben."

"You did?"

"Yes, sir; it is true—we were married!" and here she burst into a paroxysm of tears.

"This is indeed a bad job," said Mr. Grant.

"But tell me what followed. How came you to leave Reuben and live with Harry?"

"The very day, sir, we were married—when, heaven forgive me! I was in my bed-room preparing to put on my wedding dress, with a great noise below, and descending, I found that Reuben, who a year or two before had enlisted, in a drunken fit, had come to my father, and been found out by a sergeant of his regiment: he was marched off there and then a prisoner by a party of soldiers with guns and bayonets. Harry heard, sir, he went to India, and his father had a letter to say he died on the passage; shortly after this my father died, and Harry came to Mannungtree, redeemed his promise to me, and I, believing myself free, married him. To night, Reuben Gale has returned and claimed me."

Here she burst into another fit of tears; but Mr. Grant, after musing for a moment, bade the unhappy couple console each other as they might, promising that he would see what could be done for them.

At daybreak, Reuben made his appearance with the constables, and gave Nelly in charge for bigamy. In spite of all entreaties to grant her time, they were compelled to go away, when Mr. Grant made his appearance. He also had two or three gentlemen with him, one the rector of the parish. He listened quietly to Reuben Gale's charge, repeated it very slowly to him.

"But," said he, "who is to prove that you are Reuben Gale, the son of old Ralph Gale, of Mannungtree?"

"I'll swear that I am," cried Reuben.

The rector administered the oath, and then Mr. Grant said, with a very emphatic enunciation, "I give you Reuben Gale in charge for having committed bigamy in first marriage with him war alive, when he deserting his wife, married by him in Colchester, some ten years back. I was a guardian at the time, and signed the warrant for his apprehension; but he escaped me, for he enlisted and we could not find the regiment he had joined. The rector here performed the ceremony of uniting him with one Jane Moss, and is ready to swear that she is now living. Be happy, therefore, Harry Mitford; for your Marriage with him was null and void, and you may be happy with your true husband, Henry Mitford."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.
These Pills can be confidently recommended as the most simple and certain remedy for all diseases affecting the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, and Bowels, which are the great sources of life, and the safest reliance may be placed upon them in every case, however long standing. A few doses will prove their wonderful curative effects; they require no restraint of diet, and are perfectly harmless in their operation, and will be found to restore the kidneys to perform their functions efficiently, and act upon the bowels without griping or any other annoyance.

Diseases peculiar to Women.
There is no medicine equal to Holloway's Pills for correcting the stimulants peculiar to females, and which, if neglected, produce serious and dangerous consequences. Their mild operation is such that no one need fear to take them, as they may be taken with safety at any period of life. Females of all ages will find these Pills to relieve them in all the various complaints incidental to their sex, and to be a never-failing remedy in all cases where a medicine is required. They will strengthen the kidneys to perform their functions efficiently, and act upon the bowels without griping or any other annoyance.

Bilousness, Loss of Appetite, and Lowness of Spirits.
The Pills effect a wonderful change in persons subject to bilious attacks, as they correct the secretions, and thereby invigorate the whole system of life, and effectually cure the many bilious complaints, and the long train of disease generated by an unhealthy condition of the liver.

The Kidneys—Their Derangement and Cure.
If these Pills be occasionally taken according to the printed directions, and the patient subject either from the nature of the kidneys for all, to keep them in a healthy state, there is no disease to which they are liable but will be cured, for they never fail to restore the kidneys and correct any derangement of the secretions, which is the cause of the complaint. It is particularly necessary that the treatment, in such cases, be steadily persevered in, as the most obstinate complaints the most astonishing results may be perfected.

The Pills and Ointment are sold by the Proprietor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment, 533, Oxford Street, London, and by all Medicine Vendors throughout the Civilized World, in Boxes and Pots, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each. The Rothwell Times.

SATURDAY, MAY 2nd, 1874.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

The usual fortnightly meeting of the Local Board took place on Monday last; Messrs. Dickinson, Sanderson, Clayton, Kendrew, Bumby, Smith, Lunn, and the Clerk, were present, and, in the absence of Mr. Charlesworth, Mr. Hargreaves took the chair.

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed.—Mr. Hargreaves called on the table the report of the committee appointed to ascertain the probable cost of bringing water from Sterroid Well, to Church Well; the report stated that at present, the flow of water was at the rate of 1 gallon every 4 seconds, which would enable every person in Rothwell to have a supply of 8 or 9 gallons every 34 hours.—The distance between the two wells is 374 yards; supposing cast-iron pipes of 4 inch diameter, flange joints, were used for conducting the water, the committee estimate the cost of piping at £130; for making trench, laying pipes, &c., £20, and cost of reservoir at Church well, about £120: the report goes on to state that the distance from Church well to a point near Mrs. Dobson's orchard, is 200 yards, the pipes for this would cost about £70, and the laying of them about £15; of course these amounts are approximate, and the committee urged that an engineer be asked to take the necessary levels, &c., before any public action is taken.—The further consideration of these matters was, however, delayed till an agreement is come to between Lord Stourton's agent, Mr. Bromet, and the Board. The draft of above agreement having been again read, the suggestion of the Board were confirmed. The principal alteration desired, being that instead of 6 months' notice of intention to withdraw from the agreement between Lord Stourton and the Board, that the notice be extended to 3 years, so as to give ample time for the Board to obtain a supply of water elsewhere.

It was resolved that the Clerk write to Mr. Bromet, requesting that the suggested alterations be made, and also that a clause be inserted, stating that this agreement does not effect the existing rights of any of the parties concerned.

The amended reply of the Board to the enquiries of the Local Government Board as to the health of the town, previous to the out-break of fever, and the precautions taken during its prevalence, was read by the Clerk, and stated (as reported in last week's Times), the means taken and disadvantages under which the Board laboured.—The letter also respectfully urges the authorities to return the Bye-laws of the Board as early as possible.

A letter was read from Mr. Varley, watchmaker, in which after referring to the illuminated clock over his door, and stating the public advantages derived from it, more especially at night, he respectfully asks the Board to supply the clock with gas; a conversation ensued, in which the question was discussed.—It was resolved that the letter be answered, informing Mr. Varley that not being included in the estimates, the Board could not entertain his request at present, but if he thinks proper to get up a requisition of the ratepayers for the next audit, the Board will be prepared to receive such a petition.

The expenses connected with the election of 4 members to the Board, was laid on the table by the Clerk, and were as follows:—Chairman's expenses, £2 2s.; Clerk's services, £2 2s.; assistance, £2 0s.; delivering and collecting Voting Papers, £2 14s.; Printing, £3 13s.: Bill Posting, 8s. 6d.: 5 Bags for collectors, £1 11s. 3d.: Total £14 15s. 9d.—After a very slight discussion in which the opinion was expressed, that the expenses were very moderate it was unanimously resolved that the election accounts be passed.

As Mr. Clayton is the Treasurer of the Board, he is not at eligible to sit on the Finance Committee, and Mr. Kendrew was therefore elected to act on that committee in his stead.—In consequence of there being 4 members elected this year, (being one extra for the late Mr. Hargreave's seat) the Act of Parliament sets forth that the member who has the lowest number retires first, Mr. Lunn will therefore vacate his seat in 2 years.

In going through the accounts, Mr. Lunn asked whether the Board could not find dross themselves, and do their own leading, instead of contracting with Mr. Thos. Ward to bring the material.—In reply, it was stated that Mr. Ward is paid 3/3 per ton delivered on the roads, and some of the members questioned whether all things considered they could do it cheaper themselves. It will, however, be enquired into.

Mr. Sanderson wished some change to be made in the way orders are given, and contracts agreed on, &c.; would like every requirement to be brought before the Board by the Committee, and that on the approval of the Board the Committee should then carry out such orders.

The Chairman suggested that the better lighting of the town should be considered, and what more lamps will be required and the best positions in which to place them. The question was referred to the Public Works' Committee, who shall report to the next meeting.

Several accounts were ordered to be paid.

On the motion of Mr. Sanderson, seconded by Mr. Smith, it was resolved "That all accounts against the Board be paid monthly, and that the Finance Committee meet on the month nights, half-an-hour previous to the Board Meeting.

As a safe, permanent, and warranted cure for Pimples, Scrofula, Sauvrey, Red Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, we can with confidence recommend CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE. Sold by Gemists everywhere.

THROAT AFFECTIONS AND HOARSENESS.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." These famous "lozenges" are now sold by most respectable chemists in this country at 1½ per box. People troubled with a hacking cough, "a slight cold," or bronchial affections, cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious Pulmonary and Asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government Stamp around each box.—Manufactured by JOHN I. BROWN & SONS, Boston, United States. Depot, 493 Oxford-street, London.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—Preserve your hair its turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Certificates from Mr. Vernman on every bottle, with full particulars. Ask your Chemist for "THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER," prepared by HENRY C. GALLEY, 493 Oxford-street, London, and sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Florilline" sprinkled on a wet tooth brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the Teeth a peculiar pearly whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Florilline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s 6d for the liquid, and 1s per jar for the Florilline "Powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HENRY C. GALLEY, 493 Oxford-street, London.

LEEDS CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

On Sunday last, sermons were preached in the various churches connected with the above society; the Rev. R. Young, Associate Secretary, officiated at Oulton, and ation Secretary, officiated at Oulton, and Rev. A. J. Hussey, at Woodlesford Church. Collections were taken at each service for the support of the society.

On Monday afternoon, a meeting was held in the Church Institute, Leeds, under the presidency of the Lord Bishop of Ripon, and addressed by several clergymen. A letter addressed by several clergymen. A letter was read from Sir Bartle Frere, apologising for not being able to attend, owing to the numerous duties as president of the Royal Geographical Society. In the evening, another meeting took place, at which, Mr. S. Morley was chairman, when Bishop Alford, the Rev. Dr. Price, and others spoke. Rev. Dr. Price, has been a missionary for 25 years, and pointed to the case of Jacob Wilkinson, (who was educated in the college with which the Dr is connected), as one fruit of their mission work. Many allusions were also made to the greatest missionary of modern times—the late Dr. Livingstone.

Collections amounted to £18 7s. 1d.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence

The following are the only cases of local interest which have been heard during the past week, in the West Riding Police Court, at Wakefield.

PITCH AND TOSS.—Edward Land, Thomas Plant, Joseph Scargill, Emanuel Farrar, Joseph Scargill, Emanuel Farrar, Plant, and Israel Hartley, were proved by Police-constable Andrew M'Laren to have played at pitch and toss, on Oulton, on the 19th inst., on the highway leading to Ouchthorpe-lane and Stanley, and were fined 10s. each.

CAUTION TO INDULGING COLLIERS.—Joseph Smith, a miner, living at Methley, was summoned by P.-C. Robert Collins, for having been drunk and disorderly at Micklefield, on the 18th of April.—The defendant's master, on the 18th, cautioned the officer stated that he had been "indulging" in intoxicating drinks to a great extent, and on the morning in question, instead of an hour was exceeding noisy, upwards of an hour being wasted in endeavouring to get him home.—The bench imposed a fine of 10s. which with costs, amounted to £1, with the alternative of 14 days' imprisonment.

CHARGE OF NEGLECT AGAINST A COLLIERY FIREMAN.—Thomas Vicars, a man in the employ of the West Yorkshire Iron and Coal Company, was summoned, but did not appear, having unlawfully offended against the 77th special rule of the company's code. Mr. Quiggin prosecuted. It appeared, that defendant's duty was to keep clean pears defendant's duty was to keep clean brisk fires in the furnace in No. 1 Deep Pit. The furnace in question regulates the ventilation for three pits, and the defendant, instead of attending to his duty, went to sleep, stead of attending to his duty went to sleep, and was found in that bondition by the night deputy on the 20th instant. The work of the miners was delayed in consequence. The case proved, and the Bench imposed a fine of 13s. & expenses, making £1, or a month's imprisonment.

THE—GLENFIELD STARCH, has Gained more Prizes than any other starch in the world. No higher compliment could be paid to it, as all those imitators are satisfied that it is the finest starch in the market. Tradesmen have doubtless less profit on its sale, but still it is kept by all respectable grocers and oilmen, and families supplied with the best article, with the other articles, to their own pecuniary profit. The public should insist upon having the Glenfield Starch.

Effects of Overfeed and Fats.—At the present time much watchfulness must be exercised, and the earliest symptoms of ill-health immediately checked, or a slight illness may result in a serious malady. Relaxed and sore throat, diphtheria, quinsey, coughs, hooping cough, influenza, and most other pulmonary affections will be greatly relieved by rubbing this cooling Ointment into the skin as nearly as practicable over the seat of pain. Its penetrant, at once simple and effective, is admirably adapted for the removal of such diseases of inflammatory origin as the above. Old sores will derive marvellous ease from the use of Holloway's remedies, which have brought rapid most healthful, and re-established health after every other means had signally failed.

PARIS MEDALS, LONDON, DUBLIN, MOSCOW AND VIENNA.—We observe that Messrs. Bryant and May have not obtained four prize medals for their Patent Safety Matches, which are not Poisonous, contain no Phosphorus, are entirely free from sulphur, and are not any subjection to those engaged in their manufacture, are not liable to spontaneous combustion, and can only on the Box. Trade mark, an Ark.

ARTHUR AND MOURNING!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless, and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere in all parts of the world. Manufactured at New York, and at 493 Oxford-street, London.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Certificates from Mr. Vernman on every bottle, with full particulars. Ask your Chemist for "THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER," prepared by HENRY C. GALLEY, 493 Oxford Street, London, and sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere at 3s 6d per Bottle.

THE CUPBOARD AT THE INN.

BY AN AMERICAN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER.

About twenty years ago. I was connected with a wealthy firm in St. Louis, and, desiring to visit New Orleans, was entrusted with a considerable sum of money by my employers, to be conveyed with all possible haste to New Orleans merchant. Early in the morning, I got on board the boat, and leaned listlessly over the railing, watching the inhabitants as they went forth to their various occupations. I had not remained in that position long before the steamer moved slowly away from the pier, and soon the city was entirely lost to view.

During the day, nothing transpired to render the voyage disagreeable; and as the shades of night began to hover over the water, I repaired to the saloon, where several gentlemen were engaged in a rather stormy discussion of politics. I became entangled along with them, and had not remained in that apartment

THE GREAT STRIKE IN DURHAM.

EMPLOYERS' TERMS ACCEPTED.
END OF THE DISPUTE.

The meeting of the delegates of the entire county of Durham was held on Thursday. The greatest interest was attached to the meeting, for, in its issue, was involved, on the one hand, the continuance of work at admittedly good wages, though on a lower scale, or, on the other hand, the endurance of the want and privation which are the inevitable concomitants of the withdrawal of pay from thousands of homes.

Two meetings were to be held in Durham —the one, that of enginemen and breaksmen, and the other, the county colliery delegates. The former was held at the Half-Moon Inn, and was of a more protracted nature than the other and a far larger one, which was held in the Town Hall. At the latter, the delegates of 216 lodges, all connected with the County Miners' Association were present. Nearly 50,000 miners were represented. The motion for the employers' terms was supported by 112 against 97. On the conclusion of the meeting, many hearty congratulations were exchanged.

At the enginemen's meeting, 28 delegates, representing 1,700 men, were present, in addition to the officers of the society. It was resolved "That it is the opinion of this meeting that it is not desirable to continue the present struggle. We agree, therefore, to instruct a deputation to confer with the coal owners our willingness to resume work at a reduction of 21 per cent. If this does not meet with their views, this meeting is willing to refer the justice of the enginemen and to arbitrating to a reduction of 5 per cent. to arbitration, and pending the decision, this meeting pledges itself that all the men out shall return to their respective works." A deputation waited upon the employers at Newcastle, and after a long conference, agreed to resume work at the reduction offered by the employers.

Already the gloom which hung over the county has begun to dissipate, and a calamity which would more or less have crippled the manufacturing industry of the country at large, has, we hope, been averted.

THE DISPUTES IN THE LEEDS AND MEHLEY DISTRICTS.

In the Leeds and Methley Districts the masters, along with those in other districts, have given notice a short time ago of their intention to reduce the wages 25 per cent. The men considered this too great a reduction, and offered to accept 10 per cent less. The matter was then referred to Mr. Tennant, M.P., and Mr. Bailey, for the masters; and Mr. Macdonald, M.P., and Mr. John Holmes, Methley, on behalf of the men and a reduction of 12½ per cent. was agreed upon until the award of the umpire, Mr. Rupert Kettle, was made known. Last week, when the masters at Methley proposed to carry out the agreement, the men were dissatisfied, and left work on Friday and Saturday when they were paid, until they had obtained fuller information as to the precise terms. A meeting of delegates were held at Wakefield, and it was resolved to accept the temporary reduction, and await Mr. Kettle's award. The men accordingly resumed work at all the pits with the exception of two or three, where a dispute about the payment of boys kept them idle. This dispute was settled on Wednesday, and work was resumed. In the Leeds district, the men also complained about the reduction of 12½ per cent., and at several of the collieries they remained away for a few days after it was made, but ultimately returned to work.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

The following cases of interest to the readers in the district throughout which the Rothwell Times circulates have been heard during the past week, in the West Riding Police Court, at Wakefield, before H. Tew, Esq., T. H. Holdsworth, Esq., W. H. Leadam, Esq., and other Justices.

PITCH AND TOSS.—Four lads, named Joseph Sidebottom, George Smith, Henry Smith, and Joseph Smith, were charged with having, on the 26th ultimo, amused themselves by playing at the unlawful pastime of pitch and toss, on the public footpath between Newton-lane and the Churchyard-gate, in the parish of Stanley-cum-Wrenthorpe.—In the parish of Stanley-cum-Wrenthorpe.—P.-C. Andrew McLaren stated the case, informing the Bench that every one of the lads, who were hurriers, had given false names when apprehended.—They were ordered to pay 10s. each, including costs, with the alternative of seven days' imprisonment in the House of Correction.

HYDROPHOBIA AT ROTHWELL AND ROTHWELL HAIGH.—CAUTION TO KEEPERS OF DOGS.—Joseph Wilson, a miner, living at Rothwell Haigh, was summoned by the police for having, in the 25th of April, unlawfully acted in contravention of an order of Her Majesty's justices of the peace, by allowing a dog belonging to him to be at large unmuzzled.—Mr. Superintendent Hall, deputy chief-constable, produced a printed notice which he stated was by his order freely placarded throughout the townships of Rothwell, Rothwell Haigh, Methley, Oulton, Woodlesford, and various other places, requesting all owners of dogs, on and after the 13th of April, to keep them under control, and not to allow them to be at large unless they are muzzled. His reason for issuing this, as the Justices would be aware, was because there had been several cases of hydrophobia, one or two of which had been attended with very serious results.—P.-C. Balfour was then sworn, and deposed that, on Sunday, the 26th ultimo, he was on duty at Rothwell Haigh, about a quarter-past ten o'clock in the morning, when he saw a dog running about [illegible] perhaps five or six hundred yards from the defendant, who, when spoken to, stated that he knew nothing whatever about any notices having been placarded.—The defendant upon being asked what he had to say for himself, being asked what he had to say for himself, said: I think I ought to have had proper notice given me. I pay a license for my dog, and I have never seen a notice, or any thing of the kind, and what more can a man do? P.-C. Balfour, in reply to this, indicated some eight different stations, such as the John O'Gaunt, Bullock Bridge, Carr Lane, &c., at which he had put up notices, and added that the defendant ought to have seen them if he did not.—Mr. Superintendent Hall stated that this was the first case he had brought before the notice of the justices, and he had also much desire the infliction, and he had also much desire the infliction, and he had put such as a warning to others, publicity would merely impose a nominal penalty. They would merely impose a nominal penalty. The defendant had to pay 8s.——Thomas William Lumb, miner, of Rothwell Haigh, was summoned for a similar offence.—P.-C. McLaren stated that when he spoke kindly and quietly to the defendant, who was the worse for liquor, he was uncouthly consigned to a hot place, and told to mind his own business, as the dog was "all right."—In this case a fine of 10s. was imposed.—— costs, amounting to 9s. was imposed.——

Walter Abbishaw, of Rothwell Haigh, was summoned by P.-C. Balfour for having, on the 26th inst., committed a similar infringement of this order.—Balfour stated that he met the defendant and a companion crossing some fields, and the dog running about some fields, and the dog running about some fields, and the dog running about the grass.—Abbishaw stated, in defence, that he had not seen the police notice, and that he had only taken his animal out for a quiet run.—The Chairman: This plea of not having seen the bills may appear to you a very good one, but it will not answer here. You might equally well plead ignorance of any and every law. Every body will be liable to the penalty who contravenes our order, and I wish you and your fellow dog fanciers to bear that in mind. A fine of 10s. was then ordered to be paid.

OBTAINING BEER BY FRAUDULENT PRETENCES.—An elderly man; of military appearance, named Edward Branagan, was placed in the dock upon a charge of having, on the 2nd inst., at Rothwell, obtained a pint of ale from Mr. Thomas Birkinshaw, publican, by false and fraudulent pretences. From Mr. Birkinshaw's statement, it appeared that the prisoner had gone to his house on the day in question, and representing that he was a miner, employed at Messrs. Charlesworth's pit, had requested a pint of ale on credit, promising that he would call in the evening and pay for the same. When the fellow had drunk the beer and left the house, the prosecutor, entertaining some suspicion that he had been duped, instituted inquiries, and found that the story told him was totally untrue, and consequently gave information to the police, however, that into custody. Branagan had been carousing with some companions, as his own story will show, for when called upon to plead, he said: In as much untruth—it is a confounded lie—to say that I had any intention to swindle the man out of a pint of beer. There are my medals—the police have them in their possession—to show that I have been for many years in my country's service, have fought in various engagements, and have won honours. The fact is, gentlemen, I left Leeds a fortnight ago with £25, my pocket is empty, in my whom I had known in India and in the Crimea, and I spent the whole of my money. After that was exhausted I pawned almost every article of clothing about me, even to my shirt and boots, and I have been for several days out of my mind in a state of delirium tremens. For two days and nights I have been locked up, and have not had a wink of sleep. One of my old comrades told me to go and ask for the beer, and in consequence of my wards to the publican, when I had been given into custody, and offered to pay for the drink then, but the landlord would not take the money. I have no more to say. The Chairman (to prosecutor): Is it correct that you were offered the money by one of the prisoner's companions?—Mr. Birkinshaw: There was a party in the house with him, wanted to loose him with money, but then I wouldn't take it.—The Chairman (to prisoner): Where would you go, and what would you do with yourself if we were to release you? You know that if we send you to prison you will lose your pension.—Prisoner: I got you will have to go straight to Leeds, where I have been for some time past living.—The Chairman: Well, we believe your story, but you have run a very narrow risk of getting yourself into trouble. You can go now, but be more careful in future.—The prisoner thanked the justices and left the Court.

ACTION AGAINST A ROTHWELL LANDLORD: IMPORTANT TO COUNTRY PUBLICANS.—Mr. Thomas Laverack, landlord of the John O'Gaunt Inn, Rothwell, was summoned before the county magistrates sitting at Leeds, by the Hunslet, and the adjoining townships, to visit public-houses during the course of the Sabbath-day, at times when, taking advantage of the Act, they suppose that they might legally put in appearance of "travellers" and it was contended by the prosecution that the defendants had attempted to contravene the section of the Act. The house in question—the John O'Gaunt—is stated to be situated upon two and-a-half or three miles from Leeds, and on the afternoon in question several parties, namely, Mr. Edward Hallas, who, with his wife, carries on business as a money-lender, &c., in Hunslet-lane, and Alfred Newbold, a brick-maker, were found upon Mr. Laverock's premises. The plea set up by the defendant for the defence (Mr. Quiggin) was that these men were legitimately regarded as bona-fide travellers, they having walked some distance from their residences. The bench had heard the evidence of the police and others concerned in the case, it clearly appearing that the parties had been in the habit of resorting to the hotel in question for Sunday afternoon's enjoyment—the Chairman (Mr. W. H. Leatham) stated that he considered that such cases as these came fully within the scope of the law as laid down by Mr. Justice Erle, and had decided that whilst a bona-fide traveller might legitimately claim refreshments, this was a different case for in opposition to the bench that the parties in question had only walked two or three, or three or four miles, going thereby beyond the limited bounds, for the purpose of Sunday afternoon's enjoyment. They wished landlords in general to take a copy of the new Act, and not to take it by its strictest limits. The landlord of the hotel was fined 20s. and costs, and to take it by its strictest limits. The landlord of the hotel was fined 20s. and costs, altogether 26s., the other defendants having 11s. each to pay.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—ARE you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless, and pleasant to taste, it produces natural sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is quite the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is only sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d. each, manufactured in New York, and at 17 Oxford-street, London.

THE PIONEER'S REVENGE.

I am an old man now; see how the relentless hand of time has silvered my hair, and bowed me once proud form! I was not always so. Once I was gay and happy with the rest; but, alas! that happiness soon passed away.

Come here, my friend, and listen to the sad story of my eventful life.

I was but twenty years of age when I took my darling Emily to the altar, and vowed to love and cherish her till death should part us never more to be torn asunder. We lived very happily together, and might have lived on even unto this day, had not I conceived that it would be better for us to sell our little farm, and join with several neighbouring families, who were then preparing to emigrate to the Far West, sometimes known as "the land flowing with milk and honey."

I broached the subject very lightly to my Emily. She was at first averse to leaving her childhood's home—that happy spot where her life's pathway of hours had been spent; but she was an exemplary wife, sensible and intelligent, possessing great reasoning powers, and after a little time, by her persolution, and, being convinced that the step on which I had decided would be beneficial, she acquiesced in that decision without a murmur.

We accordingly disposed of our property—the house where our little Willie was born—and, with our friends, began our eventful journey.

We proceeded on our way until we reached St Louis, where we were joined by several other families, and, after a brief delay, we crossed the Mississippi, and started off through the prairies and unbeaten tracts of prairie. At length we entered a beautiful little valley, which was unanimously chosen as the spot on which to erect our miniature city.

Some time elapsed ere the boundaries of our lots were adjusted, and the construction of our humble edifices began. At last our cottage building was completed, and our little hamlet was surrounded by a high stockade, to protect us from the ravages of the Indians.

One night, several months after our arrival, we were awakened by the hoarse shouts of the guard and the rattling of rifles, mingled with the bloodcurdling war-whoops of the savages. Seizing our rifles, we rushed to the gate, the scene of attack, bravely resolving to sought to keep back the horde of yelling fiends who were trying to force an entrance ingdemons, but in vain. They gained the interior of the stockade, and then began their hellish work of murder and destruction.

I, in the confusion, sought my wife and child, and with them endeavoured to escape. We had not gone far ere we were discovered, and, with terrific yells, several of the red fiends started in horrible yells, several of the red fiends started in pursuit.

Onward I pressed; the thought of the terrible atrocities we would be subjected to captivated me. Fresh energy entering my limbs with thrice strength we rapidly increased the distance between ourselves and our pursuers.

While we were pursuing our flight, I struck my foot against a projecting stone, and was precipitated forward upon my face with great violence. I endeavoured to rise and prepare to defend myself, but my strength was gone, and I sank exhausted. Emily, who was overpowered and securely bound. Our captors then led us back to the burning village, and placed us in the centre of the band, the whole party started for their own habitation.

Many a weary mile was I carried by us without rest or food. Emily, naturally delicate, could go no further, and sank fainting to the earth. Oh, the agony of that moment! I shudder as I think on my horror! She was unconscious—dead, to all appearance, so far as her side, who sank his glutter ing tomahawk in her brain! Not satisfied with this dastardly crime, he drew the dripping weapon from his head, and buried it deep into the head of my Willie.

Vainly I endeavoured to burst asunder the bonds that held me powerless, but the stout deer skins resisted my frantic efforts. The author of this cowardly outrage, perceiving my agitation, stepped forward, and shook in my face the gory scalp of my murdered wife. Raising my manscalped hands to heaven, I swore vengeance and hatred which I kept that vow.

Our tedious march was resumed, and continued until nearly nightfall, when my captors halted, and proceeded to encamp for the night. A fire was kindled, and after partaking of some food, they retired to their blankets, and, lying down, were soon wrapped in slumber.

For hours I lay ruminating upon the sad events of the past day, and resolving in my mind the project of escape. Casting my eyes about me, I beheld some glittering substance which proved to be a knife. Moving cautiously forward, I seized it, and carefully concealed it about my person. Rising, I found I was very stiff, but, by great physical exertion, succeeded in freeing my hands. This done, I found I was very stiff, but, by great physical exertion, succeeded in freeing my hands. This done, I found I was very stiff, but, by great physical exertion, succeeded in freeing my hands. This done, I moved around the circle of sleeping demons, carefully noting each dusky face as I passed.

Stirring upon the ground, with his back to a tree, was the fiend whom I sought. I moved towards him. Inadvertently I trod upon a twig, the breaking of which partially aroused him; but one blow from a tomahawk that lay near cleft through brown and skull, and, penetrating the brain, silenced for ever the voice that had so cruelly blighted my whole life.

Blindly I rushed forward, not knowing or caring whither I went, so I could escape my enemies.

For several days I wandered about without food or drink, and, despairing of life, laid myself down to die.

As I lay upon the greensward, visions of a once happy home, a curly-headed boy, a rosy-cheeked wife, flashed before my eyes. I thought she was again by my side. I felt her warm kiss upon my lips, her loving arms encircled about my neck. Ah! sweet dream, made a paradise. My Willie! Oh, cherish prattle again fell as softly on my ears as did the warbling of the merry songsters in the forest. But they soon faded away into oblivion. I was at my family's grave, disinterred, and weary of life. I threw myself upon the mound, and there all was a blank.

"Well, Jake, what dye think o' it?"

"He's partly sich tother, Bill, and no 'ermes as the landlord 'ave touched the mo'd death. Let's pour a little o' this brandy 'ere on his lips, an' see if it won't fetch him round."

The last was spoken by two warm-hearted trappers; they had been out on an expedition against the red-skins, and by accident had discovered my miserable form.

The fiery liquid revived me, and, with a moan, I opened my eyes. The kind-hearted trappers poured more food and drink, and then requested me to tell them why I was roaming about in the prairie, friendless and alone. The recital of my cruel bereavement brought tears to their sympathetic eyes.

They asked me my intentions for the future, and my answer was, "Revenge!"

THROAT AFFECTIONS AND HOARSENESS.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness are recommended to try one of the above immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches," which have become famous for their wonderful effects. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—There is nothing in the whole "Materia Medica" like these pills for relieving all complaints of the chest, such as lumbago, sciatica, tic douloureux, and all pains and neuralgia in the nerves and muscles. Diseases of the stomach are relieved by these purified humours, and until these are corrected there can be no permanent cure. The eminent remedies may afford temporary relief, but in the end they only increase the sufferer. Holloway's Ointment penetrates the human system as salt penetrates meat, and the Pills greatly assist and strengthen its operation by clearing away all obstruction, and giving tone to the system generally. The prophetic virtues of Holloway's medicines stand unrivalled.

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1874.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

The usual meeting of the Board was held on Mond-y last. Present—J. Charlesworth, Esq. (Chairman), Messrs. Hargreaves, Sanderson, Dickinson, Clayton, Kendrew, Bumby, Smith, Lunn, and the Clerk.

The minutes of the preceding meeting having been read and confirmed, the clerk produced a letter received from Mr. Bromet, in which replying to the request of the Board, Mr. Bromet stated he would alter the agreement so that the water supply of the Board should be guaranteed as certain for three years, and if any time after that either party desired to withdraw from the agreement six months' notice should be given of such intention.

As has been before stated, this agreement is considered in no way to affect the supposed rights of Lord Stourton or of the people of Rothwell in regard to the Sterroid pile of Rothwell Well, but simply arranges for the permission to carry the water in pipes over his landship's land. The Board are a willing, however, to place things on a settled basis, and desire a 'proviso' inserting in this agreement stating that, the existing rights of each party remain as they were in respect to the well itself. After a long and animated conversation on the subject, it was proposed by Mr. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Clayton, —That the Clerk reply to Mr. Bromet's letter stating that he may proceed with the engrossment of the agreement as proposed by him, but with the addition of the above proviso; also, that a plan of the proposed trench for the pipes be forwarded to Mr. Bromet.

The drainage and main sewerage at Thwrite-Gate next occupied attention. Upon being asked, the Inspector stated that the people had nowhere to throw their refuse water. He had stopped them throwing it on the road, and they were now using the ashpits for the purpose, thereby causing a greater nuisance than by their throwing it on the road. Mr. Hargreaves said he had made enquiries, and found that in some of the houses there was no convenience for waste water, and that where sinks are supplied, the effluvia has returned up the pipes, and that he was told that sickness had either been, or was now, in nearly every house. It was found, however, that the report was exaggerated. After various remarks and proposals, it was finally resoved that the Public Works' Committee inspect the locality, and report on the best mode of carrying away the sewage.

The Inspector hoped the Committee would also look at an ashpit he described as on the Stourton Estate, which was 7 feet deep, and only 2 feet 6 inches in width, with only a thin wall as a partition between it and the cellar of a house, thereby causing a great stench, and a fruitful hotbed for fever and other diseases.

The Inspector was directed to request Mrs. Dobson to have the hedges brushed on each side of the Crofts.

Mr. Lunn brought under the notice of the Board the dangerous state of the Bridge at the bottom of the Croft's Lane, and proposed that some means should be adopted to secure the safety of persons walking down the lane. Referred to the Public Works' Committee.

It was resolved that a road scraper and chopper be purchased.

The report of the Medical Officer mentioned several cases of fever in out-townships, but no case in the town. The doctor also expressed his pleasure that the Board had so actively exerted themselves in the removal of the contents of ashpits and privies.

The Inspector mentioned a case at Low Goslaud where the Medical Officer had been much abused by the mother of a child who had been reprimanded by him for allowing it to go about before convalescent.—The Chairman thought a case of this character ought to be punished as a warning to others.

It was stated by the members that there was a case of fever now in Rothwell, near the Mill Dam; Mr. Lunn was glad to hear there were no more than one, as he got being in such a stagnant offensive state.

It was felt that some immediate steps must be taken to remedy this nuisance, and Mr. Hargreaves thought a temporary drain might be made to carry it a way.

It was finally resolved, that a special meeting be held next Monday evening, for the purpose of considering this important business.

It was also proposed, that the Inspector gives notices to the property owners who are discharging the nuisances here referred to.

In reply to a question by Mr. Sanderson, the Clerk stated that a special rate would have to be laid for any drainage scheme, and that the Rate would only affect the parts of the Board District, for whose benefit the scheme is carried out.

The Inspector stated, that during the last fortnight 100 privies and 80 ash pits had been removed, and that by Tuesday last all Rothwell would be properly finished.

The Inspector also said not above three out of all the 500 were passable, according to the Sanitary requirements.

Mr. Hargreaves in accordance with the notice given last meeting, said the Public Works Committee had inspected the town, and reported that eleven additional lamps were necessary for the proper lighting of the streets, and proposed that eleven lamps be purchased, and as far as possible, leave be obtained of the various owners of houses mentioned to fix the lamps in the positions named.

Mr. Lunn was anxious to know whether the Board could not more advantageously buy their own droes, than as bought at present,—referred to the Highway's Committee.

Mr. Kendrew complained that there was now no less than 180 yards of Bell Hill opened up for the payiours, before a stone was put in, thereby causing additional expense for watching at night, and also seriousness to the traffic. It was stated by incommoding the traffic. that Mr. Prowther is now sending stone as fast as possible, and the Board urged the importance of getting the work forward as quickly as can be.

Accounts to the amount of £40 were ordered to be paid.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence

The following cases of interest to the readers in the district throughout which the Rothwell Times circulates, have been heard during the past week, in the West Riding Police Court, at Wakefield, before E. Tew, Esq., T. H. Holdsworth, Esq., W. H. Leatham, Esq., and other Justices.

"ST. HELEN'S TOM" IN TROUBLE.—Thomas Hopton, a miner, living in Goal Fold, Rothwell, was summoned by Harrison Hare, a miner, also living in the same village, for having unlawfully assaulted him.—The complainant stated that whilst he was, a few evenings since, standing in the public thoroughfare, near Mrs. Mary Brook's house, Hopton challenged him to fight, and because he kept his hands in his pockets, and declined to do so, Hopton struck him and knocked him down. He had not given any provocation, nor did he retaliate. Upon the chairman asking whether anything was known about the defendant, Sergeant Gill stated that he had been fined 5s. and 8s. costs on the 11th of August, 1873, for being drunk and riotous, and 10s. and 5s. 6d. costs on the 20th of the same month, for a similar offence. There were three "Toms" in Rothwell, namely, "Rothwell Tom," "St. Helen's Tom," and "Lobby Tom,"—the defendant was "St. Helen's Tom."—The court imposed a fine and costs amounting to 20s.

THE VAGARIES OF OLD ROTHWELLIANS UPON A VISIT TO THEIR NATIVE VILLAGE.—Two men, named Joshua Greenwood and Squire Greenwood, who stated that they were brothers, were placed in the dock upon a charge of having been drunk and riotous, on the 9th instant, ultimo. The men, who still appeared to be labouring under the effects of "John Barleycorn," caused some amusement in court by their ludicrous conduct and demeanour whilst being charged. Joshua was attired in an old military uniform, and was blowing away vigorously, in the midst of some 50 or 60 children, upon a tin whistle. Joshua was the organist, and Squire was the monkey. They were both, of course, drunk. After vainly endeavouring to induce them to go to their residence, and after preventing their entrance to the Hare and Hounds, and other places of refreshment, the sergeant had to resort to sterner means in order to secure them. The defendants said they had been 12 years in the army, and that they were "like to have a spree on visiting their native village."—The court imposed the usual drunkard's penalty of 5s. and costs in each case, amounting altogether to £1 8s. 6d., which was paid.

A METHLEY MINER ON THE SPREE.—Thomas Harris, miner, was charged by P.-C. Collins, with having been drunk and riotous on the highway at Methley, on the 27th of April. Collins met with the man (who did not appear in court) in Watergate, Methley, where he was shouting and behaving himself in a very disgraceful manner. He had since been fined 10s., however, expressed regret for his conduct. The bench imposed a fine of 5s. and expenses, in all amounting to 15s.

SMART DOINGS BETWEEN NEIGHBOURS.—A man, named William Armitage, who lives at Methley, was summoned for having, on the 23rd ultimo, unlawfully assaulted and beaten Hannah Armitage.—The complainant stated that defendant had threatened to "cut her eyes out;" that he had struck her upon the hand with a hatchet; had throttled her, seized her by the hair of the head, and dashed her on the floor." On the other hand, she did not deny having called defendant's children some very improper names, and having likewise used other improper language to him.—After hearing the case on both sides, the justices dismissed the summons upon payment of 2s., the amount of expenses incurred.

CAUTION TO DOG-KEEPERS.—Mrs. Harrison, a lady of independent means, residing at Woodlesford, was summoned for having allowed a dog belonging to her to run at large unmuzzled. It was stated that the dog had only left the house a few minutes before.—A fine of 15s., including costs, was imposed.

THE CZAR'S VISIT.

The Emperor of Russia, with a large suite, arrived at Windsor on Wednesday evening, and Monday instead of Gravesend, which alteration took place in consequence of the Royal yacht grounding for several hours off Flushing. The reception he everywhere received was a most hearty one.

The Czar on Thursday, visited the chief places of interest in the neighbourhood of Windsor, and had a row on Virginia Water. On Thursday evening, Her Majesty gave the Czar a grand banquet.

PRESENTATION TO MR. JAMES HARGREAVES.

A full report of the interesting Presentation of Silver Plate to Mr. Hargreaves to-night, will be given in next week's Times.

THE DURHAM MINERS.

Matters remain very much in the same condition on the north-east and western mining districts. It is scarcely expected that the present indecisive state of affairs will be much longer. The miners as a body are not prepared for a general lockout. Those who have had money in the savings bank are withdrawing their deposits daily, and those who are not are already in very straightened circumstances. The western collieries are not expected to resume work this week. All the horses are now out of the pits. Great anxiety is felt in and about Durham as to the final issue of the struggle.

The committee of the Durham miners decided at a meeting on Thursday afternoon, by 175 against 39, to accept the 10 per cent. reduction and go to work, working eleven days per fortnight.

THE CLEVELAND MINERS STRIKE

There was a full attendance 1st Middlesbrough Exchange on Tuesday, and some curious things was evinced as to the meeting of the osity was evinced as to the meeting of the Cleveland Mineowners' Association which was to be held. After briefly discussing the present position of matters, a resolution was passed binding the mineowners to maintain the position they have assumed, and to adjourn for a fortnight. Mineowners make no secret of their intention to propose a further reduction of wages. There is a general migration of able-bodied men from the district and it is rumoured that the miners have resolved not to claim any benefit from the union funds for a month. Most of the tradesmen are honorary members of the Miners' Association, paying one guinea per annum subscription and receiving the benefit of union patronage. These tradesmen as well as the publicans say that the action of the miners is indiscreet, in resisting the current of a general falling market, but that the mineowners ought not to have had refused arbitration altogether. They will not discontinue giving credit to their regular customers.

Large numbers of unmarried men have just left the district for other localities.

A deputation from the National Miners' Association addressed meetings of ironstone miners, in Cleveland on Thursday, urging the necessity of some concession in their demands. No decision, however, was arrived at.

THE SOUTH, YORKSHIRE MINERS' WAGES.

On Tuesday a meeting of the colliery proprietors of South Yorkshire and North Derbyshire was held at the Kings' Head Hotel, Barnsley, for the purpose of receiving from the executive of the Miners' Association an answer with regard to the proposed reduction of 12½ per cent. There was a very good attendance, and Mr. Stewart was in the chair. There was also a meeting of miners' delegates representing 23,000 men, at which it was agreed that the proposal for a reduction of wages was premature, and that before it was agreed to the secretary of the association should issue circulars for the purpose of receiving the views of all the members. The resolution having been made known to the colliery owners they agreed to allow the matter to stand over for a week. Several of the colliery owners stated that if the reduction was notacceded to they would at once prepare to set their pits down until such time as the men could recognise the present state of affairs, coal now being 40 per cent. cheaper than when the last advance was made.

The 2,000 miners in Bolton and Farworth districts have resumed work on the masters terms, of 20 per cent. reduction.

Some of the collieries in the North Wales district, were the men struck on Monday, were at work on Tuesday, but on others the strike continues.

THE COLLIERS, MEETING AT WAKEFIELD. Last Friday week, between 2,000 and 3,000 colliers assembled on Heath Common, near Wakefield, and passed a resolution to resist the 12½ per cent. reduction in their wages agreed to by the arbitrators of their Executive Council. On Monday most of the men had resumed work at the reduced price, not caring to lose a month's wages with no support from the Union as contemplated.

METHLEY.—To-morrow, the various clubs will meet, walk in procession to Methley Church, and there listen to a sermon by the Hon. and Rev. P. Y. Saville, when collections will be made in aid of the Leeds Infirmary. It is our intention to give a full report.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning Grey or falling off, we say "Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or Weak hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful as well as promotes a new growth on the hair on cast spots, where the glands are not decayed. Certificates from Dr. Vermann on every bottle, with full particulars. Ask your Chemist for "Mexican Hair Renewer," prepare by HENRY C. GALLOP, 493 Oxford-street, London, and sold by Chemists and perfumers everywhere.

THE PIONEER'S REVENGE.

This reply gave eminent satisfaction, and they began to untie me back to life with all the tenderness of women. When my usual strength and vigour had in a measure been restored, they insisted into my brain the ways and snake-like cunning of the red man. My eyes soon discovered the faint st trail. My feet glided as noiselessly as the moccasin of the forest as those of my native tutors.

When they saw that I was "well read" in the modes and manners of Indian warfare, the trapping of wild beasts in an open district of the country; and see me adrift, saying, "We've taught ye all but we could; now depart ye yer trail of the Pioneer of the Saint Lands every year about this time, an'll see ever git tired follerin' trails, and don't go under; just cum down that air way."

It ough t ready grasp of the hand, a parting word of sympathy and advice, and they were gone.

I'll not size you with a recital of my many adventures and hair-breadth escapes, &c.; suffice it to say that I became the terror of the plains, and such was my thirst for blood that I re ceived from the redskins the name of "Indian Killer."

Well did I deserve that terrible title! For many long years did I follow the murderers of my Emily with a relentless hand, until not one of the pack of cowards then remained; then the fires of vengeance that had been raging in my heart abated.

I crossed over into St. Louis on my return, and sought out the warm-hearted men who had so kindly befriended me in my hour of need. But one had taken the canoe and paddled over the dark river of death, where the fiendish yells and cruel knife and tomahawk of the redskin is unknown, and the other had terminated his existence while skirmishing with a party of Indians.

When this and tale reached my ears, "pang on pang tored my heart; and I, the terror of the plains, the ruthless slayer, wept like a child.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1874.

PRESENTATION TO MR. J. HARGREAVES

This most interesting event took place on Saturday evening last, at the house of Mr. Edward Wright, Carlton. Although Mr. James Hargreaves is rather a young man, and has only been manager at the Newmarket Colliery some 16 months, it speaks volumes in his favour that, on his promotion to the management of Rothwell Haigh Collieries, his men feel so much respect for him, and experienced so much sorrow at his removal, that a handsome and valuable testimonial (a) that presented, should have been voluntarily subscribed for and so auspiciously given to Mr. Hargreaves.

The present consists of Tea and Coffee Service (silver electro), and 1 dozen Silver mounted Table Forks, suitably engraved with the initials of their late manager. The tea-pot bears the following inscription (the ornaments are omitted):—

PRESENTED TO JAMES HARGREAVES,
By the Workmen of the Newmarket Collieries,
As a token of their esteem,
May, 1874.

The money value of the testimonial is £17, which has been subscribed by nearly 200 men and boys employed at the above Collieries.

The articles had been exposed during the week in the window of Mr. Marshall, Stationer and Printer, Rothwell, and of Mr. Arundale, Grocer, Carlton.

The supper, which was provided by Mrs. Wright, of the Unicorn Inn, Carlton, was of a most substantial and plentiful character, and all declared themselves highly gratified with the repast.

About 74 persons sat down at half-past six, there being present besides the workmen of Newmarket, Mr. William Hargreaves, general manager for Messrs. Charlesworths' Collieries in this district. Mr. Thomas Hargreaves, agent and traveller to Messrs. Charlesworth, Mr. Samuel Hargreaves, clerk to the Local Board, and Mr. Joe Hargreaves.

The tables having been cleared, Mr. James Pickersgill, (secretary for the Newmarket Accident Fund), said, (secretary for the Newmarket Accident Fund), moved.—That Mr. William Hargreaves take the chair,” having been seconded, the motion was carried unanimously.

Mr. W. Hargreaves, in thanking the company for the honour they had done him, said—though he did not know half of those present, personally, yet he had very great pleasure in meeting them, and no doubt they would spend a very agreeable evening, together. Occasions like these are very rare, and it is often that a manager so far gains the confidence of his men as to receive a testimonial like the one about to be presented. These are stirring times, and it is most important that the relations between manager and men should be amicable, and I am happy to say that in this district we always have been. He was glad all fee'd a liberty, and spend a very happy evening together. (applause.) I have now the pleasure of calling on Mr. Stephen Taylor, to make the presentation.

Mr. S. Taylor:—Mr. chairman, fellow-men—this is the second time I have had the pleasure of standing in a position like the present.

Although you (Mr. Hargreaves) have only been a short time with us, you have done a great deal in that time, and I am highly gratified in now presenting to you in the name of the workmen of Newmarket Collieries, this testimonial in token of our respect and esteem. (loud cheers).

Mr. James Hargreaves, on rising, was warmly received, and in reply said:—

GENTLEMEN,

I am deeply thankful to you for the beautiful and handsome present you have made me.

I can hardly express my feelings on this occasion but let me say this, that it shall be treasured by me and my family as a precious heirloom.

If you would allow me gentlemen, I would revert to the manner in which we have dealt with each other in the past, in doing this I must fairly acknowledge to you that whatever I wished to be done was done without a murmur, and whatever little differences there might have been between us they have in all cases been most amicably settled.

I would also take this occasion to thank the deputies and other persons in charge, for the assiduous manner in which they have assisted me in the management of the colliery.

I am sorry to miss one who was with us at the last supper, we had one who was our old friend and valuable servant, Henry Thompson. I scarcely need ask whether he was universally respected by you or not. I think I might safely say he was; I for myself had the greatest respect for him.

Let me again express my thanks to you for this present, and I hope that, although I am leaving you, to take the management of another colliery, that our relations with each other will still be pleasant, and that a reminiscence of the past will be sometimes to bring thoughts of the pleasant times we have spent together.

Mr. James Pickersgill, on behalf of the deputies, was very thankful for the hearty manner in which Mr Hargreaves had always treated them, and that they were very sorry to lose him.

Mr. Josiah Clarkson, said—if the by-work men had cause to be thankful, he was sure the colliers had. He also spoke of the kind and quiet manner in which they had been met, whenever any grievance was brought before their late manager's notice. He could truly say that they had always been answered with a wrong word, but were always heard patiently.

Mr. Alfred Oliver, said—after hearing the reply their manager had just read, they ought to drink his very good health. He would like to say one thing respecting him, and that was, in going his rounds he was never above speaking to the men, but always ready with a kind word or a good morning. He proposed the very good health of their late manager, which was accordingly drunk with three cheers.

Mr. James Hargreaves having thanked them.

The chairman next proposed the health of the spokesman of the subscribers, Mr. Taylor, which was drunk, and to which he replied in a suitable manner.

Mr. David Smith, a Scotchman, in making a capital little speech, said—he knew of many pits where the out-put was quite inadequate to the outlay, which result he attributed largely to the managers fault; but it had not been so at Newmarket. He considered the it had not been so at Newmarket. He considered the man, who not only paid his men well, but also produced a good out-put and interest for the masters, was the man who deserved to be a manager and who ought to be promoted.

The healths of the new manager (Mr. Thomas Bedford), and the landlord having been drunk;

Mr. Marshall said he would like to make a few remarks. As the representative of the public, he experienced very great pleasure in being present, and would go away with a high opinion of the intelligence and good behaviour of the workmen of Newmarket. There had been nothing whatever to shock the feelings or wound the sensibilities of anyone, and everything had been conducted in a most praiseworthy manner. He heartily thanked them for the opportunity of meeting with them on this pleasant and memorable occasion.

During the evening, Mr. H. Sheldon, gave selections on the pianoforte, and a song or two were given.

Deaths.

MINERS' DEMONSTRATION AT METHLEY, AND SERMON BY THE HON. AND REV. P. Y. SAVILLE.

On Sunday last, the village of Methley was all satir and full of visitors, to celebrate what may be called Infirmary Sunday, for Methley. The sun smiled radiantly and warmly on the crowds of people, as if in approval of the benevolent object of the gathering, and nature seemed to join gladly in the festival.

The various lodges and clubs of the Methley District mustered at two o'clock, at the Red House, and marched through the village, four-a-breast to the Parish Church.

The Rothwell Model Brass Band (who kindly volunteered their services), took the lead, while the Bands of Methley and Castleford brought up the rear. The procession numbered between four and five hundred members, who all wore white gloves and presented a most respectable appearance.

The service in the Church was commenced by the chanting of the Litany; the 130th Hymn, in Dr. Monk's Psalter was then sung; after which an eloquent sermon was preached, by the Hon. and Rev. P. Y. Saville, from the pulpit, who took for his text the sixth chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians, and part of the ninth verse,—“ Be not weary in well doing.”

He told the members of the various clubs that he rejoiced last year when they informed him of their intention of coming to the Parish Church to call down God's blessing upon their clubs, and that it was not their intention to come before the Lord empty, but that they were anxious to make an offering to the Leeds Infirmary, but he was still more rejoiced to find that they fellowed the example of the Good Samaritan, who, not satisfied with supplying the present necessities of the wounded man, promised help for his future need; so they shewed that they were not weary in well doing, and that they had resolved to meet the future needs of the Infirmary.

He trusted that as the continued Rector year by year, so long as he continued Rector of the Parish, that laudable practice would be adhered to, and that it would also be continued when his ministry amongst them was ended.

The Leeds Infirmary was well deserving of all the help that could be afforded to it from not one class of persons only, but from all ranks, the high, the low, the rich, and the poor, according to their means. There the poor, according to their means. There was probably no one present in that large congregation who had not received benefit from the Leeds Infirmary, either in his own person or in that of his friends and neighbours.

He then alluded to some of the various miracles of healing which our blessed Lord performed during the three years “he went about doing good,” especially the healing the deaf and dumb man mentioned in the seventh chapter of St. Mark's Gospel. He pointed out that our Lord did not come to remove the general sentence of present tribulation: his miracles of mercy were to shew the power of God, and to prove himself to be the Lord.

The preacher called upon his hearers to fly to Christ for help from eternal woe, for fly to Christ for help from eternal woe, for although Christ will not now make blind men see, and the deaf hear, and the dumb speak, see, and the deaf hear, and the dumb speak, yet if we have faith he will save us from eternal woe and death, and will say to his faithful followers “Come ye blessed of my Father, receive the kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the world.”

During the collection, the Rothwell Band made the walls of the Old Church tremble with the Hallelujah Chorus; little more need be said respecting the performance by this well-known company of musicians, than that they played the magnificent piece in the proper effect and in splendid position with thrilling effect and in splendid time. After the benediction, the organist repeated the same piece of music in a very sweet and beautifully modulated manner, presenting a contrast to the war-like and boisterous clangor of the trumpets of the Band.

The result of the collections amount to the very handseme sum of £17 13s., which will be handed over to the Treasurer of the Leeds Infirmary.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

The early part of the evening was occupied in the special business for which the meeting was called, and was spent in the discussion of various plans for carrying away the sewage at the Stourton estate, and in the most equitable mode of obtaining the money for the expense of such scheme.

It was decided that Mr. Stewart, of Wakefield, be consulted for legal opinion on certain points, connected with the question.

Mr. Crossley was likewise to be written to, desiring him to push on with the Surveying of Rothwell.

The Public Works and Finance Committee, were desired to obtain particulars as to the new tanps.

The Inspector stated that on Thursday last, a complaint had been made, of the smoke caused by the Brick Kilns, belonging to Mr. James Hargreaves, on the Marsh; the objection was taken by Mr. Richardson and Miss Baines.

Mr. Hargreaves for his uncle, the owner, stated, if the Board considered it such a nuisance as to require stopping, he should say, stop it at once.

In reply to the Chairman, the Clerk stated that unless it was proved to be injurious to health, no steps could be taken, but compensation might be claimed for any damage done.

The Inspector was directed to mention the matter to the Medical Officer, and ascertain whether he considered the kiln smoke injurious to health.

Accounts passed, and ordered to be paid, to the amount of £160.

ROTHWELL.

PRESENTATION TO MR. JAMES CLARKE.—Yesterday afternoon, an interesting company gathered at Prospect House, Rothwell, for the purpose of being present at the presentation of a testimonial to Mr. James Clarke, professor of music. The testimonial consisted of a handsome and massive gold pencil case, and was presented during the afternoon by Miss Duckells (one of the young lady boarders), as a token of respect, from the music pupils connected with Mrs. Clarke's seminary. After Mr. Clarke had suitably acknowledged the kindness shown him by the gift, the pupils and several friends took tea with the family, and a very enjoyable evening was spent in dancing and singing.

WHITSUNTIDE.—Whit-Monday is the festival of the Primitive Methodist Sunday School, and this year the scholars and teachers paraded the town, singing in various places, with very nice effect, after which they all sat down to tea in the chapel, and afterwards separated to spend the evening with their friends.

ROTHWELL MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—The debating class has just closed its first session, which has been well attended, and one. The class has been a very successful the interest in the debates, chiefly of an historical, social, or metaphysical character, has been fully sustained up to the finish. It was thought fitting that an excursion should be made at the season, Ripon and Fountaine's Abbey being selected, as doubly attractive, on account of the visit of the Conference of the Yorkshire Union of Mechanics' Institutes to that city. On Wednesday last, 20 members of the class availed themselves of the opportunity.—the weather was very fine, and the glorious scenery of Fountaine's Abbey and Studley Royal were seen to great advantage. After spending a few hours in the grounds, examining the wonderful and extensive remains of antiquity and the very elaborate memorial chapel now in course of construction, the party returned, highly gratified with the many scenes of beauty placed before them, to listen in the evening to the intellectual treat of the speeches from the noble and learned men announced,—an early train prohibited this to some extent, and the meeting was left in regret.—The class will commence again in October, when it is to be hoped there will be a large accession of members.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.—Owing to the Whitsuntide holidays, the ordinary meeting of the Board was not held, the necessary quorum of Members not being present.

CARLTON.

The anniversary of the Wesleyan Sunday School was held at Carlton on Tuesday. A larger amount of money was kindly subscribed this year than has been received before. After parading the village, and singing their hymns, tea was provided in the school-room, and the evening was spent in a field kindly lent for the occasion, in the usual festive manner.

OULTON.

SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.—Two sermons were preached on Sunday, by the Rev. J. Jenkins, and on Whit-Monday afternoon the scholars (numbering about 60) were regaled with a really good tea in a spacious barn, decorated with May blooms and flowers, and afterwards with several swings, at Clump Cliffe Farm, occupied by Mrs. Armitage, and about a mile from the chapel. Unfortunately, an almost constant drizzle set in to make the proceedings not so enjoyable as they would otherwise have been. Tea was provided in the same place for teachers and friends, and was well patronized, about 90 persons being present. After tea, in spite of the drizzle, both scholars and friends disported themselves very merrily on the lawn in front of the romantic old farm-house, also in the extensive stabling and home-looking grounds of the farm, which has at some date long past been built as a hunting box, attached to Methley Park. There is also an observatory of some height, from which a very extensive view may be had of the adjoining park, and surrounding country. The weathercock on this structure can be seen from a great distance. The great kindness of Mrs. Armitage is very much valued by the Oulton Methodists, and makes quite a unique enjoyment for both the scholars and their kind teachers.

Oulton Feast is always held at Whitsuntide, and accordingly the usual accessories were to be seen, the juveniles and elder people, too, heartily entering into the festivities.

THE STRIKE OF CLEVELAND MINERS.

There is very little change to record in the position of the affairs between employers and and connected with the Cleveland ironstone mines. The same isolated attitude is maintained, and judging by the indifference manifested by the mine owners present at the Exchange, it appears pretty clear that the end of the struggle is not yet. More blast furnaces will be damped down this week, and the effects upon the finished iron trade are daily becoming more threatening.

The polling for the Poole election took place on Tuesday, resulting in the return of the Liberal candidate, the numbers being:—Ashley, 681; Locket, 629; giving the former a majority of nine.

Mr Justice Mellor on Tuesday declared Mr J. K. Cross, the sitting Liberal member for Bolton, duly elected, the costs to be apportioned between the parties.

A man who arrived at Dover on Sunday afternoon by the Ostend boat was found dead on Monday morning in his bedroom at the Lord Warden Hotel, having shot himself with a five-chamber revolver. When the body was searched there were found among its papers address cards with "F. Bolladeen, general manager of the Anglo-Austrian," upon them, and about £40 in notes and gold.

The late storm has been attended with fatal results. Among these a remarkable accident is recorded. Two young women were walking on the banks of the Lee when they were struck by lightning, thrown into the water, and drowned.

Deaths.

NUNNS.—May 27th, 1874, aged 19 years, Thomas Nunns, of Rothwell.

As a safe, permanent, and warranted cure for Pimples, Scrofula, Scurvey, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases of all kinds, we can with confidence recommend CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE. Sold by Consists everywhere.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH, AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the Teeth a peculiar pearly whiteness and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. The "Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is also soothing to the taste, and the greatest luxury of the age. Price 2s 6d for the liquid, and 1s per box for the Floriline "Powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford-street, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—There is nothing in the whole of Materia Medica like these medicaments for the certainty of there action in lumbago, sciatica, and dolorous, and all flying or settled pains in the nerves and muscles. Diseases of this nature originate in bad blood and depraved humours, and until these are corrected these can be no permanent cure. The ordinary remedies may afford temporary relief, but in the end always disappoint the sufferer. Holloway's Ointment penetrates the human system as salt penetrates meat and the Pills greatly assist and accelerate its operation upon the liver, stomach, and giving relief to by clearing away all obstruction, and giving relief to the system generally. Holloway's remedies stand unrivled.

A ROMANCE OF A RAILWAY CARRIAGE.

It was a close and sultry afternoon, towards the end of July. The Dover express was about to start from the London Bridge terminus of the South Eastern Railway, and there was the usual bustle and clatter, attendant upon such an occurrence.

Among the intending passengers might be seen on the platform a stout silver-haired, cherry-looking elderly gentleman, whose portly person, broadcloth, massive gold chain (to which was attached a valuable repeater), and, above all whose conscious air of respectability, at once proclaimed the man of business. He was, in fact, the senior partner of a wealthy and well-known firm of Kentish brewers, and was taking with him to Sandwich a large sum of money, which he had come to London on purpose to collect. This passenger appeared to possess that sort of amiable inquisitiveness and cheerfulness which is not uncommon attributes of gentlemen who have passed the Rubicon of a certain age. His first care was to secure a copy of the latest edition of the Times, his next to recruit himself with a biscuit and a glass of old sherry at the refreshment bar, and finally to walk up and down the platform, at a somewhat brisk pace, being evidently unwilling to sit down within the confines of a railway carriage until it became a matter of positive necessity that he should do so.

While he thus exercised himself, the eye of the worthy old gentleman was suddenly caught by a large staring printed bill on the wall, and adjusting his gold-rimmed spectacles, he proceeded to peruse it. It ran thus:—

"Murder! £900 Reward!—The above is hereby offered by Her Majesty's Government to any person or persons who shall give such information as may lead to the discovery and conviction of Charles Wintringham (alias Carlo Hertoleer), suspected of the murders, for secondof committing the murders, for the secret murder of Mary Ann Wintringham, on the various inest railway carriages—the property, on the various lines of railway throughout the United Kingdom. The said Charles Wintringham (alias Carlo Hertoleer) is 27 years of age, and is short of stature, of fair complexion, has blue eyes, and good teeth. His hands and feet are remarkably small and well-shaped, and his manner winning, persuasive, and courteous. Whoever will give such information as may lead to the apprehension, will receive the above reward."

It was also particularly stated that C. W. had a mole beneath his chin.

"Bless me!" ejaculated the brewer—"what an Adonis! But, dear me, murdering people in railway carriages—how remarkably nervous I feel, to be sure. Hear, guard!"

A guard who happened to be near, scenting a probable half-crown, immediately advanced,

"Guard, I must have a carriage to myself."

"Train will be very full, sir. Where are you for, sir?"

"Sandwich," was the reply.

"Change at Minster for Sandwich and deal," said the guard, insinctively repeating the well-known formula.

"Yes, yes, I know about that, I should think, by this time," int-errupted the old gentleman, impatiently.

"The question is—can I have a carriage, or not?" said he, producing a sovereign from his pocket, and shewing it surreptitiously to the guard.

The eyes of the official brightened up amazingly.

"Follow me sir," said he, "and I'll see what can be done."

The old gentleman followed his conductor, and the result was, as it usually is, the golden key, which unlocks every door, unlocked for the brewer the door of a reserved first class v. riage.

"There, sir," said the guard, locking him in; "now you're all right. But I forgot; you must change at Ashford for Minster, as this is a Dover carriage."

"Oh, I know that," said the old gentleman, I know the line well."

"All right, sir," said the Guard. "No offence?"

"Oh, certainly not," said the other. "Much obliged to you."

Putting his hand to his cap, the guard then departed to his van.

The old gentleman unfolded his Times, and began to look through the latest doings on the stock Exchange and in the hop Market. Then he looked for the change and in the hop Market. Then he looked for the departure of the train behind a thundering and fro' ening; late passengers rushed frantically to and fro' and the accustomed porters strove in vain to satisfy their demands. Suddenly the smiling, open-face face of the guard appeared at the window of the carriage, in which the brewer sat alone in his glory.

"Oh, I beg pardon, sir," said he. "I realy beg pardon; but could you oblige me with change for a sovereign?"

"Certainly not," said the old gen.tleman, looking up quite from his repose. "What did I pay my sovereign for?"

"But you see, sir," began the old man, somewhat mollified, "that case—" began the old man, somewhat mollified, "that case—" began the old man, somewhat mollified.

"I would not insist upon the gentleman against his will," said a low, sweet voice. "I would rather lose the train."

"Indeed, indeed," said the brewer, looking at the lovely face before him, "I shall be honoured. Open the door, guard."

The triumphant guard unlocked the door, and the fair visitor with a gracious bow to her elderly companion took her seat. In another instant the official aution took her seat. In another instant the official had received a second golden doncuer, doors were slammed to with a crash, the engine whistled, and the train enforced servitude, gave a shriek, and the train started out of the station on its mission across the lovely county of Kent.

Involuntarily the brewer stole a glance at his beautiful companion. She was dressed in a very costly but which set off her slight and elegant figure to great advantage. Her features were singularly lovely, and her dark hair formed an exquisite contrast to the blue eyes and fair complexion.

"If I were sorry years younger," thought the brewer, "I should—I should—I—"

Presently, after those nameless and numberless civilities had been exchanged between the lady and gentleman, which, after a most inevitable when two strangers are travelling together, they commenced conversing in the most friendly manner. The second conversing in the most friendly manner. The second appearance much pleased and gratified with her companion, and in a few minutes had called forth all the attention which his companion paid to all he said. Whilst the lady in her part threw off the air of timidity and distrust whice had at first sat so well upon her, and displayed a most charming vivacity.

"It is very pleasant travelling with you," said his companion. "Besides an accident rarely happens to the express."

"Oh madam, pray do not speak of accidents," said the brewer.

"You are nervous, then, sir?" said the lady.

"Somewhat so, I confess; and besides—"

"Besides?—" she said, interrurting.

"Besides, are other accidents besides those to which one's luggage is exposed."

"Well, madam, since the affair of Muller and Mr. Briggs—"

"Oh I understand," said the lady, with a light and musical laugh; "you are afraid of being murdered, sir." "Hem, well—"

"Oh, do not make excuses, sir," said the lady "I can understand that persons may be cowardly, when—"

"Cowardly, madam!" said the poor old gentleman somewhat disconcerted.

"Certainly," she reply, laughing more than ever; "is it not so, to fear that you are to be murdered because no one else does not take place now. Mr. Briggs? Such occurrences do not take place now. Mr. Briggs? Such occurrences do not take place now. Mr. Briggs? Such occurrences do not take place now.

"Not take place!" cried the brewer, opening his eyes; "why, on that very platform I saw—"

"Oh, sir! I could see it myself," said the lady.

"You did?" said the old gentleman.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

On Monday last, a meeting of the Rothwell Local Board, was held in the Board Room. Present:—Messrs. Hargreaves, Sanderson, Dickinson, Clayton, Kendrew, Bamby, Smith, Lunn, and the Clerk.

Mr. Charlesworth not being present, Mr. Hargreaves, was called to the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, a report was read from the Medical Officer, respecting the brick burning on the Marsh.—explained of a favourable sign, a short discussion ensued, but no resolution was passed on the subject.

Mr. Price, the collector, next drew the attention of the Board to the new Highway Rate, which it was necessary to levy. The last rate was laid the beginning of January. The following was the statement:—

AMOUNT OF NEW RATE.

At 10d. in the £	917	17	0d.
Arrears	85	11	11
	£1003	8	2

He explained that the arrears only included two accounts, one a small one, about 30s., the other was owing by the Midland Railway Co., who, in consequence of the new valuation, had objected to the payment of the rate, on the extra amount at which they were rated, and had appealed against the same, and the question was yet undecided. The chairman thought great credit was due to the collector, and that his report was most praiseworthy.

During the discussion of a contract entered into with Mr. Robinson, of Skipton, for the supply of stone to be laid. (Carried unanimously.)

Mr. Price reminded the Board, that there was no provision for the warning and cleansing of the Board room, it was resolved, that the Board allow Mr. Price £2 yearly, for the fire, cleaning, &c., of the room, proposed by Mr. Sanderson, seconded by Mr. Clayton.

The clerk then had the reply of the Local Government Board to the reports sent by the Medical Officer and the Clerk.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD,
WHITEHALL, S.W.,
15th May, 1874.

SIR,—I am directed by the Local Government Board, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 4th instant, enclosing a copy of two Reports made to the Rothwell Local Board by their Medical Officer of Health; and to express the Board's satisfaction at the steps which the Local Board are taking to improve the Sanitary condition of the district

The Board consider it desirable that the Local Board should take into their consideration the question of providing a Hospital for cases of infectious diseases, arising within their district, as the provision of such a hospital renders if possible to isolate the earlier cases of those diseases, and thus, to prevent their extension.

I am, also, directed to observe that, although the Bye-Laws referred to in your letter are not in force, the Local Board have under the Nuisances' Removal Act, large powers to compel the removal of Nuisances.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
CLARE SEWELL READ,
Secretary.

To S. Hargreaves, Esq., Clerk to the Rothwell Local Board, Rothwell, near Leeds.

Respecting the Hospital mentioned in the letter from the Board, the members thought it would be best to take time to consider the matter, and Mr. Smith gave notice, "That at the next meeting he would bring forward the question of hospital accommodation."

Mr. Stewart's replies to certain questions as to the power of the Board, in draining special districts, and other matters connected therewith, were then read, and will come up when the various drainage schemes are discussed.

Mr. Kendrew proposed, and Mr. Smith seconded the motion, that the Clerk write to Mr. Calverly, respecting the want of sufficient privy accommodation, on property in Oulton Lane, and also in the Cemetery and Horse yard; and also to Mr. Hoodhouse, stating that he must provide better accommodation for his property in Pottery Field, within a month from this time.

Mr. Smith said he had seen Mr. Bromet, wishing him to arrange to meet the Board, in reference to further particulars for the water supply, and that Mr. Bromet would write when he could meet the Board.

Proposed by Mr. Sanderson, seconded by Mr. Bamby, and was carried, that the Clerk write Mr. Crowder, desiring him to be more particular in the size of pavers he sends, and that the dimensions mentioned in the order be adhered to. It being also decided that all faulty stones be thrown out and deducted.

A ROTHWELL SUNDAY SCHOLAR OF FIFTY YEARS AGO.

The following very interesting letter was brought to the Rothwell Wesleyan School last Sunday by Mr. Taylor, and is now in our possession; we do not doubt its perusal will afford intense pleasure to those at present engaged in these schools, and will also rejoice the hearts of the many self-denying young men and women, who in the various Sunday Schools throughout the district are sowing the "good seed," trusting for the plentiful harvest "by and bye."

It is intended, that a reply shall be sent to Mr. Firth, informing him of the present aspect of things in Rothwell.

Middlebrook, Augusta County, United States of America, May 7th, 1874.

To any Teacher in the Wesleyan
Sunday School.

Sir—Through the kindness of my nephew, Mr. Joshua Taylor, 17, Elm-tree street, Hunslet road, Leeds, I received a copy of the Rothwell Times, and in it I found a notice of a service of sacred songs by the scholars of the Rothwell Wesleyan Sunday School. I here inform you that fifty years ago I was a scholar in that school. When I left I returned the teachers thanks for their eleven years care over me; and if any of them are living now I still thank them. I was eleven years a scholar and two years a teacher. But I must inform you that I have paid it all back in America with interest. So by your labours other children were benefitted thousands of miles from Rothwell; and if it be any credit to Rothwell Sunday School I must here say that I never taught either in Maryland or Virginia without always being elected Bible-class teacher. I was born in your town in 1808, and were my apprenticeship with one Thomas Billsmy brough, who died in 1828. Rev. Mr. Wardle was the parson in the old church, and a good preacher. Encourage your boys in school to study well. The Sunday School teacher will always be wanted both at home and abroad. Never forget the motto, "Good boys make good men." In testimony how I behaved in your school—I never got but one whip, given to me by Wm. Firth, a butcher, unjustly; and when I became a man I told him of it. What a God-send it was when Robert Raikes founded Sunday Schools to keep boys from bad habits,—what a blessing he ever commenced them. Teachers and scholars of your old Sunday-school will always have my warmest regards. I have been in this country forty-four years. I was Justice of the Peace in Maryland three years, and resigned to remove to Virginia; and up to the late war I was eleven years a postmaster in Virginia. I served three years in 93rd regiment as captain. And in all this wanderings, and ups and downs of life I never forgot the Rothwell Wesleyan Sunday School.

I have no doubt you are weary by this time; but possibly I am the first scholar that had been from Rothwell fifty years and wrote back. Please excuse the freedom I have taken, but, Sir. I claim the right to address a Wesleyan school. My great grandfather was forty-five school. My great grandfather was forty-five years a Wesleyan local preacher in Beeston neighbourhood. With warmest regards to every living soul in Rothwell, I stop this scribble.

Yours, very respectfully,
ROBERT MAWSON FIRTH.

We believe Mr. Firth used to live in a house up Hoopson's Yard in the Main Street, some few persons remember him well

CRICKET.

WOODLESFORD v. WHITWOOD.—This match was played on Saturday last, on the ground of the former, and after a very exciting game, resulted in victory for Woodlesford. This being the first win scored by the club this season, it was greeted with all the honors due to such an auspicious event. Whitwood went first to the wicket and succeeded in scoring the respectable number of 70, and judging from past experience, it seemed very much by that the score of the home eleven would reach such a figure; to make matters still worse, the first five wickets of Woodlesford went down for four runs, and the heart of the Whitwood men rejoiced; but a change came over the spirit of their dream, and when Hartley and Morton got together, things took a turn for the better, Morton drove the ball to all parts of the field; Hartley batted in his usual excellent style, the two succeeded in running up the score to 60, when the ball found its way into Hartley's wicket, and he retired, having contributed 21. Inman next joined Morton, and runs came rapidly until Morton shared the fate of Hartley, his score being 42(including 7 threes) for which he was loudly cheered. In one put his 11 together in good style, and was not out when time was called. The score was—Whitwood—T. Toulson c and b Hartley 11, Phillips b Hartley 13, Sanderson c Beat b Robinson 1, Lunn b Robinson 0, H. Toulson c Beat b Robinson 2, Vickers b Tiffany 8, Robinson b Tiffany 4, Webster not out 8, Fowler b Tiffany 0, Willans b Hartley 0, Moore b Tiffany 7, extras 6, total 70.—Woodlesford—Hartley c Tiffany c Webster, b Phillips 21, Wood c Sanderson b Phillips 0, Robinson run out 1, Tiffany b Phillips 22, Beat b Toulson 1, Pearson run out 1, Hartley b Phillips 42, Inman not out 9, Robinson 0, Morton b Phillips 42, Inman not out 11, Langfield c Lunn b Phillips 1, extras 5, total 87.

SETTLEMENT OF THE WEST YORKSHIRE COAL TRADE DISPUTE.

Mr Rupert Kettle sat yesterday at the Westminster Palace Hotel, London, as umpire in the West Yorkshire coal trade dispute.

After hearing the views and arguments advanced by the gentlemen whose names are given below, Mr. Kettle drew up the following agreement, which was duly signed, and an arrangement was thereby come to which all parties hoped might be imitated by other districts.

"It is agreed between the undersigned Robert Tennant, Esq. M.P., and J. S. Bailey, of H. Briggs, Son, and Co. Limited, acting on behalf of the coalowners of the West Yorkshire district, and A. Macdonald, Esq., M.P., and Mr. John Holmes, of Methley, acting on behalf of the miners of that district, with the concurrence of the undersigned, Rupert Kettle, arbitrator, that the wages of miners in the above district shall be reduced as from the after the 20th day of May last by the rate of 12½ per cent. upon the rate of wages paid on the 31st of March last, upon condition that there be no further or other reduction in the said rate of wages claimed before the pay-day which shall be next after the 10th day of August next; and upon further condition that if any claim for a further reduction be then made, and the coalowners and miners cannot mutually agree upon the same, then the question of such reduction and the amount thereof, if any, shall be determined by proceeding under terms precisely the same in all respects as the present reference.

Dated this 2nd day of June, 1874.

THE WAGES CRISIS IN SOUTH WALES.

Another mass meeting of the Cyfarthfa, Dowlais, and Plymouth section of the workmen was held on Tuesday, it was resolved no resume work at once, on the understanding that the masters would receive a deputation to hear the objections of the men to the third and fourth clauses. This will not take place for another week, and if then the masters will not rescind the obnoxious regulations, a strike will be inevitable.

EXTENSIVE COLLIERY STRIKE NEAR BRISTOL.

The Ashton Vale miners of the National Miner's Association resolved yesterday to demand their tools. Their demands were met last evening, and resolved to join them in their struggle, and thus, with the miners on the Gloucestershire side at Mangotsfield, Kingswood, and Coalpitheath, they make Bristol the centre of a general strike of miners numbering between four and freehousand, the contest being against twenty per cent. reduction on the Gloucestershire side, twenty at Ashton Vale, and fifteen at Bedminster collieries. The men are very firm, and the masters equally so.

CASTLEFORD LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH AND THE NORTH-EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.—At the West Riding Court-house, Pontefract, on Saturday, Mr. George Masterman, Inspector of Nuisances to the Castleford Local Board of Health, summoned the North-Eastern Railway Company for allowing an open ditch or water course (Simon's Dam, near Castleford), to be in a state dangerous to public health. —The Bench said what they had to do was to order the removal of the nuisance in one week, and for every day, if not done, after that period, there would be a fine of 10s.

At Northallerton, the discharged soldier, WILLIAM JACKSON, of Kirklington, was brought up under remand, charged with the wilful murder of his sister, ELIZABETH, on the 4th ult., near Ripon. After several witnesses had been examined, the further hearing was adjourned until Friday. The prisoner appears to be recovering from his self-inflicted injuries.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

A ROTHWELL MINER CHARGED WITH TRESPASS.—two cases of MASTER AND SERVANT.—TRESPASS.—Frederick Abershaw, a miner, living at Rothwell, appeared in answer to a summons, charging him with having, on the 23rd of May, unlawfully trespassed on land at Rothwell Haigh, preserved by Mr. J. B. Charlesworth, and others, colliery proprietors, with whom he is engaged. From the evidence given by Richard Crossley, game-keeper, and others, it appeared that defendant had been observed creeping along several hedge sides, and putting a ferret into rabbit burrows. After Crossley had watched defendant some time, he came out from his hiding place, when the defendant made off. He was however, followed and overtaken, and though he at first denied having anything in his pocket; he at length produced a ferret, and acknowledged that he had done wrong. The Bench imposed a fine and costs, amounting to 35s. 6d. which was paid.

ROTTEN CONDUCT AT METHLEY.—William Pattison, miner, of Methley, and Joseph Thompson, blacksmith's worker, living at the same place, were charged with having been drunk and guilty of riotous behaviour, in Station Lane, near the Methley Arms, on Saturday evening o'clock, on the night of the 23rd ultimo. About eleven o'clock, on the night of the 23rd ultimo. From the statement of P.C. Collins, it appeared that, the parties who are related, had been quarrelling and fighting, both inside and outside the house about some family matters. Thomas was fined 12s. 6d., and Pattison 11s.

UNMUZZLED DOGS AT LEEDS.—The defendant, Thomas, in the last case, was then summoned for having allowed a dog belonging to him to be at large unmuzzled. The information had been laid by the constable who had summoned the case for fighting. It transpired that the animal might have left the house without their knowledge, during the row, and the Bench did not therefore, impose any penalty.—George Tiffany, a collier, living at Rothwell, was charged with having allowed a dog belonging him, to be at large without its muzzle on the 22nd of May, and after the case had been stated by Superintendent Smith, the Bench ordered payment of the sum of 10s., which was readily forthcoming.

RUPTURE BETWEEN RELATIVES AT LOFTHOUSE.—Alfred Wood, a stoker, living near the Chimes at Lofthouse, was summoned for saving, on the 26th of May, threatened to kill Annie Wood, his brother's wife, who prayed that he might be bound over to keep the peace. From the statement made by the complainant, it appeared that some time since, the defendant had lodged at her house, and had never effected a settlement. An ill-feeling had ensued, and on several occasions he had grossly abused her, because she had taunted him with his niggardly conduct, and had threatened to do her previous bodily harm. His behaviour had been renewed on the day in question, when he vowed in the most positive and emphatic manner, employing various awful oaths, that he would take her life. The defendant, when called upon to speak, declared that the complainant was the aggressor, and called upon his brother, who was in court, to give evidence on his behalf. This witness informed the court that he not would have passed on his way without taking any notice of the complainant, had she not, in the first instance, likely resented his conduct. After hearing both sides of the case, the Bench bound the defendant over in his own recognizances to keep the peace towards his sister-in-law, for the term of six months, and ordered him to pay 11s. 6d. expenses, with the alternative of seven days' imprisonment. The defendant entered into the required bond, paid the expenses, and left the court.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT BEESTON PIT.

Scarcely had the news of George Rowley's misfortune become known, when, about Eight o'clock, on Saturday morning, a messenger was seen running down the road from Mr. Hean's house, and rumours of an accident at Beeston Pit, spread like wild fire. It was also, too true, and it soon became known that while "burrowing" a part of the roof, weighing fully a ton, fell on to a man, named John Henry Richardson, crushing him.

By the vigorous exertions of the men who were at the pit bank, and under direction of the poor man himself, shout, and under direction of the poor man himself, shout, and under direction of the poor man himself, and he was raised to the surface. Both Mr. William Hargreaves and his brother James, were on the pit hill. Before the Doctor could arrive, the injured man was removed to his home at Hunslet, where the Doctor also arrived a few minutes after, he died shortly after ten o'clock, the same morning.

Richardson, was twenty-eight years old, and had only been working at this pit. He is said to have made all arrangements for being married in a week or two, and bought a large quantity of furniture, for his future home and home.

An inquest was held on Tuesday, by Mr. Emsley, coroner, when a verdict was returned of "accidental death."

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT ROTHWELL.

About 11 o'clock on Friday night, while George Rowley, miner, was working at Bullock Land Pit, a large piece of stone "fell off" on to him, catching his shoulder first and then falling on his right leg. In great agony, he was taken to his home at Rothwell, great agony, he was taken to his home at Rothwell, where Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, and the doctor sent for. On examination, it was found his leg was broken in two places, between the knee and ankle. Yesterday, we are happy to say, he was going on favorably, and the doctor thinks that with care and good diet the young man (who is greatly respected) will fully recover.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually cures short all Attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
From Lord FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half-a-dozen bottles sent on once as above address.
"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, 1st December 1866.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, FREEMAN, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.
Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

For all Diseases affecting the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, and Bowels.
These Pills can be confidently recommended as the most simple and certain remedy for all diseases affecting the liver, and bowels. They do not distress the system, or weaken the frame, but by their wonderful purifying and tonic power, restore the liver, stimulate the kidneys gently excite the bowels to healthy action, and act upon the bowels to overcome habitual constipation, and act upon the bowels without griping or any other annoyance.

Diseases peculiar to Women.
There is no medicine equal to Holloway's Pills for correcting the irregularities to which females are subject. These Pills possess a power which immediately removes all obstructions, and safely and surely regulates every irregularity of the system. Any mother, nurse, or young female, guided by the Directions which accompany each box of Holloway's Pills, has at once available means for checking disease, purifying the blood, and expelling from the system all gross humours.

Weakness, Languor, and Debility.
These famous Pills will immediately remove all symptoms of debility, lassitude, and weakness, and will impart fresh vigour and energy to the whole system, give tone and energy to the digestive organs, and thus create pure blood, and impart to the constitution a most wonderful manner. strength the nervous system, and thus create pure blood, and impart to the constitution a most wonderful manner.

Biliousness, Loss of Appetite, and Lowness of Spirits.
The Pills effect a wonderful change in persons subject to bilious attacks, and those who have a delicate appetite, correct indigestion, remove excess of bile, and effectually cure jaundice, sick headache, giddiness, and nervous complaints, which are the direct consequence of a disordered state of the liver.

The Kidneys—Their Derangement and Cure.
If these Pills be used according to the printed directions, and the diet most suitable for the various constitutions be at the same time observed, a perfect cure is certain. They search out the kidneys and correct any derangement in their secretions, and will be found to act upon them. It is particularly recommended that the Ointment, in cases where the kidneys are affected, be well rubbed into the small of the back, and over the region of the kidneys. In Scrofula, Scrofulous Sores, and Skin Diseases, no remedy can be used in conjunction with these Pills which will assist their operation so much as the Ointment. In Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sore Throats, Piles, Fistulas, Gout, Rheumatism, and every kind of Skin Disease, its effects are perfectly marvellous, and relief is obtained when all other means have failed. Both the Pills and Ointment are sold by all Medicine Vendors throughout the civilized world, with full Directions for their use in almost every language spoken.

Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address be not 244, Strand, (near Temple Bar), London, they are spurious.

SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1874.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

On Monday last, a meeting of the Rothwell Local Board, was held in the Board Room. Present:—J. Charlesworth, Esq. (Chairman), Messrs. Hargreaves, Sanderson, Dickinson, Clapham, Kendrew, Bumby, Smith, Lunn, and the Clerk.

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the man who is paving Bell Hill, applied for a larger supply of paving stones; it turned out in the conversation which followed, that three weeks had been lent through the failure of the paviour to attend to his work. The supply, however, will be kept well up to the man's requirements.—It was resolved "That Mr. Rinder, the paviour, be paid £5 on account."

The Inspector having been asked for his report, stated that he had a list of old nuisances still unattended to, and suggested that as the Bye-laws had now been confirmed that a final notice should be given. It was decided on the proposition of Mr. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Lunn, "That notice be given to the various persons who had not heeded the former warnings that all nuisances must be removed within a week, and privy accommodation supplied (where needed) within a month from date of notice.

It was also resolved, that the Byewash be cleaned out. On being asked, Mr. Smith agreed to carry out the resolution, the Board to assist him with one of their men.

Mr. Sanderson complained of the bad condition of the drains at Boyd's Green, some of which had not been cleaned out for years; he thought no other mode of drainage necessary, if the pipes at the corners were kept clean. He also asked the Board whether Mr. Curtis might build a wooden mistal in his garden, and at a short distance from the house.

Mr. Bumby thought the Building Committee ought to go to see where it was to be built, and the Chairman reminded the Board that a plan must be laid before the Board of any building.—During the conversation, it was ascertained that the sanitary condition of the locality was very unsatisfactory, and that a cesspool lodged very near these houses. It was finally resolved, "That the Sanitary Committee visit Boyd's Green, to inspect the state of things there, and that the Medical Officer be requested to accompany them."

The amended agreement from Mr. Bromet, was then read, between Lord Stourton, Mr. W. Smith, and the Rothwell Local Board, respecting the digging down of pipes therein, and the laying down of pipes therein, to convey the water of Sterroid Well to a reservoir at Church Well.

The principal points of the agreement have already been noticed. One of the amendments asked for by the Board is inserted, viz. :—that for three years the contract shall be settled and not liable to be broken, but that after that time either party may give six months' notice of intention to dissolve the agreement.

The principal question discussed was how the money was to be raised for the expense of a water supply.

The Clerk stated that if the Board wished to lay a rate, they must have an Act of Parliament.

Mr. Dickinson thought the Board should appeal to the rate-payers by public meeting, and try to raise the money by voluntary subscription.

Mr. Kendrew said the agreement must not be signed till the means of raising the money is decided on.

Mr. Hargreaves said the Board should see no further steps whatever, till a proper survey and estimate of cost had been made.

Mr. Kendrew and Mr. Dickinson both agreed that the ways and means was the very first thing now, before incurring any further expense.

Mr. Clayton feared they could not pay for it by subscriptions.

The Chairman thought a survey was necessary to be taken first; in this opinion Mr. Lunn agreed, also adding that knowing the cost, they should be in a better position to lay the matter before the public. The supposed cost of the scheme was variously estimated by members, at £200 to £400.

As Chairman having mentioned that by the act, if the Local Board take the matter up themselves, it would have to be submitted to the Local Government Board in London.

Mr. Dickinson said the Local Board had nothing to do with it, if the money is raised by subscription.

It was eventually resolved, on the suggestion of the Clerk and proposed by Mr. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Kendrew, That the Clerk write to the Local Government Board, stating the position of affairs, and what have already been done for a temporary supply, and that when the Wakefield water be brought within reach, we might avail ourselves of that supply, and asking their opinion on the question."

Some conversation took place on a question by Mr. Lunn, whether a good supply might not be obtained by reserving the water now wasted at Rothwell Pit, to which Mr. Hargreaves replied that by putting down pumping machinery they might force the water into reservoirs at the upper and lower sides of the town, and thus supply the whole place with an abundance of first-class water. One great objection was the largely increased cost of such a scheme.

Returning to the original scheme, Mr. Dickinson thought the best plan would now be to canvas the people, and ascertain what amount might be raised by subscription.

Mr. Kendrew, Mr. Dickinson, and Mr. Lunn having volunteered to solicit promises, a resolution was passed according to Mr. Dickinson's suggestion.

The Bye-laws being now properly certified, were laid on the table, and it was resolved, "That the Bye-laws of the Board be printed, and that tenders be obtained for printing 500.

Mr. Lunn asked whether any rate-payer could obtain a copy of the Bye-laws, to which the clerk replied in the affirmative.

The Clerk was directed to write to Mr. Crutchley, to push on with the survey of Rothwell.

Mr. Smith brought forward his motion for hospital accommodation, as recommended by the Government Board.

After a short conversation it was resolved, "That the matter of hospital accommodation be deferred."

It was resolved, "That we allow the clerk £3 for his extra trouble in copying the Bye-laws three times over, on account of the alterations made by the Government Board."

Mr. Smith moved that the Board also continues the hire of Mr. Stephenson's horse, and that when any further help is required, that the Board apply to the farmers in their own district.

Mr. Dickinson and Mr. Kendrew both objected to Mr. Smith's proposition, on the ground that Stephenson had done well, and was always to be had, whereas the farmers were only at liberty sometimes.—The motion, not being seconded fell to the ground.

It was also resolved, "That a return be obtained from the Registrar of the births and deaths in the district, and that the Clerk ascertain the rate per head."

SCHOOL BOARD FOR LOFTHOUSE DISTRICT.

Our readers will recollect that two months ago, a meeting was held in the School-room, at Lofthouse, respecting increased school accommodation, in the district of Lofthouse, Carlton, and Thorpe; and that the meeting decided to canvas the townships, and ascertain to the best of their ability, what amount might be anticipated to be raised by voluntary subscriptions, and thus prevent the necessity of having a School Board.

On Thursday evening, a meeting of the ratepayers was held in the above place, Rev. R. Chadwick, in the chair, when the Committee appointed at the former meeting, brought up their report which was as follows :

That the committee have in accordance with the resolution passed at that meeting, made a house to house canvass of the townships, comprising the aforesaid united school district, and having written to, or seen most of the land owners, and having received promises to about the sum of £800, (including the £200 offered by Messrs. J. and J. Charlesworth, and £200 by J. Charlesworth, Esq.;) they now leave the matter in the hands of the ratepayers, for further consideration.

A desultory conversation followed, in which it was evident every means had been tried, and that then was not the remotest hope of the schools being raised by free gifts, (the estimated cost being from £1500 to 2000. Satisfaction was expressed with regard to the householders' promises, and with the noble offers of Messrs. Charlesworth, but the meeting had expected a more hearty response from the gentlemen and land owners in the vicinity.

It was then proposed by Mr. Keightley that having received the report of the committee appointed to solicit subscriptions, for the requisite school district of Lofthouse, Carlton, and Thorp; and having considered the same, it is the opinion of this meeting, that the report now presented does not justify this meeting in taking any further steps, towards providing the necessary accommodation required by the order in Council; and this meeting is further of opinion that it would be advisable to communicate with the clerk to the Wakefield Union, with a view to the formation of a School Board, at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. Scarth, of Thorp, then seconded the motion.

Mr. Hartley enquired whether Mr. Calverley had been applied, but it was shown that when gentlemen immediately connected with the locality had either declined altogether, or given very small promises, it was not to be expected that any sums which might have been overlooked would make a very great difference in their prospects.

Mr. Armitage thought it the fairest way to have a Board, so that the burden would fall equally on all parties concerned.

Mr. Hammill wished to know, supposing these schools could be raised by subscription, then there would be the maintenance of the schools, the salaries of the school-master and mistress; the school-pence would not cover these current expenses, how would the deficiency be met.

The Chairman said the money would have to be raised either by a rate or by private effort. At Lofthouse, several gentlemen gave a subscription every year.

On being put by the Chairman the resolution was declared unanimously carried.

A requisition was next brought forward, asking the Clerk to the Board of Guardians to summons a meeting of ratepayers for the formation of a School Board, and was signed by the gentlemen present.

On receiving the signatures of 50 ratepayers, the requisition will be sent to Wakefield, and the necessary formalities proceeded with.

Rothwell & District Police Intelligence

DOG CASE.—John Speight, coal miner, living at Methley, was summoned for allowing a ferocious dog to be at large unmuzzled. The dog had bitten a little girl, eight years of age, daughter of a miner named Wigglesworth. The Bench imposed a fine of 5s. and 10s. costs, and directed it to be destroyed.

TRESPASS IN PURSUIT OF GAME AT METHLEY.—John Russel and Frederick West, miners working at the Woodlesford new pit, were summoned for having trespassed on land in the occupation of Mr. Richard Emery, at Methley, in pursuit of game and conies. The defendants were fined 7s. 6d. and expenses each, amounting in all to £1 13s. 6d., with the alternative of ten days' imprisonment.

DISGRACEFUL CONDUCT TOWARDS A PARENT AT LOFTHOUSE.—John Mennell, the younger, of Lofthouse, was summoned (but did not appear) upon a charge of having behaved in a most outrageous manner towards his aged parents, whom he had threatened to kill. From the evidence it appeared the son had actually taken a knife, and vowed that he would kill them both. The father said his son had taken his property out of the house and sold it for drink. After hearing the old man's statement, the Bench ordered the issue of a warrant against his son, that he might be apprehended and brought before the court.

A VIOLENT AND DESTRUCTIVE COLLIER.—George Watson, stated to be a miner living at Lofthouse, was charged with having been drunk on the highway on the 23rd ult. The Bench imposed a fine and costs amounting to 29s, with the alternative of 21 days' imprisonment.

DISGRACEFUL ASSAULT UPON A LADY AT ROTHWELL.—Seven young men and lads, named Martin Sharphouse, John Jackson, Charles Harrison, William Doughty, Samuel Redyard, Arthur Ellis, and Charles Hurst, all of whom live at Rothwell Haigh, were charged with having on the evening of Sunday, the 7th inst., unlawfully and indecently assaulted Margaret Ward, domestic servant, living with Mrs. Allcock, grocer, Thwaitegate, in the Bye-lane. The complainant, who is a good-looking young woman, about 20 years of age, gave her evidence in a very clear and modest manner. After hearing the evidence, the Bench dismissed the case against Doughty, but the other defendants were fined 10s. 10d. each, which, with expenses, amounted to the sum of 20s. each, with the alternative of 21 days' imprisonment.

ROBBERY FROM THE METHLEY RECTORY.—A young man named Thomas Stephens, formerly groom in the service of the Hon. and Rev. P. Y. Savile, of Methley, was placed in the dock upon a charge of having stolen a gold and pearl bracelet, the property of the Hon. Mrs. Savile. From the prosecutor having pleaded guilty, the Bench sentenced him to four months' imprisonment.

AN APPEAL TO THE MINERS OF ROTHWELL.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

SIR,—Just as the sun was making his decent into the western horizon, I sat down to cogitate on passing events. I thought of what beauty the sun could portray just as he was leaving us for the day, and I thought that the most delicate slip of gold-leaf exposted as a target to the sun's rays is not stirred to the extent of a hair, yet a few of these rays, insinuating themselves into a mass of iron, will compel the closely-knit particles to separate, with as much ease as a giant would lift a straw. My mind next gave attention to the human family, and I thought what a great contrast there was of positions held in that family; from the prince to the peasant there is a great variety, there are dukes, marquises, and lords, in the aristocratic line; then there are the civil engineers, mining engineers, and inspectors of mines, and head and underviewers—that's the class I want to be at. When I take a retrospective view of the past, I recollect an old servant of Messrs. J. & J. Charlesworth's rising to the position of head-viewer, and he did not live long to occupy the position, poor fellow, he had racked up a good constitution before he attained that climax in his life's history, with energetic perseverance to ventilate and regulate the position of Rothwell Haigh, but the old miner at Rothwell Haigh can verify my statement.—In the midst of my ruminations, an old friend of mine came and woke me out of my reverie by saying, "Come, lad, is ta baan ta hev a waulk," I then said "I don't care if I do." "Where mun us goa, thinks ta," said he, to which I replied, "Why let's have a stroll into the Church-yard, and see how they are going on with the church alterations," and so we did, and after passing various opinions about the church alterations, we began to ponder on the inscriptions on the various tombstones. We found friends and relations of us both, and, when we reached the north-east corner, I found the subject of my letter—the resting-place of our late manager, Mr. Joseph Hargreaves, and was glad to see there was nothing to mark where he is laid—hence my appeal, and that appeal is for the workpeople of Rothwell Haigh to put an obelisk over his grave, to place him conspicuous amongst the dead.—I think, sir, that a fashionably-shaped obelisk, of freestone, with a brass plate on the front, bearing the required inscriptions for such a purpose, would answer the end in view.

I make it out to myself to be a debt of gratitude owing to his name from us men of Rothwell Haigh, for I contend that he has left "deep footprints on the sands of time" amongst us

I must now conclude, as I do not wish to trespass too much on your valuable space, and will end by saying

The beautiful humanities
Of nature in the humblest dress.
Speak to our sweetest sympathies
Far more than language can express.

I am, yours &c.,
Rothwell, JOHN WESTMORELAND.

CRICKET.

WOODLESFORD v. CLOTHIER.—This match was played on Saturday last, on the Altofts ground, and as is always the case, where these clubs meet to play; a very pleasant game was witnessed. Some good cricket was displayed on both sides, but the great feature of the match, was the innings of Morley, who scored 40 in splendid style and without a chance. Robinson and Hartley, bowled well for Woodlesford, as the scores will show. The Castle, the Altofts bowler, was not quite up to his usual form, or probably the score of the Woodlesford party would not have been so great. A return match will be played on the Woodlesford ground, on Saturday, July 4th. The following was the innings and score :—Altofts, Robinson, 8; Bentley, c Robinson, b Hartley, 5; Marshall, b Hartley, 2; J. Bednall, c & b Robinson, 4; T. Bednall, c Hartley, 0; Castle, c Hartley, b Robinson, 0; Maequire, b Robinson, 6; Smith, not out, 5; Harrison, run out, 0; Jarvis, b Robinson, 2; Wood, b Robinson, 0; Extras, 8; Total, 40.—WOODLESFORD.—Trueman, b J. Bednall, 4; Inman, c Castle, 4; Morley, b Castle, 40; Tiffard, c J. Bednall, b Castle, 10; E. Hartley, b Castle, 0; F. Hartley, b J. Bednall, 9; Robinson, c Maequire, b Castle, 0; Hammond, c Castle, b J. Bednall, 2; Hartley, b Castle 0; Britton, b J. Bednall, 9; Lee, not out 9; Extra, 8; Total,—130.

ROTHWELL I. O. G. T. CRICKET CLUB.—On Wednesday afternoon, a friendly game was played by the above club with the Castleford "Abrahams Rovale," the club, on the ground of the former, and resulting in a close victory for the home club. The following was the score:—ROTHWELL.—Geo. Sefton, b Hampson, 0; J. O. Verity, b Bateson, 0; Henry Sagar, b Bateson, 4; E. Hampson, b Hampson 21; E. Taylor, b Bateson, 4; J. Scott, b Hampson 7; J. Sefton, c Whitehead, b Hampson, 4; J. Ward, b Hampson, 0; T. Taylor, b Stanton, 3; J. Chapman, b Hampson, not out, 4; H. Taylor, not out, 0; Extras, 12.—Total, 61.—CASTLEFORD.—H. Fawcett, b Verity, 3; J. H. Calverley, c & b Verity, 0; Bateson, c Verity, b Henry Sefton, 0; G. Hampson, b Sage, 8; Bateson, c Sefton, b Chapman, 6; Carver, b Chapman, 2; Stanton, b Verity, 0; Whitehead, c & b Verity, 0; Ellis, c Frost, b Chapman, 3; Walker, run out, b Sage, 0; Whaley, not out, 8; extras, 17.—Total, 49. After the game the players and others, members of the Order, took tea together in the Lodge-room. During the evening several friendly recitations and speeches were given by various persons, and the party separated after a very agreeable gathering. The return match will be played on or three weeks at Castleford.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on the wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, decay, decay, gives to the Teeth a peculiar pearly whiteness, and delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. For Fragrant Florilline, a liquid composed by part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s 6d for the liquid, and 1s per jar for the "Florilline "Powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford-street, London.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—With the changing season it is prudent for all to rectify any ailments starting them; but it is incumbent on the aged, suffering under ulcerations and similar sources of debility, to have them removed, as, if neglected, worse consequences will follow. This Ointment is their remedy; on its powers all may confidently rely: it not merely eradicates the sores, but extirpates the mischief at its root, extracts the corroding poison, and stimulates nature to fill up the ulcer with those sound, healthy granulations, which will abide through life. Under this treatment bad legs soon become sound, scorbutic skins cast off their scales, and scrofulous sores cease to annoy. Such hope for the diseased was unknown in former days.

J. CLAPHAM,

BOTANICAL CHEMIST, AND LICENSED DISTILLER OF HERBS, HAS REMOVED

To the new and extensive premises CLAPHAM'S BUILDINGS, corner of Wade Land & Kensall St., LEEDS, where he hopes by careful attention to business to merit a continuance of the support so liberally bestowed on him hitherto, and for which he gratefully returns his sincere thanks.

J. C. has also every great pleasure in returning his sincere thanks for the unprecedented patronage he has received from all classes of society, during the lengthened period he has been in practice as a Medical Botanist, & expected gratitude is due to those Friends and Fellow Townsmen who have so generously come forward with their influence and recommendations in the enclosed Testimonials in favour of his

Which have the peculiar property, if taken after meals, to cause the food to assimilate with the system, and thereby strengthen the whole body; and if taken between meals, strengthen the nerves and give elasticity to the mind, and while they cleanse the Stomach, they restore the tone without causing Debility. They will cure Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Fermentation, or Wind in the Stomach, Ulcers, and Soreness, Biliousness, Heartburn, Dizziness, Dimness of Sight, Sick Headache, Sorrow of the Stomach, and may be taken by the weakest Invalids with the greatest safety. Sold in boxes at 7½d., 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each.

He likewise offers the following most important as a further test of his ability to produce Botanical Remedies, which will be invaluable to the people;

Clapham's Liver Pills.

This is an extraordinary remedy for Liver Complaints, Costiveness, Biliousness, Pain in the Side or Shoulder, and likewise will soon restore the skin to its natural hue or colour; and not like ordinary purgatives leaving the Bowels confined afterwards, but acts in harmony with the laws of nature. Sold by Agents, at 7½d., 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each.

Clapham's Lung Balsam.

This concentrated Medicine has cured Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Air Tubes, when all other remedies have failed. Sold at 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each.

Clapham's Strengthening Medicine.

This is good in Dyspepsia, Wind in the Stomach, Ulceration of the Stomach and Bowels, Heart Disease, Weak Nerves, Spinal Complaints or Diseases of the Kidneys or Bladder. This remedy will strengthen the whole internal organs, and will convince the most sceptical of its wonderful curative power. Sold in bottles, 2s. 3d. and 4s. 6d. each.

Clapham's Essence of Composition.

A simple and pleasant but effective stimulant, for superior to wine, brandy, or any other spirits. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d. & 2s. 3d. each

Clapham's Diarrhœa Mixture.

A pleasant and excellent remedy for Relaxation of the Bowels, Cramp, or Spasms of either the Stomach or Bowels, can be given with perfect safety to either children or adults. Sold in bottles, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 3d. each.

The Compound Flour of Slippery Elm Food.

Is much used for Suppers, &c., and is highly recommended both as a pleasant and light nutritious food, and will frequently remain on the stomach when all other Food is rejected—for rearing infants there is nothing equal to it. Sold at 2d. per ounce, 1s. 3lb., 2s. 1s. 1d. per lb., and 2s. per lb.

Special Notice.

Owing to the daily increasing sale of Clapham's Botanical Remedies, and the large number of applications from persons all over the country to sell the Special Remedies of his own Manufacture, he has taken out a Patent for those remedies which come under the Act of Parliament, and which will protect both himself and the public from fraudulent imitations.

All his Special Remedies will therefore have a Government Stamped Label on each Bottle or Box.

Testimonials Presented to Mr. Clapham, July, 1873.

We, the undersigned, having, for various lengthened periods, used the Stomach Pills prepared by MR. J. CLAPHAM, of Wade Land, Leeds, have much satisfaction in bearing testimony to their intrinsic excellence. Without having any desire to flatter Mr. Clapham, we each and all of us, having experienced the pleasing beneficial effects of this curative remedy, do advise Mr. Clapham to extend the sale of them to other places. They will be found invaluable in the following complaints, and, unlike ordinary Stomachics, they do not lose their beneficial effects by continual use. They may be taken by the weakest invalids for Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Fermentation or Wind on the Stomach, Ulcerated Stomachs, Vomiting Biliousness, Head-ache, Dizziness, Dimness of Sight, Sourness of the Stomach, &c., &c.

The Proprietor wishes to call special attention to the fact, that although he has been in full practice in Leeds, as a Medical Botanist, Chemist, and Manufacturer of Concentrated Botanical Remedies, for upwards of twelve years, there is not one instance in which he has knowingly engendered any ill feeling from any of the Medical Profession, or in any way interfered with the existing mode of Physic, otherwise than by introducing simple remedies, which will be as great a boon to the Profession as to the People.

GALA AT WOODLESFORD.

On Thursday, the Oulton Brass Band held a grand gala in the Farm Field, Woodlesford (kindly lent by Mr. Dissons), when dancing was kept up with much spirit during the evening, although the weather was not very favourable. Amongst the English sports and pastimes, the races, Aunt Sally, and other amusements were freely indulged in.

ROMANCE IN A RAILWAY CARRIAGE.

Concluded from May 30th.

"Assuredly," was the reply; "why not?"

You see, then, that such things do take place, madam."

"Well, perhaps so," she admitted; "but they are exceptional, sir."

"I might prove one of the exceptions," said he.

"So you might sir," returned the lady, with a faintly ironical smile.

"You see then, that there is ground for nervousness on the part of an old man," said the brewer.

"I should think you were locked in this carriage," said the lady.

"Exactly," he replied

"Oh I comprehend," she continued. "Oh my part I am not nervous at all." "You are not? " he cried.

"No. Why should I be so, when I have you to protect me? "She smiled again ironically, and the old gentleman bowed.

The conversation then turned on different subjects: Forestry, December and May, pursuit of a sand-eel together, and by-and-by, the train stopped at Tunbridge.

Here a tall, military-looking, and rather handsome man was seeking to find a place in the train. He must proceed, he said, at once, on business of great importance, for he was already late, having come that far on his way to Dover by aprevious train, which had unfortunately gone on without him whilst he had been taking a hasty meal at the refreshment bar.

"I must and will proceed," he said, calmly, but firmly, to the guard who in vain protested that the train was quite full.

"The company are bound to take me on!" he cried.

"There is no room, sir," said the guard.

"Then I will make room," he ejaculated, looking into the carriage in which sat the brewer and his companion, "here is room," he added; and he frowned at the guard.

"You cannot go in there, sir!" said the latter, in great confusion.

"Not go in! Well we will see," said he; and he coolly took a key from his pocket, and unlocked the door of the carriage, stepping briskly in.

The guard stared in amazement.

"He has got a key!" he ejaculated to himself. "Oh he must be a director!—Beg pardon, sir!"

But there was no time for explanation, for the train never frowned, and locked cross at this fresh intruder on the company. Not so the lady, who at the sight of the new-comer had at first turned pale. She merely gave a passing glanced at him, and then, addressing—Henry Jones, Stranger, he settled himself down in the corner by her, and taking from his pocket a late number of the Standard, became apparently absorbed in its contents.

Here he mentioned that the brewer 'who just then had entered opposite to his late fair companion, had latterly, for the purpose of escaping in his usual afternoon nap, changed his seat to the further corner of the carriage. His first been, being vacant, was appropriated by the former.

In rushed the train, through corn fields and grounds, at a steady, even pace, which presently increased its rapidity from being felt. Now some mansion or park appeared at a half-open gate, ing after the smoking, puffing engine as it tore ; now some covey of frightened partridges from the midst of the embankment, or a startled galloped away from the vicinity of the (in its irresistless monster that appeared to be approaching him and still on steadily on, without ation or curve, sped the Dover Express.

e military man, or at least he who appeared ssume the character, presently broke his opposite abour over the top of his newspaper, while erently engaged in reading. She unconscious the scrutiny, was absorbed in the fortunes of scoundrel-hero of her novel; and the old brewer ored audibly in the further corner.

The face of the military-looking man expressed perplexity and doubt. He was a personage of from fifty to sixty years of age, with an upright carriage, crisp, short, curling black hair, intermixed with grey, and peculiarly intelligent and piercing black eyes. For some miles he appeared to be debating with himself, and occasionally, with an air of indecision, put his hand into his coat-tail pocket.

"The opportunity is good," he muttered; "and yet——"

At last, when the train was within a few miles of Ashford, he appeared to have made up his mind.

"I will risk it," he said to himself; "yes I will risk it."

Click, click!

The military man had suddenly withdrawn his hand from his pocket in which it had so long been fumbling, and the old brewer woke up with a terrified start. The fair lady of this story, with a pale but resolute look on her face, was sitting handcuffed!

"What,—what is this?" gasped the brewer, only half awake, and turning in bewildered amazement to the military stranger. "Who are you sir?"

"Inspector T——, of the detective force," was the reply

"And the lady," said the old gentleman; "what has she done?"

"Are you sure she is a lady?" inquired the inspector, with a quite smile.

"Oh, she could doubt that!" said the brewer.

"I doubted it, sir," was the quick reply; "and well for you I did, for have decidedly saved your life."

"Saved my life!" cried the brewer, in extreme astonishment.

"Yes," said the detective.

"But how?" inquired the brewer.

"Look at that lady, as you call her," said the officer. "Did you ever see any one like her?"

"I" stammered the old gentleman. "Oh never," Or at any one like her?" continued the inspector.

"Never," cried the other.

"You have not read these handbills all down the line, then;" "" said Inspector T.—"What handbills?" inquired the brewer.

"Why concerning the recent murders in railway carriages."

"Yes I have read them," he replied.

"Well?" said the officer.

"I cannot see how that concerns this lady."

Even the prisoner smiled at such obtuseness

"Look, sir," said the inspector, removing the strangers bonnet, and with it a mass of dark braided hair, beneath which showed a curling golden head.

"Does a light break in upon you now?"

"Oh, oh!" murmured the brewer, growing deadly pale. "So that this lady is, then, it appears——"

"Charles Wintringham, alias Carlo Bertolesi, said the detective.

"Good Heavens!" exclaimed the old gentleman.

"You see, then, the danger you have escaped," continued the officer.

"You were positively asleep."

"Ah, ah!" said the brewer, shuddering. "How can I ever repay you?"

"Oh, I have only done my duty," returned the inspector. "This young rascal (who could ever suppose such face could cover the heart of a demon) was doubtless about to escape to the Continent."

A slight contraction of the prisoner's face told the detective that he had surmised correctly.

"Which," continued the inspector," but for an accident, he would have done."

The criminal elevated his eye-brows; the old man looked inquiringly at the detective.

"Yes," continued the latter," I say, but for an accident; for, in fact, I suspected his design, and had taken the first train to Dover. By a misapprehension of the time, on my part, I was left behind at Tunbridge while taking some refreshment that it is a mere chance I encountered my prisoner on the train."

The young man ground his teeth in desperation.

"But—but how did you know him?" asked the brewer.

"Ah! you think it was impossible to detect him in his disguise," said the officer. "Well, I will tell you, he makes as pretty a girl as I ever saw in my life. I will tell how I detected him. In the first place I was struck by his sweet low voice, too deep for a woman in my opinion."

Ah, said the brewer.

"Then I observed other little things, continued the other; I have had long experience in such matters, you know, sir. And at last—

"Yes, yes, at last, interrupted the brewer.

Well, well, again interrupted the old gentleman.

The inspector pointed significantly to the prisoner's dress.

Ah, said the old gentleman, again turning pale, whole.

"Exactly so. You have hit it, said the inspector.

But here we are. The train had stopped Ashford. Here the inspector removed his prisoner into a return train to London.

The worthy old brewer, after sliding a five pound note into the detective's hand, he changed carriage to proceed to Minster, feeling himself ... to be a wiser man.

"Ah!" he muttered, ensconcing himself ... here, which he took care this time should be ... empty—"what a tale I shall have to tell ... to-night!

I hope that he reached home safely.

A STRANGE CUSTOM.

THE "GAD WHIP MANORIAL SERVICE.

We have been favoured by Mr. William Andrews, of Hull, a well-known antiquarian, with a small pamphlet, containing a concise account of a curious ceremony now happily done away with, though only at a comparatively recent date; to give an idea we cant do better than quote from it.

"The property held by this old manorial custom is said to have comprised the Manor of Broughton and 2,000 acres of land, which lies in the parish of Broughton, near Brigg, Lincolnshire. This was sold in 1845, and to describe the ceremony I cannot do better than quote the particulars or the sale, circulated at the time,—it was stated:

"This estate is held subject to the performance on Palm Sunday in every year, of the ceremony of cracking a whip in Caister church, in the said county of Lincoln, which has been regularly and duly performed on Palm Sunday, from time immemorial, in the following manner:

"The whip is taken every Palm Sunday, by a man from Broughton to the parish of Caistor, who, while the minister is reading the first lesson, cracks it three distinct times in the church porch, then folds it neatly up, and retires to a seat. At the commencement of the second lesson he approaches the minister, and kneeling reaches him with the whip in his hand, and a purse at the end of it, held perpendicularly over his head, waves it thrice, and continues it in a steadfast position throughout the whole of the chapter. The ceremony is then concluded.

"The whip has a leathern purse tied at the end of it, which ought to contain thirty pieces of silver, said to represent, according to scripture, 'the price of blood.' Four pieces of wrought tree, of different lengths, are affixed to the stock, denoting the different gospels of the holy evangelists. The three distinct cracks are typical of St. Peter's denial of his Lord and Master three times, and the waving it over the minister's head, as an intended homage to the blessed Trinity."

"As to the term gad it is the correct old spelling of the word which we now spell goad, in its two meanings (1) a prick (2) the pole to which the prick is fastened. Thus, a goad-fly is a gad-fly or stinging fly; and a gad also came to mean a wand, a measuring rod, a fishing-rod, &c., and a gad-steel meant a long whip for goading oxen. It is from the Anglo-Saxon gad, a goad, the point of a weapon, a prick."

Whatever might be the original intention of its institution, whether it was the remnant of an ancient mystery, enacted when Roman Catholicism was in the ascendancy or rude symbols of a cruel and imperfect notion of spiritual things, or the expression of a self-inflicted penance, for a fearful crime all seemed involved in great obscurity, the form of its observance in this age, however, became thoroughly irksome, and was considered indecent with our ideas of the sacredness of religious worship, and its longestablished for and ultimate disuse proves the futility if not foolishness of any human being, (however good the motive, whether he be lord of great territories, or a private individual), of wishing to dictate to or legislate for future generations, any eccentric whim or practice, in order to assert his right, or to keep up certain obligations; for oftentimes the very absurdity & uncouthness of the conditions defeat the purpose of the testator; for the world must improve in its ideas, and cannot be bound to carry out or keep up any custom which certainly must become repugnant to all modern notions of decency and order.

Perhaps the willing of land or property indicates as much as anything the wisdom or foolishness of the testator; to try to give a fidelity to fashions or notions for all time in a mutable world, is simply ridiculous, and would be equally as absurd as that the present shall imitate, assume or revive the manners of the past, the world progresses, and must grow out of its old notions and ideas, as a child grows out of its clothes, because the circumstances become unfitted for it, and on account of superior advantages of education and enlightenment generally.

A JOURNEY IN PULMAN'S CAR TRAIN.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

SIR,—For nervous affection in Railway Carriages, please to highly reccommend "Pullman's Cars." They having to stop at Woodlesford station this morning for a select parlour full, myself and my good lady, although only 3rd class, were graciously allowed to join the cars, and oh, what a contrast to the "dethering" Lancashire and Yorkshire, we so oftentravel in, a slight rocking, but no jolting even at Normanton points. Hurrah, shouted the ... as we passed, swinging along at fifty miles per hour, with a sensation something between a small steam boat and a street car with no ... ones on the metals. After our first surprise, we could not but greatly admire the neatly finished and well contrived compartment, four doors on each side well lighted, and not baby fingers traps, as they slide into the casing and cannot be slammed. Seats for two passengers on each side of the car, and gangway up the middle, seating 32 persons, with spacious luggage compartments at each end and on the four bogie wheels. Leather cushioned seats with leaning backs, roof of cork something like street cars, but higher; very quickly were we taken to Sheffield. Admiring groups with black faces gazing at us for miles. There we had a short look at the drawing room, parlour, and sleeping cars, which have been so well described by the newspapers, and are magnificently appointed, fifteen minutes at Derby in a crowd of people gazing into every corner of the cars. At Leicester the same, or rather more of it, at which place I gave one of the officials an idea—which may be very valuable to the Company—if they will only take it from a non-director I said, show the cars for a few months as the leading stations, and charge for seeing them, which would pay better than running them for a while, and would effectually advertise and introduce them to the public. Now, Mr. Editor put forward this idea by the powerful influence of the press, and if we do not each get a Pulman's season ticket presented us, we shall certainly deserve one. My good lady and your correspondent have arrived safe in town in exactly five hours, and punctual to the minute. No sensation of one set of wheels in danger of jumping off the metals, because your car feels so firm and solid, rolling instead of jumping wheels under your feet; you can go out on the terrace in front of the car, or at the back, and our car being the last in the train, there was a fine view of the retreating country, and in the tunnel something quite sensational, like clouds of fiery vapour following the track. Of course we must have cars timed to stop at Woodlesford, or have the main line deviated to Rothwell, so as to supply the demands of our travelling public, and also to extend the radius of circulation for the Rothwell Times.

Yours very respectfully,

A TRAVELLER.

The—GLENFIELD STARCH, has been most imitated then all the other starches in the world. No higher compliment could be paid to it, as all those imitations will testify, and it is the finest starch in use Tradesmen have doubtless less profit on its sale, but still it is kept by all respectable grocers and oilmen, who prefer to supply their customers with the best articles, to their own pecuniary profit. The public could insist upon having the Glenfield Starch.

PRIZE MEDALS, LONDON, DUBLIN, MOSCOW AND VIENNA.—We observe that Messrs. Bryant and May have now obtained four prize medals for their Patent Safety Matches, which are not Poisonous, contain no Phosphorus, are entirely free from smell, are not in any way injurious to those engaged in their manufacture, are not liable to spontaneous combustion, and Light only on the Box. GEORGE LAWS,

THE WORKING MAN'S FRIEND AND LITTLE BOYS' TAILOR,

AT THE GUIDING STAR, 40, KIRKGATE, LEEDS.

A shy young man the other day,
A visit to darling lady-love would pay;
But as his winter coat was bare,
He found AWS did repair:
And there he saw—he does declare—
His splendid Summer Suit,
At Suits, Coats, Shirts, & Boots at price so low,
Astonished he an order gave,
Which made him look both smart and brave.

The maiden saw but scarcely knew
Her Thomas in a suit so new—so fine,
Yet fitted with such ease,
That Love, combined to Fancy's will,
His suit he did not plead in vain,
For LAWS'S Suit her heart did gain:
Then to each friend he'd give advice,
Try LAWS' Goods for fit and price

His Suits are good and cheap, to inspect them all will take you half a day.
Search every township in the country round,
You'll find them equal to LAWS for a single Pound,
Doom to the Little Boys' only a single Crown.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.
CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Metalgia, &c.
From Lord Francis Conyngham, Mount Charles, Donegal, 16th December 1864.
"Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half-a-dozen bottles sent at once to the above address."
"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Chlorodyne has been found a safe, useful, and valuable remedy, of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, 1st December 1864.
and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, 1st December 1864.
and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, 1st December 1864.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was disbelieved by the Court, and a perjured fabrication. The Defendant was committed to Newgate for one year, and fined £100. Sold in Bottles at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d and 11s each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

J. CLAPHAM,
BOTANICAL CHEMIST, AND LICENSED DISTILLER OF HERBS HAS REMOVED
To the new and extensive premises CLAPHAM'S BUILDINGS, corner of Wade Lane & Kensall St., LEEDS, where he hopes by careful attention to business to merit a continuance of the support so liberally bestowed on him hitherto, and for which he gratefully returns his sincere thanks.
J. C. has always great pleasure in returning his sincere thanks for the unprecedented patronage he has received from all classes of Society, during the lengthened period he has been in practice as a Medical Botanist, & especial gratitude is due to those Friends and Fellow Townsmen who have so generously come forward with their influence and recommendations in the cricked Testimonials in favour of his

Pure Botanical Stomach Pills.
Which have the peculiar property, if taken after a meal, to cause the food to assimilate with the system, and thereby strengthen the whole body; and it takes but a few days to convince purchasers of their superiority over the nauseous drugs which they restore the tone without causing Debility. They are well worthy the attention of Invalids, and may be taken by the most delicate constitution without fear. Headache, Dizziness, Dizziness of Sight, Sick Headache, Scurvies of the Stomach, Bowels, and Blood, Indigestion, Costiveness, Piles, Jaundice, Loss of Appetite, Flatulency, Pain in the Side or Shoulder, and likewise will soon restore the skin to its natural hue or colour; and we but other ordinary pills are temporarily relieving the Bowels confined afterwards, but acts in fact, after to the purpose of nature. Sold in boxes, at 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. each.

Clapham's Liver Pills.
This is an extraordinary remedy for Liver Complaints, Constipation, Biliousness, Pain in the Side or Shoulder, and likewise will soon restore the skin to its natural hue or colour; and we but other ordinary pills are temporarily relieving the Bowels confined afterwards, but acts in fact, after to the purpose of nature. Sold in boxes, at 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. each.

Clapham's Lung Balsam.
This concentrated Medicine has cured Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Air Tubes, when all other means have failed. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each.

Clapham's Strengthening Medicine.
This is good in Dyspepsia, Wind in the Stomach, Diseases of the Stomach and Bowels, Heart Disease, Weak Nerves, Spinal Complaints or Diseases of the Kidneys or Bladder. This remedy will strengthen the whole system, and will convince the most sceptical of the wonderful curative power. Sold in bottles, 2s. 3d. and 4s. 6d. each.

Clapham's Essence of Composition.
A simple and pleasant but efficacious Aperient, for superior use, brandy, or any other spirits. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d. & 2s. 3d. each.

Clapham's Diarrhœa Mixture.
For the cure of Diarrhœa, Cholera, Vomiting, Soreness of the Stomach or Bowels, can be given with safety to Infants. Sold in bottles, at 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 3d. each.

Clapham's Household Ointment.
Sold in boxes, at 7½d., and 1s. 1½d. each. All the concentrated Essences of Herbal Preparations (both Foreign and English) kept in stock.

The Compound Flour of Slippery Elm Food.
Is much used for Suppers, &c., and is strongly recommended for both as a pleasant and highly nutritious food. Sold at 2s per ounce, 1s. 1½., 1s. 1d. per lb., and 2s. per pound

Special Notice.
Owing to the daily increasing sale of Clapham's Botanical Remedies, and the large number of applications from persons all over the country to sell the Special Remedies of his own and Herbal Preparations, Mr. Clapham has taken out a Patent for those remedies which come under the Act of Parliament, and which will protect both himself & purchasers from spurious imitations.
All his Special Remedies will therefore have a Government Stamped Label on each Bottle or Box.

Testimonials Presented to Mr. Clapham, July, 1873.
We, the undersigned, having, for various lengthened periods, used the Stomach Pills prepared by MR. J. CLAPHAM, of Wade Lane, Leeds, have much satisfaction in bearing our testimony to their intrinsic excellence which we have found to be of great benefit in correcting our habitual costiveness, and in purifying the blood. Without having any desire to flatter Mr. Clapham, we could, and will of us, having experienced the pleasing and beneficial effects of this curative remedy, do advise Mr. Clapham to extend the sale of them to other places. They will be found invaluable to the following complaints, and, unlike or many Stomachics, they do not lose their beneficial effect by continual use; they make be taken by the weakest invalid for Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Fermentation or Wind on the Stomach, Diarrhœa, Vomiting Biliousness, Head-ache, Dizziness, Dimness of Sight, Soreness of the Stomach, &c., &c.

The Proprietor wishes to call special attention to the fact, that although he has been in full practice in Leeds, as a Medical Botanist, and Manufacturer of Concentrated Botanical Remedies, for upwards of twelve years, there is not one instance in which he has knowingly engendered a single ill feeling from any of the Medical Profession, or in any way interfered with their established practice of Physic, otherwise than by introducing simple safe, and more certain remedies, which will be as great a boon to the Profession as to the People.

A shy young man the other day,
A visit to Darling lady-love would pay;
But as his winter suit was bare,
He to friend LAWS did repair;
And there he saw—he does declare—
His splendid Summer Show
Of Suits, Coats, Shirts, & Boots at price so low,
Astonished he an order gave,
Which made him look both smart and brave.
The maiden saw but scarcely knew
Her Thomas in a suit so new—so fine,
Yet fitted with such skill,
That Love, combined to Fancy's will,
His suit he did not plead in vain,
For LAWS' Suit her heart did gain;
Then to enrich friend he'd give advice,
Try LAWS' Goods for fit and price

His Suits are good and cheap, to inspect them all will take you half-a-day.

THE WILD BIRDS' ACT.

SPEAKING of the results of "The Wild Birds' Bill," our contemporary, "The York Herald" says "With the very best intentions, no doubt, Earl DERBY has in doing his worst to the Game Law. His Wild Birds Bill is that, or it is nothing. It is designed, in whose interest we know not, to protect the wild birds of the land in the breeding season, and it virtually makes them game, because the occupier of land upon which they may be nesting will not take any steps which it is made criminal for any boys to do either. This Act to prevent birds nesting and ornithological pursuits is one of the latest emanations of legislative sentimentalism. Sea-birds have special uses, and we freely supported the Act for their protection. Gulls, for instance, during the breeding season, upon exposed rocks and headlands, and the helmsman can hear their cries through the mist when neither he nor the flocks of birds that are no daring egg collector has ever yet found, and he omits those which are more common. He makes of the sale and female bird of species that are distinct species, and he presents us with other oddities in classification. His motives are good. He's thinking of the sea-bird, whose nest is often flit to and fro, and the farmer would fain give a hundred grains of corn for as many birds to devour as many thousands of insects as flies; but he has not got a new game law all the same, and we are quite sure the measure will not survive the flash of com mon sense that will be thrown upon it when it enters the House of Commons."

SHOCKING FATAL ACCIDENT TO A COLLIERY ENGINEMAN AT LOFTHOUSE.—An inquest was held on the 16th inst., before Mr. Holmes, on Saturday last, on view of the body of David Giggall, colliery engineman, who lived at Sir Geo. Meor, Carlton.—The evidence given by Thomas Giggall, the son of the deceased, explained the manner in which he had met with his death. I'm a kid, my father was 40 years of age. Soon after five o'clock yesterday afternoon, deceased was sitting on a cart, on the highway, and the horse was walking at the time, but there were no reins. When the cart went over the tramway, the shelving rattled, and the horse taking fright, began to trot smartly. Deceased had his feet on the near shaft, and put his hand on to the hames to steady it. The horse made a bolt to the causeway. The horse began to pull to the side, and then the deceased changed hands on the horse's back, and side-reined to the other side. The deceased jumped off, and went against the wall side; when the off wheel immediately passed against him, and he was hurled round, and fell on the road. The shafts of the cart were broken off, and the horse ran away. The body of the cart was close to my father's body, and the fore part was on him. His body was dreadfully mangled, and he expired in less than ten minutes. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidentally killed."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Weak Stomachs.—The wisest cannot enumerate one-tithe of the distressing symptoms arising from enfeebled digestion, all of which may be readily dispelled by these admirable Pills. They remove all unpleasant tastes from the mouth, together with flatulency and constipation. Rothwell & District Police Intelligence.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE OF AN INEBRIATED MINER AT METHLEY.—Christopher Marginson, a collier living at Methley, was summoned by the police, at the instance of the Midland Railway Company, for having been drunk and incapable upon their line on the night of the 31st instant. From the evidence of P.-C. Robert Marsden, and Henry Evans, a signalman, it appeared that, at a late hour on the night in question, a train happened by the purest accident, to leave his station and walk a short distance down the line; and he had not gone far when, to his astonishment, he observed a man lying right across both metals—his neck resting on one, his feet upon the other. He was fast asleep, and quite incapable; so that, but for being accidentally met with, and removed from his perilous position, he would have been most certainly killed by a fast train then shortly due. The Chairman was informed by Inspector Hinchliffe that the defendant had once previously been in the court, that was in September, 1873, and the Bench therefore imposed a fine and costs amounting to 20s., with the alternative of fourteen days' imprisonment. The money was paid.

"ANY PORT IN A STORM."—Thus runs an old saying, and it appears that Isaac Idle, a Methley miner, who has worked his brain into a state of "storm" by drinking too freely of "fire water" on the evening of the 15th instant, considered it better to run into any port than to lose himself in a ditch, or prejudice his head and side bridge. However, whatever his thoughts were, Idle, when overpowered with drink, obtained access to one of the rooms at the Methley workmen's club-house, and, in a corner, and set everybody who endeavoured to remove him at defiance. Facts to this effect having been stated by the police and railway officials, the Bench imposed a penalty amounting to 20s., with the alternative of fourteen days' imprisonment.

A CRAZY INEBRIATE AT CARLTON.—William Thackray, a miner, living in the village, was charged by P.-C. John Barker with having been drunk and riotous on the night of the 15th instant. The constable stated that he was on duty at Carlton about 11-40 p.m. on Saturday week, when his attention was attracted by a great crowd of people in front of the Lord Nelson Inn. The defendant was there shouting and behaving in a most shameful manner, being more like a lunatic than one possessing his proper faculties. He would yield to neither the persuasion nor efforts of all his friends and relatives, and the officer was therefore set at defiance. The defendant ultimately, after much difficulty, being got indoors, threatening that if the constable ever put his foot inside the house he would give him "a bat in the mouth."—The Chairman asked the constable whether the defendant had carried on his antics in Mr. Beverley's—Barker replied that he had not, because he had kept at arms' length, (laughter). A fine and costs amounting to 10s. was then imposed.

A COMMON CRIER OF DRINK.—John Haddock, a bricklayer, living at Woodlesford, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly on the night of the 15th inst.—P.-C. Thomas Rothwell stated that, whilst on duty about half-past eleven o'clock at night, his attention was attracted by a noise in Beecroft's yard, Woodlesford, and upon going there he saw the defendant, who was under the influence of drink, illusing a female. He was requested to go to his house, but would not do so. He was fined 10s., with the alternative of seven days' imprisonment.

SERMON CONDUCT OF A PUBLICAN.—"A MYSTERIOUS MAN" AT METHLEY.—As we had grown strangely curious of the little brown hands of late. But the girl had a finer and truer sense of their respective positions than himself; for she shrank from his outstretched hand with a low murmured:

"If you please Mr. Mayworth, I would rather carry it myself."

He took no notice of the timid words, or the questioning eyes raised to his, but lifted the pail from his hand without a word, wondering as the sharp handle lined itself on his white palm, how that little figure could support the heavy weight. She made no motion to follow him, but stood still and silent; returning to her side, he said, looking down into her face:

"Madge, why do you not wish me to carry it; are you afraid that I will do to much for you? If so, see, I will take my payment now, and bending down, he pressed a daring kiss on her lips.

She drew her little figure up proudly, and the look of scorn she bent upon him was worthy of even the squire's self, and stung the man who moved away, leaving the mortified young man standing there, more humiliated by that silent rebuke than he could have been by the most passionate expressions of anger.

He raised the pail and followed her, feeling that nothing would be too mortifying if it would only assure her of his heart-felt contrition. An old female domestic was the only person that greeted him as he opened the kitchen door, and he had the full benefit of her surprised glances as he deposited his burden without a word.

A half hour afterwards he saw Madge pass the door, and thought he felt assured that she must know of his close vicinity, she did not even deign to glance toward him.

As he sat there, almost eating himself for his blind folly, a white apron was flung over his head, and Marguerite Maple's love-lit face looked into his own. He pressed to a tender kiss on her fair brow, and drew her to a seat beside him. Sitting there in the summer twilight with Marguerite's eyes looking into his own, he forgot his interest in the little girl who had so unexpectedly resented his audacity.

He had met Marguerite in town the year previous, and charmed by her grace and beauty, he had solicited her to become his wife; and obtaining the assurance of her love, he had followed her to her country home to gain the sanction of her father.

The squire, who placed entire confidence in his daughter's judgment, and who was pleased to be consulted in her lover's from the first proposed to her that she should wait a year, readily gave his consent to their union; and since then affairs had glided smoothly on, save when an occasional lover's quarrel marred their even harmony.

The disposition of Mayworth was haughty and unyielding, but Marguerite was equally so; and it chafed him to think that he sometimes compelled to subjugate his will to another, even though that other was the woman whom he had asked to be his wife.

In the days of estrangement Marguerite would realise with aching heart that her dismissal of Mayworth proved to mate with her disposition. In reply to Mr. Jame, Mr. Hargreaves stated that the Rothwellwatch's opinion was independent for three years—On been put to the vote, the amendment (appointing Dr. Heaps for five years, at £30 per year) was carried.

The Clerk having read the copy of a very admirable letter to the Local Government Board, asking their consent to borrow on the Board have of raising money for water supply, and read the reply, from which it was understood that the Board might borrow money.

After some conversation, it was resolved "That immediate action be taken on the question of water supply, and that a Special Meeting be held to meet the Board on Monday night, at six o'clock, to consult on the best means to be adopted for the supply of superior water, although that if an immediate arrangement could be come to for water, the agreement might be examined, and that of Mr. Marshall accepted unanimously.—The Chairman called the attention of the Highway Committee to the way in which the paviour wandering his work on Bell Hill. There was no foundation for the stones to rest on, and in consequence the road was not even.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, stop it at once. The Hecklers Hair Restorer will positively restore it to its original colour. Imperial Parliament.

MONDAY.

In the House of Lords a motion by LORD HARTON for a return showing the number of English Charities built or restored since 1840, at a cost exceeding £500, was agreed to. On the motion for the third reading of the Court of Judicature (Ireland) Bill, LORD DENMAN moved the rejection of the measure, but his amendment was negatived without a division, and the bill passed.

In the COMMONS, MR. BALLIE COCHRANE gave notice of a motion for Friday next in reference to the Suez Canal; and MR. R. SMITH gave notice of an amendment to MR. Butt's Home Rule motion. Replying to MR. Bruce, the PRIMATES declined to fix any date for the consideration of the Church Patronage (Scotland) Bill, but promised to give further notice before the second reading thereof. At a later period of the sitting, the PREMIER made a statement with respect to public business, fixing the Gold Coast vote for Friday next in reference to the intention of the Government to receive Tuesday, the 30th instant; for the debate on Home Rule. The HOME SECRETARY, in answer to MR. Mills, stated that he could not undertake to bring in a bill this session to amend the Borough Fund Act. On the order for the third reading of the Licensing Bill, Sir W. LAWSON moved the rejection of the measure. After a brief debate this motion was rejected by 328 to 39, and the bill was then read a third time and passed. In moving the second reading of the Friendly Society Bill, the CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER explained several changes in the measure proposed by the Government, and stated that whilst he was not disposed to press the bill over this session, there were a number of assurances that it was most desirable, if possible to pass it this session. SIR CHARLES DILKE withdrew his resolution for delaying the measure, but in the debate which followed nearly the whole of the speakers urged the importance of more information on the subject being obtained before legislation was proceeded with. The CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER agreed to adopt the course so generally suggested, and the bill was then read a second time on the understanding that it should not be further proceeded with this session.

TUESDAY.

In the HOUSE OF LORDS the Licensing Bill was read a first time, and the second reading fixed for Tuesday next. On the motion of LORD DUNDALE, the returns recently obtained from municipal authorities in England as to the working of the Licensing Act of 1872 were ordered to be printed for the information of their Lordships.

In the COMMONS, MR. FORSYTH pressed the Premier to fix a day for the debate on the second reading of the Bill to Remove the Electoral Disabilities of Women. MR. DISRAELI, in reply, referred to the late Prime Minister's declaration not to give Mr. Butt a day for the discussion of Home Rule, and Mr. Jervis a day for a debate on the income-tax, and said he could not give Mr. Forsyth more than an assurance that, if possible, it would gratify him to assist in bringing forward the question referred to. On the order for going into committee on the Factories Bill, MR. W. HOLMS proposed an amendment, the object of which was to extend the Factory Acts to bakehouses, as all manufactories and employments to which the Factory Acts Extension Act of 1867 applies. The Home Secretary having intimated that other trades would subsequent ly be dealt with and that the Factory Acts would be consolidated the amendment was withdrawn. In Committee on the Bill, MR. FAWCETT moved an amendment to clause 3, re-inquiring women from the operation of the meas ure. On a division the amendment was negatived by 242 to 59. Another amendment to exempt Ireland from the operation of the Bill was negatived by 153 to 48; and MR. TENNANT'S proposal to fix one o'clock as the hour for stopping work on Saturdays was negatived without a division. Ultimately the bill passed through committee.

WEDNESDAY.

Most of Wednesday's sitting of the House of Commons was taken up with discussion on the Shipping Survey bills the second reading of which was moved by Mr. Plimsoll. The Bill provided for a Board of Trade survey of all ships not surveyed by Lloyds' or other association in which confidence could be placed; prohibited deck-loading between certain dates; and, by a clause, provided that all ships should have a painted loadline; and empowered the Board of Trade to make regulations with respect to the stowage of deck cargo, character of cargo. The President of the Board of Trade opposed the Bill, which on a divisionwas rejected by a majority of nine only.

THURSDAY.

In the House of Lords, on Thursday, the Public Worship Regulation Bill was read a third time and passed.

In the Common, Mr. Malcolm and Sir George Elliot, the newly-elected members for Boston and North Durham, took their seats. Replying to Mr. Welby, the Postmaster-General stated that the Conference on the form of a letter could be sent under the half-penny book post wrappers. Public business, for the remainder of the session, is to commence at 4-15. Mr. Burt moved an address to the Queen, to the effect that the Criminal Law Amendment Act should be in the same extent as they are in England. The resolution was rejected by 271 against 62.—A vote of £36,000 was agreed to for the Gold Coast Settlement, was carried by 267 against 47.

THE—GLENTHEA is the finest and best Tea imported, and at the other starches in the world. No higher compliment could be paid to it, as all those who have once used it will not be induced to change it. Tradesmen have doubtless less profit on its sale, but still it is kept by all respectable grocers and oilmen, and wherever sold, is sure to give satisfaction to the best articles, to their own pecuniary profit. The public could insist upon having the Glenthea Starch.

TEETHING.—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, preserves and strengthens the enamel, and imparts a peculiar pearly whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. A renewed and unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Florline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s. 9d. per bottle, and in 7s. per bottle, for "The Florilline Powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HENRY C. GALLEY, 493 Oxford-street, London.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to Chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless, and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s 1½d per bottle.—Manufactured in New York, and at 493 Oxford-street, London.

THE FALSE LOVER.

GERARD MAYWORTH lay in the shadow of the great maples, watching the little figure wending its way across the field. It came nearer, and closing the book he had been reading, he half raised himself from his recumbent position to get a better view of her. Short brown curls gave a piquant expression to the fresh, sparkling face, whose red lips softly carolled little snatches of song; lips softly carolled little snatches of song; the eyes roved simplice tern and land while one round dimpled arm and hand curved themselves upwards, and balanced on the curly head a shining tin pail filled with sparkling water from the spring below.

He knew that she was a sort of upper-servant in Squire Maple's family, where she had been brought up from a little girl, and he himself was betrothed to Marguerite Maple, the squire's only daughter. He knew too that his elimination for his artless little Madge was wrong, very wrong, and stately Morgueirte would open wide her proud black eyes did she ever dream of it. As the thought he darted a stealthy, searching look towards the windows of the great white house surrounded by the tall trees in whose shadows he lay concealed, and then called out :

"Come here, Madge; I must have a drink of that nice fresh water."

She turned at the sound of his voice, and the blushes came and went as she advanced shyly towards him, and with a quick graceful movement she swung the pail downward, and placed it beside him. One more searching glance towards the house, and his eyes looked admiringly into her own as he said laughingly :

"Here is the water, Miss Madge, but how am I to drink it ?"

The blushes were yet more vivid as she murmured a half apology, and started off for a glass.

"You need not take the trouble, little one, I can find something here that will do just as well."

And drawing her back, he fashioned an odd-looking cup out of the hanging maple leaves, making comical efforts to procure a drink, for the sake of listening to the arch, rippling laugh that lighted up the nut-brown eyes and pealed from between the parted lips at his repeated failures.

She thought him very handsome as he stood there, his hair falling in clustering rings on his white forehead as he bent over the pail, his blue eyes glancing every moment into hers with a merry affectation of dismay at his poor success.

He at last assured her that he had had sufficient, and when she would have raised the pail to return to the house, he determined to brave even Marguerite's pride, and carry it himself; for he had grown strangely fond of the little brown hands of late. But the girl had a finer and truer sense of their respective positions than himself; for she shrank from his outstretched hand with a low murmured :

"If you please Mr. Mayworth, I would rather carry it myself."

He took no notice of the timid words, or the questioning eyes raised to his, but lifted the pail from his hand without a word, wondering as the sharp handle lined itself on his white palm, how that little figure could support the heavy weight. She made no motion to follow him, but stood still and silent; returning to her side, he said, looking down into her face :

"Madge, why do you not wish me to carry it; are you afraid that I will do to much for you? If so, see, I will take my payment now, and bending down, he pressed a daring kiss on her lips.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

On Monday last, a meeting of the Rothwell Local Board, was held in the Board Room. Present—Messrs. Hargreaves, Dickinson, Sanderson, Clayton, Bumby, Kendrew, Smith, Lunn, and the Clerk.

Mr. Charlesworth being from home, Mr. Sanderson proposed, Mr. Smith seconded, that Mr. Hargreaves take the chair. An unanimously agreed to. Mr. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Kendrew, that Mr. Sanderson occupy the vice-chair during the year, the original motion was carried, and Mr. Hargreaves took the chair.

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the chairman called on the Inspector of Nuisances, for any report he might have to submit.

The clerk then read the following statement of sanitary drain nuisances and inadequate privy accomodation in Hodge Green, which had been examined by the Sanitary Committee and the Inspector.

The chairman congratulated Mr. Jowett, on the very able and clear manner in which he had stated the case, said the Board ought not any longer to submit to ill-treatment they had received from Mr. Calverley, and (in reference to several nuisances at Boyd Green and also at Rothwell), they ought now to use the powers they had of enforcing the law, and do away with nuisances sent by the Board.

The Inspector said the Medical officer left it over the nuisances mentioned, and agreed with him in almost every case he had reported.

Mr. Sanderson said that Boyds' Green appeared to be in a bad state, but he still thought that if the present ditches and drains were cleaned out, and properly attended to, every thing would be right.

Mr. Dickinson agreed that if the ditches were "fettled out" that was all they wanted. After some further conversation, it was at last partly left to be summoned for nuisances, the Clerk then read from the Minutes of last meeting, the letter of Mr. Sanderson and himself. Mr. Sanderson then proposed, that the Privy or Ash-pit in the various occupiers to abate the nuisances complained of, and that the Clerk be requested to forward the wishes of the Board. Mr. Dickinson seconded the motion—Carried.

A cesspool near Michael Waltons' house was also ordered to be filled up.

The year's appointment of Dr. Heaps as Medical Officer, having expired, a letter was read by the Clerk, in which he asks to be re-appointed, and referring to the health of the district, which he thinks a very much better than it was, and attributes the improvement greatly, to his attention to the duties.

The Chairman thought it very advisable to make the appointment of Medical Officer for several years, as they then Mr. Smith proposed that Dr. Heaps be appointed for three years. The Clerk stated that the Act mentioned five years, as in the case of the Workhouse Medical Officer, who is being re-appointed, but spoke strongly against the amount of salary, stating that he had been appointed to attend to several places near, where small ar amounts are paid, he would also only appoint him for one year. He proposed that Dr. Heaps be appointed for any three or five years, the doctor would have no interest in the matter, but he would do his best, and he (Clerk) knew to the best of his ability—whereas if only appointed for one year, his attention would not be so fully given to the duties that he should be. He moved that for the following year, he thinks this, were they to change their medical officer, so might the next year, and propos

SERIOUS ASSAULT BY A SCHOOLMASTER.—Mr. Lucas, a village schoolmaster, at Nunney, near Frome, has been apprehended on a charge of assault, which will not probably include manslaughter. The mother of a boy named Nichols, who was summoned and convicted at his instance, has been in the habit of insulting him publicly. On Friday last she attacked him, and on his trying to avoid her, she seized him by the whiskers, whereupon he beat her on the head with a heavy whip so brutally that she has remained unconscious ever since, and is not expected to recover.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—NO ENJOYMENT WITHOUT HEALTH.—How sad to see the wealthy in worldly goods are laid up by disease. Far worse to find a family bread-winner incapable of work. An ulcer on the leg, a sprained ankle, a gouty joint, a rheumatic muscle, or a swollen limb, will not disable any one if the affected parts be well fomented with warm water, and, after dry rest be well fomented with Holloway's cooling, healing ing, lastly rubbed with Holloway's ointment. There is no sufferer who need deterrative ointment. There is no sufferer who can withstand or close to the directions accompanying with it or cure his complaint, however severe, inveterate, or however obstinately it resists other measures. C 17293 0

NOTICE.
RECREATION GROUND FOR ROTHWELL.—An important and interesting letter on the above subject is unavoidably left over until next week.

The Rothwell Times.
SATURDAY, JULY 11, 1874.

THERE is no class of the community who deserve more consideration than those that go down to the sea in ships, and do business in the great waters. It is only for us to reflect for a moment upon our insular position, and to ask ourselves what would become of our commercial prosperity, but for the services of those who pass their lives on the sea, to recognise at a glance the great claim which our sailors have to every possible means for their protection. The possible means for their protection. risks which they run are of a peculiarly hazardous character. Even in the case of the most stately liner, that ever sailed the ocean, there is but a plank between eternity and those who so gaily tread the decks. History, both sacred and profane, bears testimony to the value of intercourse between land and land, through the medium of the sea. Centuries before the Christian era, the Tyrians and the Phœnicians ventured forth in their primeval barks, and braved the dangers of the wilderness of waters for the purpose of adding to the stores of their commerce. A longer space back than we now care to estimate, fierce conflicts at sea took place between the Greeks and the Persians, the Romans and the Carthaginians. An eloquent writer has declared of a vessel in full sail, that she walks the waters like a thing of life." In all ages and in every clime the nation which possesses a seaboard has never failed to send forth its sailors in quest of adventure, for the carrying on of war, and for the purposes of trade.

Such considerations as these, clustering round about a profession which has stood the test of thousands of years, and through to-day in spite of the elements of danger by which its pursuit is surrounded, invest with much interest the report of the Royal Commission on unseaworthy Ships, which has just been presented to Parliament. The commissioners do not recommend that anything should be done which would be calculated to diminish the responsibility either of the shipowner or of the captain and crew. They believe that the power already in existence, of inspecting alleged unseaworthy vessels, ought to be effectual in bringing the guilty parties to his senses. They point out, that during the past nine months, 280 ships have been surveyed, of which 256 were found to be unseaworthy. The commissioners agree that with the knowledge that their vessels are thus liable, to a close inspection, shipowners will take increasing pains to make sure that their ships are stanch and trustworthy to which they are now liable, even without such an alteration of the law as that demanded by Mr. Plimsoll.

Whatever be the conclusion to which Parliament may arrive whether to introduce the more stringent legislation demanded by Mr. Plimsoll, or enforce the laws already in existence, as recommended by the Royal Commissioners—the public will expect that adequate protection shall be extended to our seafaring population. The attention of the entire people has been called to this question in a way which will leave Parliament no alternative but to give some effect to the matter than it has hitherto thought fit to bestow. We hear of the representation of classes in the House of Commons; we know how the landed interest, the capitalist, the commissioner of the peerage, the brewer, the shipowner, and lately even the working men's member—all find their way into our great national council. But what the whole of our political life upon the land is continually organising and preparing for electoral conflicts, our sailors are ascending the giddy mast, running lithely from yard to yard as the angry tempest is howling through the shrouds and treading the deck of a ship which is being tossed upon the surface of the unrestrained sea. Poor Jack has no time for political organization, or for wire pulling; yet, glance at your breakfast, or your dinner table and ask where would your luxuries and comforts be, without Jack and his many cases poorly requited labour. Tea from China, cocoa from Mexico, coffee from Arabia, sugar from the Indies, bread from the corn imported from Russia, preserved meat from Australia, Portugal, Burgundy, and Claret from France, Hock, and Johannisberg from Germany—these and a vast number of other articles of daily consumption would be utterly unknown in our island home but for the work of the sailor, who, out of sight is apt to be forgotten. We have now an opportunity of showing that we appreciate his services, and it ought not to pass without being made the most of.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

On Monday last, the usual fortnightly meeting of the Board was held in the Board Room. In the absence of Mr. Charlesworth, it was resolved that Mr. Hargreaves should take the chair.

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, it was resolved that £10 be paid on account for the future to be presented his account for the future to be presented monthly, in the usual course—A letter was read from the Local Government Board, urging them to use every means for obtaining a supply of wholesome water, and reminding the Board that they have power not only to construct and maintain waterworks, but to dig wells, and any other acts necessary for providing a water supply for their district. The letter also informs the Board that the cost of a temporary supply, such as was afterwards decided on, might be wholly or in part reimbursed by a moderate charge for the accommodation.—The Chairman stated that according to arrangements at the Committee of which he had gone down last week, he and Mr. Crutchley had gone down to Hose Pit, and had inspected the water mentioned at the last Board Meeting, and had also surveyed the proposed line of conduct-ing the water to Stanningley. He had not heard anything further from the Local Government Board than what had been read. Mr. Crutchley.—He however, suggested that the Board should write to Mr. Darwen (after hearing the above letter) that the Board at once purchase and lay down Sanitary tubes of nine inches diameter, from Sterry tube Works to Church well, and let the water be led out of the pipe end, which should project run out of the pipe end, which should project say six inches through the wall, the waste water going into the trough.—He said the supply of the whole town would occupy a year or two, there were so many difficulties and officials to consult, and that by doing the above temporary work, they would materially diminish the distance the people have to go for water, and would confer a real benefit on the town.—Mr. Clayton present benefit on the town.—Mr. Clayton thought such a plan would satisfy most people at present, but both he and Mr. Kendrew were wishful to know how the cost was to be met. They thought from the letter of the Local Government Board that it was intended to be sold. The people would certainly not buy it, if the Board had to fetch it from Church well.—The Chairman felt sure the cost would not amount to £50.—The Clerk reminded the Board that the agreement with Lord Stourton was not yet signed.—On the proposition of Mr. Kendrew, seconded by Mr. Smith, it was unanimously resolved that Mr. Hargreaves and Mr. Lunn ascertain prices of Sanitary pipes from various manufacturers and purchase a sufficient length for conveying water from Stercroil well, to Church well.—The Chairman mentioned that water had been conducted down to Valley Farm, a distance of about 500 yards at a small cost, and little trouble.—Mr. Sanderson quite agreed with the suggestion of the Chairman, but would not like to do it without knowing how the money was to to be raised.—He thought the inhabitants ought gladly to accept such a temporary supply, until a more comprehensive scheme can be accomplished.

It was resolved that the Public Works' Committee at once carry out the above scheme.—The cost will at present be paid out of the District Rate.

A sample water from Rose Pit was submitted, but it was unanimously rejected, in consequence of its hardness.

During the evening, Dr. Heaps called and thanked the Board for the re-appointment as Medical Officer of Health, assuring the members that he would at all times be glad to render every assistance. He would also attend monthly, as required last meeting.

The Collector's monthly easement for highway rate was as follows—

Arrears, including the disputed claim from the Midland Railway Co.	£5	11 11
Rate laid June 1st	917	17 04
	£923	8 3
Collected during the month	257	13 7½
To collect	£665	14 6½

The Registrar's first list of births and deaths was laid on the table, and it was resolved that they be "monthly" returns.

Plans having been submitted by Mr. Copley, for privy accommodation to property situate in the Town Street, for privy accommodation to property belonging to Mr. Roodhouse, and situate in Pottery-fold, which were, upon the motion of Mr. Kendrew and seconded by Mr. Lunn, was unanimously approved by the Board. Plans submitted by Mr. Armitage, were approved of on the motion of Mr. Kendrew and seconded by Mr. Lunn.

TRADE DISPUTES.

THE WAGE QUESTION IN SOUTH YORKSHIRE.

At many of the largest pits in the Barnsley and adjoining districts, the men have brought out their tools during the day, and the pits are now laid Idle. At the Oak Collieries, belonging to Messrs. Cammell and Co., (Limited), the men brought out their tools to-day, in accordance with a resolution passed at a meeting held on the previous night. At Monk Bretton Colliery, the men left off working in open air in the morning before going to work, and decided to bring out their tools, which resolution they carried out. The same course was taken at other pits in the district. At the Wombwell Main Colliery, the men held a meeting on Tuesday night, when it was decided, on the casting vote of the chairman, to accept a reduction of 10 per cent. from the gross earnings. At the Victoria, East Gawber, Willow Bank, and a few other pits in the neighbourhood of Barnsley, the men will continue at work on an understanding being come to which in several instances is to the effect that the men shall accept 10 per cent. from the full prices, and abide by the decision of the other pits in the district.

The men at the collieries in the Sheffield district, except in one case, continue to work on a temporary arrangement, but will abide by the decision come to, with regard to the general body. No meetings have been held.

THREATENED STRIKE OF COLLIERY OPERATIVES IN SCUTH YORKSHIRE.

A meeting of the Council of the South Yorkshire Colliery Proprietors' Association was held at the Bruins Hotel, Masborough, on Tuesday. Forty-eight delegates were present. The object of the meeting was to consider the proposed reduction of 10 per cent. in the wages of the colliery operatives. The decision arrived at by the delegates was to consent to no reduction. They contend that they are now paid from 7½ to 30 per cent. less wages than the colliery workers in other districts. The association numbe, s thirty-three members, of that number 1346 have not received notice of a reduction. Should an amicable understanding not be come to, 6517 colliery operatives will then go out on strike

THE LANCASHIRE COLLIERIES.—Great excitement was created in Darwen on Wednesday, by the fact that over 200 persons having been imported from Exeter and Devonshire, to fill the places of the colliers who have been out on strike. For the last ten weeks there have been five collieries entirely stopped for want of hands, and the masters came to an agreement to get hands from the South of England. The arrangements were made, and men were met at the station by the masters. It was anticipated that there would be a collision between the residents and the newly-imported men, but up to Wednesday night everything was quiet.

THE LOCKED-OUT AGRICULTURAL LABOURERS.—A gaeat meeting to sympathise with the locked-out agricultural labourers was held in Battersea Park, on Wednesday evening, at which Mr. Joseph Arch delivered an address; he said that landowners were equally to blame with the farmers for the present state of things, and he urged the formation of a union of land out of cultivation thousands of acres of land out of cultivation simply for game preserves. The liberty we are told we enjoy is a mere mockery. He had real liberty, what was the meaning of the tremendous procession at Manchester, and the great meetings at Victoria Park, and there in Battersea Park?—About 5000 people were present, and a collection was made.

SHOCKING CRIME IN NEW YORK.

Details are given in the American papers of a shocking murder committed on June 19 in New York, and of the attempted assassination of a police officer by the murderer. The victim, named "Marx" Gill and Mortimer Sullivan, were drinking together in a saloon in Murray Street, when they commenced a dispute about a pistol ran, in the course of which, Gill struck Sullivan on the face. The latter, however, took no notice of the insult beyond remarking that he did not want to strike a boy. Gill then left the saloon, but returned shortly afterwards and displayed a short revolver, which he took from his vest pocket. He then commenced playing dice with Sullivan, and on the latter calling him a coward, he became angry, and drawing his pistol, deliberately fired at his opponent and shot him through the head, killing him instantly. Gill then left the saloon and made unfortunate man at once. Gill at once made off, but he was followed by a large number of persons, who pointed him out to a police-officer. On the officer going up to him, he turned and presented the revolver at the officer's breast. One of the charges of the weapon had, however, previously gone accidentally through the ruffian's own hand, he therefore missed, and was overpowered, and then consigned to the tombs to await his trial. He is a well-known desperado.

BERTIE'S FAULT; OR, WHO WAS TO BLAME?

CHAPTER I.

A door opened—a bright light streamed down the garden walk—and a voice spoke in clear, decided tones—

Bertie! Bertie! come in directly; I will not have you ever out in the gale with young men; it is quite ridiculous—perfect nonsense.

The words grew fainter as the speaker turned back into the room with her just spirited; having first made sure her speech was heard by the person she addressed.

Standing inside the gate was the delinquent Bertie; from the other side a young man leaned over, holding both her hands in his, and looking into the clear, grey eyes, raised so confidingly to his face. It was the last good-night; how many had previously been uttered as such, the speakers themselves could not tell; but this positively must be the very last, for the warning voice had sounded, and Bertie dared not disobey.

Must you go Bertie?

Yes, yes! Don't you hear mamma has called me? You know she does not like my lingering here. But you will keep me, she added archly. And you like to be kept, said the young man.

Not now, she replied. Let me go Reginald, I'm all be so angry, and she tried to wrest her hands from their imprisonment.

A muttered something left the young man's lips, which fortunately for his companion's delicacy, which fortunately for his companion's delicacy, was half smothered in its escape by the heavy moustache. Instantly he turned it to a curse; and bending his handsome head over the girl's face, and clasping, he pressed a hurried but passionate kiss upon them, and suffered her to depart as she pleased—staying to watch her final disappearance into the house.

As Bertie crossed the threshold her step became less full of life, and thoughts came flush was less full of life, and thoughts came flush was to her cheek, and the pressure of losing lips dwelt warm upon her hand, the brightness of her eyes was dimmed, and a sensitive clouded face which should have been all sunshine. Before entering she reached the parlour door. Before entering, she reached the parlour door. Before entering, let us glance at Bertie Somers as she was then—

Standing with reluctant feet
Where the brook and river meet.

Few would call her pretty; her figure lacked proportion and elegance, and she did not possess one perfect feature. Her mouth was to large, and nose to small for connoisseurs to approve; but the promise of womanhood was there. That wealth of rippling hair was a crown in itself, and those dark lashes shaded eyes whose clear pale grey varied and deepened to every changing light; whose full pouting lips breathed of slumbering passion. One little touch and the latent fire would burst forth, whether for weal or destruction, and that sensitive sensitive heart prove. The warm flush of youth and happiness coloured cheeks and throat was as yet unmarred by Time's rough handiwork; for sixteen Bertie viewed life through rose-tinted glasses: no greater trouble had ever caused her a sigh than an unconquered task, or caused her a sigh than an unconquered task, or caused her a sigh than an unconquered task, or

GEORGE LAWS,

THE WORKING MAN'S FRIEND AND LITTLE BOYS' TAILOR,

AT THE GUIDING STAR, 40, KIRKGATE, LEEDS.

A shy young man the other day,
A visit to darling Isale bour would pay;
But as his winner suit was bare,
He to friend LAWS did repair:
And there he saw—he does declare—
His splendid Summer Show
Of Suits, Coats, Shirts, & Hosts at price so low,
And client he on order gave,
Which made him look both smart and brave.
The maiden saw but one day's bow
Her Thomas in a suit so new—so fine,
Yet fitted with such skill,
That Love, combined to Fancy's will,
His suit he did not plead in vain,
For LAWS' Suit her heart did gain;
Then to each friend he'd give advice,
Try LAWS' Goods for fit and price.

His Suits are good and cheap, to inspect them all will take you half-a-day.

Search every township in the county round,
You'll find them matchless for a single Pound,
Down to the Little Boys' only a single Crown.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.
Bronchitis, Diphtheria, Coughs, Colds, and all Derangements of the Throat and Chest.
In any of the above diseases, immediate and permanent relief is obtained by effectually rubbing this Ointment well into the throat, chest, and pit of the stomach. Also, apply it freely, and in all stages of influenza, settled colds, and hoarseness, it will give instant relief, and ensure a speedy cure with efficiency and safety.
Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Sores, Wounds, and Ulcers.
By rubbing this Ointment well into the parts and around the affected part to wet it a distance of several inches beyond, and then covering with a warm bandage, the most inveterate sores become indolent, the worst cases of sore heads, sore breasts, and bad legs, and the most obstinate ulcers, will be healed, when no other treatment has been found to succeed, and the healing process is certain, safe, and speedy.
Skin Diseases of all kinds.
In short, in all cases, no matter the sore, the sore the place, or of what kind it may be, the Ointment will certainly be found to act in the most beneficial manner. It should be used in all cases according to the directions given with each pot, and Pills used at the same time, according to the printed directions, with every confidence that a speedy cure will be effected.
Gout, Rheumatism, and Glandular Swellings.
Never one sufferer from these excruciating complaints should have recourse to this Ointment and Pills, for in all other maladies based upon a disordered liver, these Ointment and Pills used together will be found to act with certainty and safety, and to effect a speedy and permanent cure in the most hopeless cases.
Piles, Fistulas, and Internal Inflammations.
Persons afflicted with these distressing complaints will find in this wonderful Ointment a remedy of unfailing efficacy, as it allays pain, cures even sore wounds, and, by rubbing it well into the parts affected, and also over the stomach and bowels, purifies the blood and regulates the stomach in an extraordinary manner.
Sold by all Chemists, Sole Manufactory of Professor Holloway, 244, Strand, London, W.C., and by all other Medicine Vendors throughout the World, with Directions in almost every Language.
N.B.—Purchasers should look to the Address, 244, Strand, London, W.C., and Pots and Boxes without this address are Spurious.

Deaths.
BATTY—July 11, aged 61 years, Ellen, wife of Mr. Samuel Batty, Draper, of Rothwell.

THE ASTLEY DEEP PIT EXIGSION.—The inquiry into the cause of death of the four men who were drowned in the Lancashire side after the recent explosion at the Astley Deep Pit was resumed on Monday at the Ashton Town Hall. The coroner (Mr. Addison) summed up, the jury retired, and after an absence of nearly an hour and a half, returned the following verdict:—"That the death of these men to whom this inquiry relates was accidentally caused by an explosion on the 14th of April last, and that the primary cause of the explosion was the bricking up of the mouthing leading to Smithy Mine; that this was an act of great imprudence if culpable negligence, and was effected under the management of Mr. Walshaw; and with the knowledge of Ineil Holmes." There was a difference of opinion among the jury as to under whose instructions the blocking was done.

ADULTERATION OF FOOD.—At a largely attended meeting of wholesale tea dealers, held in the City, to consider the report of the Select Committee on the Adulteration of Food, the first of the resolutions adopted affirmed that there is very little difference in the cases of the four men whose deaths were caused by the explosion at the Astley Deep Pit was resumed on Monday at the Ashton Town Hall. The coroner (Mr. Addison) summed up, the jury retired, and after an absence of nearly an hour and a half, returned the following verdict:—"That the death of these men to whom this inquiry relates was accidentally caused by an explosion on the 14th of April last, and that the primary cause of the explosion was the bricking up of the mouthing leading to Smithy Mine; that this was an act of great imprudence if culpable negligence, and was effected under the management of Mr. Walshaw; and with the knowledge of Ineil Holmes." There was a difference of opinion among the jury as to under whose instructions the blocking was done.

COLLIERS STRIKE.

The South Staffordshire colliers' strike, after lasting sixteen weeks, is now virtually concluded; about seven thousand men having resolved, at a meeting held on Thursday, at Tipton, to return to work upon the terms proposed at Birmingham. A dissenting minority of about 2,000 Dudley men determined still to remain out; but their demands are now said to be hopeless.

A MAN DROWNED NEAR STOURTON ARMS.—On Thursday afternoon, while two men were walking on Pontefract Road, a little dog which they had with them, made for some still water just this side of Mrs. Cargill's, and was observed to get hold of something which turned out to be the dead body of a man. Information was immediately sent to the police, and the body was got out about half past five, and taken to the house of Mrs. Cargill.—It appears the man's name is Emanuel Jagger, aged 50 years. He has been employed at the Old Red Lion Inn for many years as man of all work—he had been missing since Wednesday morning, but no special uneasiness was felt, as he has been accustomed to absent himself every week from Wednesday morning till Friday morning. He was seen leaving on a hedge after dinner, but nothing extraordinary in his manner was then noticed.

The poor man's brothers, who seem to be respectable working men, informed us that he was affected with water in the brain, and it is not improbable that this has been the primary cause of a temporary insanity resulting in this unfortunate occurrence.

ROTHWELL PARISH CHURCH SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Until people have witnessed a Yorkshire "School Feast" we doubt very much whether they can form any idea what kind of folk the teachers, parents, and children of Sunday Schools are, or what form of pleasure it is which seems above all others to attract and amuse them. It was our pleasure to witness such a "feast" on Wednesday, July 15th in connection with the above schools. It was a feast which lacked nothing; looked forward to by the children attached to the school, and not less perhaps by the teachers of the children; for the teachers are after all, not less anxious than the children that everything should be done in such a manner as to give them pleasure. It is the pleasure of the children that is first thought of by the teachers, and it is a pleasure to the latter, to witness the delight which their pleasure is hardly less than that of the children themselves. We are sure too, that if the children are satisfied, that their parents are equally delighted, for they evidently like to see their children enjoy themselves. It was arranged that the children should meet at the schools at 2-30 p.m., and though the banners which are generally displayed on this occasion in spite of an unfavourable march in many of the houses of Rothwell and neighbourhood, were not forthcoming, the procession to the old Parish Church was managed without them. There they all took part in a solemn and appropriate Service. Mr. Sheldon the organist, who had kindly lent his services to teach the children the hymns appointed to be sung on the occasion, sat at his post, the organ; and ably assisted by several members of the choir, we need hardly say, that the care and attention he had bestowed was fully rewarded by the manner in which the hymns were sung by the whole congregation; prayers having been said, a very suitable address was delivered to the children by the Vicar who based his remarks on the words of St. Paul to Timothy, the 2nd epistle, the 2nd chapter, the 15th verse; "From a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus."—After the service was over the whole party proceeded to the schoolroom, and the children sat down to tea and buns, which had been provided by Mrs. Abbishaw, of Rothwell Haigh, in great abundance, and in a way which gave great satisfaction. The tea was good, the buns large and crowded with spice and currants. After grace had been sung the tea was poured out by the teachers, and the buns handed round. Extraordinary justice was done to both: one boy, (it is related on the good authority of an eye-witness) did not shew any signs of his hunger being appeased, till he had demolished 5 of these buns! so taking the boy as a sample, (for he was not by any means one of the biggest), as there were in the room 90 boys engaged in this work of destruction, there must have been about 450 buns consumed in the boys' school alone. After the wants of the youngsters had been fully satisfied, they were for a while let loose to play about the field provided on them sat and those who had exhausted their powers of locomotion refreshed themselves; presently the the members of the Band came and gave a decided military aspect to the scene, as they too sat down to tea, and all appeared successful in their efforts, as soon as ever they had been refreshed by the good provisions that were at hand, the whole party headed by the Band proceeded to a field adjoining the vicarage, which in fact is known kindly lent by the vicar for the occasion. Here it was our pleasure to witness one of the merriest sights we ever remember to have seen. Yorkshire folk are proverbially awkward, give them a field, a band, cricket materials, and they very quickly set to work with a will to amuse themselves. They all appear happy and contented; the boys were boys again, the boys become more boyish than ever, the girls shout and make nearly as much noise as the boys, and the whole field is very soon converted into a playground for all who feel a desire for innocent recreation; it was so on the present occasion—it was a wonderful sight—all were so intent on pleasure.

Under the skilful management of Mr. Fowler, played incessantly. Some of the people danced sedately, others looked quietly on; some play coppers; some played 'kiss in the ring,' others played at cricket; in fact the whole affair baffles description. Even those who had no connection with the Sunday-school seemed to be made happy; for the Sunday-school seemed to be made happy; for the sunshine and the thought of one of the visitors staying at the vicarage, a bladder had been blown out, and it was in case of feasting, and it was called a football, it was in case of feasting, and this good people never which is to many a source of pleasure, in a manner conceive, one of the boys, and by one were perwhich they alone are capable of entering into the spirit of the occasion, and of making the most of it. TERRIBLE ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE BY A YOUNG WOMAN.

Emma Dottibelle, a young girl of nineteen, said to be a domestic servant, threw herself from Waterloo Bridge on Sunday afternoon. When rescued, a piece of paper was found on her on which she described herself as a very bad girl. On being brought up at Bow Street the magistrate expostulated with her, and remanded her to the House of Detention for inquiries to be made about her.

A conference under the presidency of the Hon. Lyulph Stanley, and at which Mr. John Morley moved the principal resolution, was held at the Westminster Palace Hotel, on Monday, to oppose the Endowed School's Bill. The keynote of the proceedings was struck by the chairman, in declaring that "the will of the founder, about which they had heard so much lately from the Tories, was all humbug." The metropolitan speakers were Lib eationists like Mr. E. Miall, or Radicals of the George Potter type. Birmingham, Manchester, and Oxford also furnished speakers.

THE WEATHER & THE CROPS.

The present is an extraordinary season for the British Farmer, and challenges the attention of many who have no immediate interest in agriculture. We have had a long drought, first with the accompaniment of frost, and now with burning heat. The first crop is extremely short, and the after-grass is scorched into the consistency of stubble. The cattle and sheep suffer both from lack of food and of water. The short dry grass demands an extra quantity of liquid to "wash it down," and unfortunately this requirement is not always easy to find. The poor animals, after roving over the burnt-up fields until their blood becomes heated by the sun, turn their attention from the solid to the liquid, and if they are within reach of the latter, proceed to make the most of it. Cattle and sheep may be seen making a rush for the nearest pond, plunging into the water until nearly immersed, seeking not only to satisfy their thirst, but to enjoy the sense of external coolness. The very canals are invaded by some unhappy cattle, for whom the delicious greensward no longer exists. It is no marvel that we read in the market reports, "a small supply of beasts, and these in no demand. Farmers having to keep."

Amid the arid acres which once were pleasant pastures, the live stock lie panting under the trees, weary of champing the dusty herbage, which grows scantier and dryer each day. "The cool of the evening" has become almost a figure of speech, for when the sun goes down the evening zephyr blows every now and then into a heated breath, as if it came from some burning prairie. The ash trees fail to show their wonted burden of pale green leaves, and bear so scanty a foliage that their shadow is scarcely more to pass the noon-day sun. The rivers run low, and the angler is sadly puzzled in his search for sport; in the Upper Thames "the river is very bright and unfishable," while the news from Yorkshire tell us the water is so thick in the tide-way of the Ouse, that the salmon and the trout are perishing in large numbers. Probably the entomologists are the happiest people just now. Judging by the myriads of moths which swarm on the blackberry blossoms and the thistles we should expect that insect life was abundant in the midst of this glowing heat. Perhaps, as aforetime, we may hear of mosquitoes and other unwelcome creatures of the insect species, with burning flies of Oriental splendour and bewitching rarity.

Under the fervid glow of this July sun, the crops are ripening prematurely. From some parts we hear hopeful accounts of the wheat, and yet it is hard to believe that with such a drought we can have a full-developed grain. Well grown or not, the ears get ripened, and the sickle must do its work. The beans turn yellow, and the oats are already dying. The cutting of wheat has already begun, following that of oats, and the appointed weeks of harvest are anticipated. From Dorchester we are told over a morning glass of sherry, "the crop is regarded as fine," and we can only hope the estimate is not wrong. For the purpose of getting in the harvest the weather is splendid. Wheat is falling in its ripeness, the harvest being thus forward. Oats are growing dear, as the cattle must needs be fed with something. This is a sorry time for graziers, and we cannot expect that live stock will be of its wonted weight. If we cannot find grass and hay, where shall we find meat? The root crops, too, are in a difficulty. What shall we say for our beer? The hops are not doing well. The hot sunshine is turning the bulk of the plantations black, and the fly is multiplying in the Wealds of Kent and Sussex. Ere long, we shall see say of water? Wells are running dry, and springs are vanishing away. Where shall we be ere the waters flow again from the depths of the earth? The fountains are being sealed up, and towns and villages feel the need of the subterranean supply. We are told that there is plenty of water given to us from time to time by the clouds of Heaven, only we wilfully fling it away. But let our critics be lenient, for the clouds have failed to drop fatness, and we have had eight months of strangely deficient showers. There is dust in the land, and the earth is dry to an unwonted depth. When the rain comes it will be sucked in by the parched soil, and many a heavy down-pour will be needed ere we get our wonted saturation. How are we to reckon on sea-nous such as these? Why are we sometimes drowned, and at other times dried up until all nature seems to faint? Woods and wheat fields are now on fire. The locomotive spurting hot coals from its iron throat as it thunders through the fields is almost as fatal as Samson's foxes, with their lighted firebrands, making into the standing corn of the Philistines. From cutting and embankment the crackling flames ascend amid the sun-light, and the smoke of the country goes up like the smoke of the furnace. No doubt the change will come; we shall have our days of atmospheric gloom, and long hours of rain. After a time we shall hear of harvest-home covered with floods, and seed rotting in the earth. Just now we are basking as in the tropics. A weird comet is streaming through the sky, and people wonder whether the celestial portent makes the weather hot; perhaps it does, though science may fail to find any reason why it should, and may smile at the idea. Our present comet is a strange eccentric visitor, and suggests to our philosophers some considerations which they never had before. Human joys and interests are marvellously linked with causes which lie beyond this narrow earth. Man and beast, bird and insect, all depend for existence and enjoyment on operations which spread through the far depths of space. Yet there is proof that all are cared for, and amid the many perturbations and uncertainties of creation the living things are remembered, that they perish not.—Standard.

ROTHWELL HAIGH.
Valuable Inn or Public-house and Land for Sale
By Messrs. HOWGATE and BEAUMONT, at the House of Mr John T Sweeting the Bull Hotel, in Wakefield, in the county of York, on Saturday the 3rd day of July, 1874, at six o clock in the evening, either altogether or in lots, and subject to such conditions as will be then produced
THE FOLLOWING PROPERTY, viz:—All that old and well-established INN or PUBLIC-HOUSE, known by the sign of the Coach and Horses, with the stables, garden, outbuildings, and land with the same belonging, situate adjoining the highway between Leeds and Wakefield in Rothwell Haigh, in the township of Rothwell, in the county of York now in the occupation of Mr. Thomas Birkinshaw, the whole containing an area of 2 roods and 32 perches or thereabouts, all that Close or Parcel of Grass Land, containing 2a. 3r. 8p., more or less (forming in the plan copyhold land) situate on Rothwell Haigh aforesaid, near the before described premises.
The public-house stands in a most excellent situation on the highway leading from Leeds to Wakefield, and fronting thereto, and is about half way between Leeds and Wakefield, and has for years commanded a large and respectable business; and the several pieces of land are in good condition.
All the property is freehold, save the plot of land containing 1 rood and 20 perches, which is copyhold of the manor of Rothwell. Rent and minerals (if any) as belong to the vendor will be sold with the land.
A great portion of the purchase money may, if required, remain on security of the premises.
For further particulars apply to the Auctioneers, at their offices, in Southgate, Wakefield; or at the offices of HARRISON and SMITH, Solicitors, Wakefield.

HOLLOWAYS PILLS.
These Pills can be confidently recommended as the most reliable and certain remedy for all disorders of the Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys. They act upon these vital organs with wonderful power, giving tone and energy to the whole system. They are confidently recommended to all persons suffering from indigestion, biliousness, and liver complaints, as a few doses will set them completely right. For females of all ages these Pills are invaluable. They correct all irregularities, and are a certain remedy when the system is out of order. Every family should have a box of these Pills in the house, as they are worth many times their cost for the prevention of sickness alone. They are mild in their operation, and will be found to keep the system in a perfect state of health. Holloway's Pills have been used in all parts of the world, and have established a reputation unequalled by any medicine. They are strictly vegetable, and may be taken by persons of any age or constitution without producing any inconvenience or change of diet. They purify the blood, and are the best known remedy for all skin diseases, scrofula, or king's evil, erysipelas, and bad legs. They are a never-failing remedy in all cases of debility, however originating, and will be found to restore the nervous system when shattered by excesses of any kind. They are wonderfully efficacious in all female complaints, and as a general aperient they have no equal. They are purely vegetable, safe, and certain in their operation, and may be taken by persons of any age or constitution without producing any inconvenience or change of diet.
Diseases peculiar to Women.
These Pills are especially valued in Holloway's Pills for correcting all irregularities of the female constitution, and may be confidently recommended to every family as a never-failing remedy for any derangement of the system. Any member, young or old, suffering from weakness which accompanies the decline of life, will find these Pills an unequalled means for checking disease, purifying the blood, and restoring the system to a state of perfect health and vigour. They never fail in all cases of debility, however originating, and will be found to restore the nervous system when shattered by excesses of any kind. They are wonderfully efficacious in all female complaints, and as a general aperient they have no equal. They are purely vegetable, safe, and certain in their operation, and may be taken by persons of any age or constitution without producing any inconvenience or change of diet. Biliousness, Loss of Appetite, and Lowness of Spirits.
The Pills effect a wonderful change in persons subject to biliousness, and those who have lost their appetite, correct indigestion, remove nausea or sickness, and relieve pain in the stomach, which is often mistaken for disease of the heart. They act upon the liver, stimulate it to a healthy action, and cause the bile to flow freely, which is the only way to get rid of the poisonous matter that is generated by biliousness.
The Kidneys—Their Derangement and Cure.
Holloway Pills can be used according to the printed directions, and the most relaxed state of the kidneys is found to be restored to healthy action. Any one of the kidneys that is forced into a state of inflammation, which produces dropsy, gravel, it is particularly recommended that these Pills should be used night and morning, as a few days' persistence in this course will produce the most astounding cures may be performed.
The Pills and Ointment are sold at Professor Holloway's Establishment, 244, Strand, London; also by nearly all respectable Vendors of Medicines throughout the civilised World, in Pots and Boxes, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each. The smallest Box or Pill contains four doses; the largest Pot contains sufficient for twenty-four.
Full printed directions are affixed to each Box and Pot, and can be had gratis at the above address, in English, French, German, Italian, Polish, Russian, Turkish, Arabic, Armenian, Persian, or Chinese.

TWENTY EIGHT YEARS' INVARIABLE SUCCESS.

CURE OF LIVER AND BILIOUS COMPLAINTS
From the Rev. James J. Campbell, Vicar of Wramplingham, Norfolk. Dec 5, 1859.

"Gentlemen,—I have long known and appreciated the virtues of DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, and now that I have taken it for 18 months, and whenever I feel myself I take it for a breakfast or tea, I have no hesitation in saying that it has restored the stomach, and prepares it for other food, while at the same time it gives the system at once a freshness to be felt and not described. It is pleasant, palatable, and particularly when the liver is out of order, nothing else will do. I consider it the best of all remedies. It regulates admirably the bile, and makes it flow in its proper channel, and not to the detriment of the health. In short, a healthy state of the liver is one of the earliest and best symptoms You can make what use you please of this communication.—I am, gentlemen, yours faithfully, JAMES J. CAMPBELL."

LIVER NERVES.—CURE No. 59,614.
The Marchioness de Brehan, in consequence of a liver complaint I was wasting away for seven years, and exhibited and suffered all that can be conceived of misery, or in fact, attend to any person. I was unable to rest, could not eat, could not endure anything—with a nervous pulsation throughout my whole frame, and nervous irritability, and the most miserable nervous existence. Your food prevented even my sitting down to write to you, and I am now restored to perfect health, and to intercourse with the world had become entirely forgotten, and, as it were, lost to me. I am happy to have it in my power to make this statement. In perfect despair I took DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA, and I look the delicious food with pleasure, and the good God be praised! it has completely restored me to health, strength, and ability to make and execute my will, and to perform every social position.—Marchioness DE BREHAN, Naples, April 24, 1858.

CURE OF CONSUMPTION BY DU BARRY'S FOOD.
"DU BARRY'S REVALENTA has through a kind Providence been the means of preserving to me the life of a dear son, who was fast sinking into the grave in the last stages of consumption, and had been given up by four physicians as incurable, when a first sight saw I was induced to try your food which I am happy to say has restored him to perfect health, and for which he has expressed a strange fit for better. I remain your obliged humble servant, my gratitude.—THOMAS CHORLEY.—March 3, 1859."

HEALTH AND STRENGTH RESTORED
without medicine or expense by DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, the lowness and irritability even than the best food in more nourishing and sustaining even than the best beef, and a hard-working man may live on it for less than 6d. per day, or less even than one per lb. Cures of 76,000 cases for 50s. per lb. Cures of 76,000 cases for 50s. of 4d. stamps. Copies of 76,000 cures for 50s.

DR. LIVINGSTONE ON DU BARRY'S FOOD
Describing the province of Angola in the Journal of the London Geogra; hical Society, mentions the happy effects of the staff of life being the excessive physician or nourishment, the Revalenta Arabica Food, DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, a remedy, he says, for dyspepsia, consumption, scrofula, cancer, &c., having been free from disease—consumption, scrofula, cancer, &c., having been scarcely heard of among them, nor small pox and measles but since the last 20 years."

FEVERS, DISTURBANCY, EXHAUSTION, SCURVY,
Which prevailed on the late voyage round the world, have yielded to French navy, on the late voyage round the world, have yielded to DU BARRY'S nourishing REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, DU BARRY'S nourishing REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, which we found more nourishing than beef, and more delicious than which we found more nourishing than beef, and more delicious than coffee, and more easily digested than any other food. It is a regret that further proofs of its efficacy have not been given in the navy.—Dr. L. Maurice, C. Maltet, Surgeon-in-Chief, L. Vaisey, E. Carey, G. Rochet, Surgeons, Medical Staff, Toulon, Marines, Had-d'Hyeres, 12th May, 1873.

DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, PHTHISIS,
Consumption, Debility, Cough, Asthma, Constipation, Flatus, Phlegm, Nausea, all Nervous, Liver, Stomach, and BOWEL COMPLAINTS are effectually cured only by DU BARRY'S DELICIOUS HEALTH-RESTORING REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, which has saved thousands of cases which had been considered hopeless. A few quoted below.

TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS' DYSPEPSIA,
From which I have suffered great pain and inconvenience, and for which I had consulted the most eminent physicians in London, but could find no relief until your DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD restored me to perfect health.—REV. JAMES D. BINGHAM, Captain Royal Navy, London, 3rd October, 1848.

CONSTIPATION, ASTHMA, &c.—CURE No. 49,821.
Of 50 years' indescribable agony from Dyspepsia, Constipation, Asthma, cough, constipation, flatulency, spasms, sickness, and vomiting, by DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD.
—MARIA JOLY.

CURE No. 87,425 OF CONSUMPTION
"Thirty-three years' General Debility, Nervousness, delicacy, indigestion, headache, singing in the ears, constipation, relieved by DU BARRY'S delicious REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, after all other remedies had been tried in vain. Restored to perfect health by DU BARRY'S DELICIOUS REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD. My lungs, liver, stomach, head, and nerves are now strong by using My lungs, liver, stomach, head, and nerves are now strong by using it."—JAMES ROBERTS Timber Merchant."

CURE OF STOMACHIC and ABDOMINAL DISORDER.
"It affords pleasure I have to inform you of the wonderful approval of your REVALENTA ARABICA, and to express the gratitude I have been and is in favour of its use. For many years I had suffered from stomachic and abdominal disorders. The medicines I took in vain all the remedies I tried failed to relieve me, until I had recourse to your REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, which I used for three months, and now after three months' use of it, I am restored to the full enjoyment of health."—CAPTAIN DE LALUZERNE, Major-General, Privateville, A.O., Dec. 27, 1854.

CURE of No. 71,432 of CUTANEOUS ERUPTION.
"Rue de Alba, Province of Alicante, Spain, 31st October, 1867.—I am happy to tell you that DU BARRY'S delicious REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD has restored my daughter to perfect health and cured her of a cutaneous eruption, which gave her no rest night or day, after trying in vain the skill of the most eminent of my profession."—PERRIN DE LA HITOLES Vice-Consulate of France."

CURE No. 68,471 OF GENERAL DEBILITY.
"I have great to be able to assure you that those last two years since I saw DU BARRY'S admirable REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD have restored to me the weight I had lost, and given me much and strength and nimbleness, my spirit and stomach remains one of what I was before the most eminent physicians, who had exhausted their skill at the age of 30, in short, DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD has made me enjoy existence, visit the sick. I make long journies on branch, attend successfully to my numerous patients, and, in fact, my head is clear, my judgment perfect, I authorise the publication of my extraordinary cure, and remain, with sentiments of the most profound respect, PETER CAMPBELL, Inclector of Theology and Priest at Fraserburgh, Monday."

CURE OF LIVER, NERVOUS, & BILIOUS COMPLAINTS,
"For 20 years my wife has suffered most fearfully from nervous and bilious attacks, palpitations of the heart, and at times such extreme nervousness as to be unable to move, or to fast, attend to anything—with a nervous pulsation throughout her whole frame, and nervous irritability, and the most miserable nervous existence, which prevented even my sitting down to write to you. She is now restored to perfect health, and to intercourse with the world become entirely forgotten, and, as it were, lost to me. I am happy to have it in my power to make this statement. In perfect despair I took DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA, and I took the delicious food with pleasure, and the good God be praised! it has completely restored me to health, strength, and ability to make and execute my will, and to perform every social position.—Marchioness DE BREHAN, Naples, April 24, 1858."

WOODLESFORD FLOWER SHOW

On Monday last, the first exhibition of the Woodlesford, Oulton, Swillington and district Horticultural Society, took place in the park and grounds of the President (Henry Bentley, Esq.,) who also most liberally threw open the well-kept pleasure gardens, the long line of vineries and hothouses, and the winding, tree-shaded walks, attached to his residence. Favoured with fine weather, and with such a delightful and attractive show ground, it is not to be wondered at, that the attendance was very large, and well patronized by the beauty and fashion of the locality; its proximity to Woodlesford station also induced great numbers of visitors from Leeds, Hunslet, and Wakefield to spend the afternoon in the country.

Of the show itself, for a first exhibition, it was pronounced very good, and we do not doubt that, with a more favourable season, a larger and more varied show will be made next year. There were 30 exhibitors in the Floral and Horticultural department, divided into the three classes—Gentlemen's Gardeners, Amateurs and Cottagers.—About £75 was distributed in prizes.

The following officiated as judges:—Horticultural Department—Mr. Young, gardener to Earl Fitzwilliam, Wentworth; Mr. Pring, gardener to Mr. George Lane Fox, Bramham; Mr. F. F. Smith (H. F. & Son, nurserymen, Brayton and Selby). Horses and Ponies—Mr. T. Dodds, Mount Pleasant, Wakefield; Mr. Wainwright, Chapeltown, Leeds; Mr. William Smith, Swillington, Leeds.

There were only four gentlemen's gardeners or sole growers who competed, viz., Thomas Wharton, gardener to Captain Douglas, Oulton; James Boshell, Beeston; Mr. Joseph Green, Garforth; and Joseph Lucas, gardener to Mrs. Harrison, Woodlesford; and the prizes were awarded amongst them as follows:—

Thomas Wharton, 2nd for six stove and greenhouse plants; 2nd for six ornamental-foliage; 1st fuchsias; 1st, geraniums, variegated; 1st, do., zonales; 2nd, scarlet do; 1st, exotic ferns; 1st, mosses; 1st, cockscombs; 1st, egg plants; 1st, single petunias; 1st, double do; 2nd, gloxinias; 1st, coleus; 2nd, stove plant in bloom; 1st and 2nd, greenhouse plants in bloom; 1st, French marigolds; 1st, African marigolds; 1st, stocks; 1st, verbenas; 2nd, hand bouquet; 1st, bouquet of wild flowers; 1st, long, fine, forced and cheap beans; 2nd, cauliflowers; 1st, white cabbage; 2nd, kidney potatoes; 1st, round potatoes; 1st, spring onions; 2nd, eschalots; 1st, best root; 1st, red and white celery; 1st, cucumbers; 1st, vegetable marrows and parsley; 1st, white and black currants; 1st, raspberries and strawberries; 2nd, pears; and 1st, baking apples.

James Boshell, 1st, six stove and greenhouse plants; 1st, ornamental-foliage; 2nd, six variegated geraniums; 1st, stove plant in bloom.

Joseph Green, the Nurseries, Garforth,—2nd, six zonales; 2nd, scarlet geraniums; 2nd, six coleus; 1st and 2nd, twelve roses; 1st, twelve pelcottes; 1st, hand bouquet; 2nd, bouquet wild flowers; 1st, wild flowers; 2nd, black currants; 1st, tray of fruit.

Joseph Lucas, 2nd, six fuschias; 2nd, six exotic ferns; 1st, and 2nd, pears; 1st and 2nd, collection of nature; 1st, kidney potatoes; 2nd, round potatoes; 2nd, best root; 2nd, cucumbers; 2nd, vegetable marrows; 2nd, parsley; 1st, tray of vegetables; 1st, red currants; 2nd, white currants; 2nd, strawberries; 1st, cherries; 1st and 2nd, gooseberries; 1st, pears.

The following were the amateurs competing:—Thomas Laverack, Rothwell Haigh; Jabez Westmoreland, Rothwell; J. W. Townend, Newsome Green; John Daunill, Normanton; B. Stringer; Robert Wainwright, Woodlesford; Jonathan Craven, Woodlesford; C. Barker, Rothwell; Edward Day, Wakefield; John Brown, Oulton. The cottagers were: John Hewitt, Swillington; Henry Goodall, Swillington; Joseph Moore, Oulton; Thomas Fielden, Rothwell; Joseph Wilson, Stanley Lane End; Charles Thompson, Woodlesford; W. Wharton; Joseph Wilkinson, 58, Greenwood Street, Hunslet; Simon Hall, Oulton; Waterloo; James Ellis, Newsome Green; John Gill, Great Preston; Joseph Bentley, Astley; George Wilkinson, Oulton; John Hudson, Oulton; John Wilson, Swillington.

Extra Prizes were given by Messrs. Nelson & Sons, Leeds; Mr. W. Allison, Knostrop; Mr. W. Rushforth, Hunslet; Mr. Samuel May, Leeds.

To these extra prizes, Mrs. Bentley, also added for children, viz:—

For the best bunch of wild roses—1st prize, a pair of candlesticks, won by J. Berry.

Nosegay of wild flowers (girls under 10)—1st, a flower vase, J. Green; 2nd, a glass sugar basin, W. Wharton; 3rd, a book on flowers, G. Wilkinson.

Best tye sown of different sorts—1st, two pitchers, J. Craven.

Best design of the word "try" done in leaves flowers moss, &c.—1st, six white and gold cups and saucers, W. Wharton; 2nd, an album, C. Craven.

The hurdle leaping was competed for by horses belonging to Messrs. Tilford, Sanderson, Scrutchard, Garwood and Burton; Mr. Tilford taking the first prize, a silver cup value £5 5s., while the second prize, £3 was awarded to Mr. Sanderson.

Some interesting sport was had by the leaping of ponies, which was keenly contested, eventually resulting in favor of Mr. England, of Swithin's Farm, Rothwell, winning the cup value £3 10s., seconded with a prize of £1 10s. by Mr. George Lane Fox, Bramham House, Greetland, whose "tit" is valued at £100.—Some dispute arose as to the height of Mr. England's pony, which, was eventually disqualified as Mr. England objected to take it to the Leeds standard. The first prize was therefore given to Mr. Taylor, and the second prize to Messrs. Thackray and Wells, of Leeds. Mr. Thomas Swift's pony of Carlton, also ran, but failed to secure a place.

During the afternoon and evening, the justly celebrated band of the Leeds Rifles played in splendid style and with delicate emphasis, a selection of choice and appropriate music, while the handbell ringers attracted a numerous throng by their performance. As the evening wore on, there was some dancing and out-door games, though these exercises were not so fully and heartily entered into, as has usually been the case at such gatherings.

Shortly after eight o'clock, the ascent of a parti-coloured large fire balloon announced the commencement of the fireworks, which while reflecting great credit on Professor Caldwell, were somewhat interfered with, by the momentary showers which descended, and by half-past nine had become a regular downfall, continuing more or less all night.

☞Very great credit is due to the care, forethought, and courtesy of the indefatigable secretary (Mr. E. A. Flint), as well as to the committee, who very strictly adhered to the rules, and sedulously attended to their duty. To Mr. Bentley, to whose kindness, and munificence the success of the show is very largely attributable, the thanks of all the parties who visited the exhibition should be tendered, and with such a president, the society ought to prosper.

We are glad to learn that comparatively little damage has been done to the grounds, and that our character for honour and gratitude to "donors," has been fully maintained in the park and gardens of Eshald House.

THREATENED LOCK-OUT OF MINERS IN SCOTLAND.

A numerously attended meeting of coalmasters from the Lochhill district, which is a very extensive one, was held in Glasgow on Wednesday. It was unanimously agreed that the men's wages, which, on the completion of Hamilton, Mesnley, and Co., returned to their work by Friday morning, the whole coal series in the district would be declared locked-out.

CO-OPERATION.

To the Editor.

Sir,—The West Yorkshire and North Stafford Miners have amalgamated in the laudable enterprise of Co-operative Coalmining, and have just decided to purchase a colliery in North Staffordshire, known by the name of the "Heyswood Colliery," near to the North Stafford main mineral line to London; the estate contains six beds of coal, and one of iron stone, varying in thickness from one yard to seven feet, the top bed of coal has been partly got a few years ago, but the remaining beds are untouched. The coal is of excellent quality, and commands a trade second to none with the chief markets of the kingdom. The neighbouring collieries working the same seams of coal, not having been worked for a day during the late depression, thus proving beyond a doubt its superior quality. The royalty is regarded as a very light one, not exceeding 6d. per ton on the coal got, and £70 per acre on the top bed. There is 13 years to run on the present lease, and another can then be agreed upon. It is estimated that the colliery will last 40 years at an out-put of 300 tons per day, and the adjoining freeholders have expressed themselves willing to sell their coal if the co-operative principle be adopted. The purchase money of the plant, land, and royalty, and a third share of the surface and minerals included, will cost £13,000. It is estimated that it will take £3,000 more to commence operations, this and the purchase money making the total of £16,000; £6,000 of this money will have to be raised by the 30th of September, 1873, the remainder at a £1,000 per year. The North Stafford men are taking up shares with a spirit, one lodge having taken up 1,000 shares, and on this lodge is the nearest one to the purchased plant, thus showing the confidence of the men in the undertaking. We hope Sir, the miners of this district will be alive to their own interest and make the enterprise successful, the shares are £1 each, open to all and can be paid by instalments. the shares can be paid to the Secretaries at the Lodge, or at the offices at the Corn Exchange, Wakefield, apologising for trespassing so much on your space.

I remain, yours, WM. DENTON.

P.S.—Prospectuses will be out in a short time.

EDUCATION IN ROTHWELL.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—On Wednesday evening, July 22, a meeting of the Wesleyan Sunday School Trustees was held, presided over by the Rev. J. Rhodes, Superintendent-Minister. Among other matters Day-School Education was brought forward and freely discussed, and although it was long thought desirable that provision for the higher class of the education of the children belonging to Wesleyan parents, the conclusion arrived at, was that the evils of Sectarian Education, as recently exhibited in our village and elsewhere, were so manifest, that it would be for the benefit of our community, that neither Wesleyan no any other church should have a monopoly in the work of "the education of children." Further also, as the sentiment was that all children shall receive an education, it is the duty of all sects, and no sect to share in the burden which such a decree imposes and is of opinion that their parents should have and responsibility should rest upon either established church or dissenters. A comic paper's cartoon, this week has "The Bull Dog" Sectarianism fighting with the "muscular Christianity" of Rugby, and that whilst this fight is going on, our poor children will be sadly neglected. Let us be wiser than that and unitedly push forward a School Board for Rothwell, which shall offer the great boon of a good education to everybody's child, not because their parents go to church or chapel, but because it is the child's birthright by law established.

YOURS, &c., A TRUSTEE.

ROBBERY AT ROTHWELL.

On Thursday, it transpired in the town, that about £32, the property of the Rothwell branch of the Miners' Association, had been stolen from the house of Wm. Smith, the treasurer.

Smith had, on Monday, paid £6 out of the lodge money, and put it back in a small box which safe was kept in a locked drawer; and he and his family went to the Woodlesford Flower Show, leaving the house in care of two of his children. On Thursday afternoon, he went to the drawer in question, and found it had been broken open and the box with the money taken.—Immediate information was given to the police, who have found the box, but have as yet, no clue to the delinquent.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

TWENTY-EIGHT DAYS' SALE !!

R. J. SMEETON AND CO.,

Have much pleasure in informing their friends and the public generally, that they have PURCHASED FOR CASH, by Private Treaty, at little more than half the original cost from the well-known and old-established firm of Messrs. C. HEGELER, Jun., and Co., of Briggate, Leeds, the whole of their RICH and VALUABLE STOCK of Silks, Fancy Dress Materials, Costumes, Skirts, Shawls, Furs, Gloves, Hosiery, Laces, Sunshades, Ribbons, Trimmings, Haberdashery, and Mourning Goods. C. P., Jun., and Co., having decided to relinquish these departments.

The whole of the Goods are marked in plain figures, and now ready for sale, at such prices as must effect a speedy clearance.

R. J. S. and Co., will at the same time make their ANNUAL SUMMER CLEARANCE SALE of SURPLUS STOCK, when LARGE REDUCTIONS will be made in all Departments.

They call particular attention to the following :—

Black and Coloured Silks, 55-in. Yokohama Poplins, Silk Velvets, Fancy Dress Materials, Home-Spun Cheviot Cloths, Cashmeres and Velvet, Mantles, Richly-embroidered Mantles, Linen and Materiol Costumes, Polonaises, French Millinery Hats, Sunshades, Laces, and Fancy Goods, Trimmings, Lace, Leno and Muslin Curtains, Sheetings, Calicos, Towellings, &c. Also a SPECIAL LINE IN RIBBON VELVETS.

THE TWO STOCKS combined are so LARGE that it is impossible to particularise them, but the character of the Goods being so well known, it requires no remarks from R. J. S. and Co., to commend them to the notice of the public, as they feel assured that this will be to their customers the most advantageous Sale they have held.

Remnants and Odd Dress Lengths will be offered on FRIDAYS ONLY during the sale.

WOODHOUSE AND OULTON MECHANICS INSTITUTE.—Art Night Class.—The following students in this class have passed in the recent examinations by the Science and Art Department, South Kensington. Science, subject III (building construction)—First class (Queen's prize), Walter Lockwood; 1st second class, Alfred Ladgstaffe and Herbert Lockwood; freehand, Miss E. J Lucas, Joseph Craven, and Alfred Langstaffe; perspective, W. Lockwood. Considering that the school was only established about six months previous to the examination, the encouraging results above quoted afford satisfactory evidence of the care and attention of the teacher, Mr. Wm. Craven—and of the diligence of his pupils, and it is hoped that when the class re-opens in October for the winter session, more will avail themselves of the advantages offered to students under this department.

We are glad to learn that William Wright son of our fellow-townsman, Mr. Joseph Wright, has gained the first prize for classin the upper third class of the Leeds Grammer School. He received his education under Mr. Nicholson, at the Rothwell National School.

Has proved an invaluable and agreeable restorative to persons suffering from general debility and loss of appetite.
GOODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE.
For purity and strength it stands pre-eminent.
GOODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE
Extract from the Food Journal, April 1, 1873:—"Sample of Goodall's Orange Quinine Wine examined, we find that it contains the proper proportion of Quinine. Being an honest and useful preparation, it must receive our complete approbation."
GOODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE.
By Arthur Hill Hassall, M.D., December, 1871.—"I have tested this unique drink, and recommend it for its purity. It forms an excellent Tonic, is free from Mineral acid, while the flavour of both the Orange and Quinine is plainly perceptible."
GOODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE
Invaluable in all cases of Despondency, Lassitude, Exhaustion, Loss of strength, Functional Derangement, and will restore our complete appetite."
GOODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE
Makes the weak strong.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.
CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually cures Fevers and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
From Lord FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December 1868.
Mr. Davenport, and has from that time to the present constantly had it in his house, and has found it the most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half-a-dozen bottles sent as soon as the above address."
"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of which was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, 1st December 1864.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor SIR W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, FREEMAN, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 14th July 1864.
Sold in Bottles at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d and 11s each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

LAYING OF THE FOUNDATION STONE OF A NEW WESLEYAN CHAPEL AT LEE MOOR.

The foundation stone of a New Wesleyan Methodist Chapel was laid on Saturday afternoon last, at Lee Moor, near Stanley, by Mr. Charles Wells, Sheriff of Hull, and an exceedingly pleasant and interesting afternoon and evening were spent. The interesting afternoon and evening were spent. The ceremony was briefly stated by Acts which have led to the erection of the new place of worship as follows: For some time past, some Sunday School accommodation has been much needed, and it was at first proposed to erect urgently needed, and it was at first proposed to erect a new Sunday School. The Chapel, however, was then deemed to be large enough, and it was thought that if more ample provision could be made, the work of the Wesleyan Body in the district could be greatly increased. It transpired during the course of the proceedings that the worthy gentleman who had the management of the work, had himself contributed the main instigator of the work. He had mooted the question whether on a visit at Mr. Cookson's when he and Mr. Cookson had previously been associated with the Chapel. Here first became acquainted with the Chapel. Here first became acquainted with the Chapel. Here first became acquainted

TRADE DISPUTES.

STRIKE AT PENRHYN SLATE QUARRIES.

There is no prospect of the strike at these extensive quarries speedily terminating. No reply has been received from Lord Penrhyn, and as a mass meeting held by the men on strike, orders were given to the men to leave the neighbourho d at once to seek employment elsewhere. There was quite a stampede from the meeting. The Amalgamated North Wales Quarrymen's Union have since held a meeting at Bangor, and it is stated they resolved to support this movement, and will assist Lord Penrhyn by building public cottages in the principal English Leeds Gentlemen at the Bar met on Monday morning, to receive the Borough Members, the Vicar, the Mayor, &c., &c.

SETTLEMENT OF THE COLLIERY STRIKE AT OVER DARWEN.—The dispute between the operative colliers and their former employers has been amicably adjusted. Private meetings have been held during the week, and the result is that the men have agreed to go in at a reduction of 7½ per cent.; they would go in at this reduction, the company to find all working tools, and the colliers to find their own candles. If all take measured three cuts per week, and house coal at 8s. 2½. All knobsticks 6d. per cut, and house coal at 8s. 2½. All knobsticks to work at No. 3 pit. About 300 Cornwall miners will remain with the old hands who will agree to work.

STRIKE IN THE BUILDING TRADE AT POSTEFRACT.—On Saturday morning upwards of sixty brick layers and bricklayers' labourers left work, the master builders in Pontefract left work, refusing to start unless the time for commencing work in future is altered to eight in the morning, instead of six, as at present. The men held a meeting on Friday evening, and decided to cease work on the Saturday, thus allowing them no reasonable chance to procure other hands. The masters refuse to comply with the wish of the men, and the strike is therefore likely to continue, although the building trade in Pontefract was never better than at present. The complete stress being in course of session at the west end of the town

PROPOSED FURTHER REDUCTION IN THE DURHAM MINERS WAGES.—The colliery owners of the county of Durham have resolved to reduce the wages of the miners by 20 per cent. They are willing to leave the matter to arbitration, should the men be indisposed to continue work at the reduction. Though not altogether unexpected, this step has stirred up a bitter feeling among the miners, and it is very likely to result in another strike. Notices were served at all the collieries on Friday evening and Saturday, and most of the men will be laid in the course of the present week at each of the collieries to consider the situation.

MEETING OF MINERS IN GLASGOW.—Mr. Macdonald, M.P., addressed a miners' meeting in Glasgow on monday, advising the men to await the result of the conference in Northumberland and Durham before resolving on a strike against a reduction. He intended asking for a Government inquiry as to the funds collected for colliery explosions.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

For all Diseases affecting the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, and Bowels.

These can be confidently recommended as the most effectual remedy ever discovered for all complaints of a scrofulous character, and for debility from whatever cause arising. They do not disturb the system, or weaken the frame, but thoroughly purify the blood, and give tone to the stomach, liver, and kidneys, stimulate the kidneys to such a degree as to restore them to healthy action, and act upon the whole system in such a manner as to remove the disease, however deep-seated or long standing it may be.

Diseases peculiar to Women.

There is no medicine equal to Holloway's Pills for correcting the irregularities peculiar to females in every rank of life. They may be taken with confidence by females of every constitution, as they may be taken without the knowledge of any person, guided by the directions which accompany each box, or may be taken under the direction of the celebrated Professor of Medicine throughout the World. Each box contains directions for obtaining disease, purifying the Blood, and expelling from the system all gross humours.

Weakness, Languor, and Debility.

These Pills are especially adapted to every case of debility, however it may have originated, whether from intemperance, the effects of climate, or the consequences of imprudence. They will be found to act like magic in restoring the wasted energies of the system, and will impart health and vigour to the whole frame.

Blotches, Sores, Ulcers, and Abscesses.

Holloway's Pills should be used in every family, and a few doses will prevent the slightest attack of fever, ague, bowel complaints, &c. Indeed, if their virtues were more generally known, they would be found a safeguard against the most malignant forms of disease which prevail at certain seasons of the year.

Bilious Complaints, Sick Headache, Loss of Appetite, and Irregularities of Spirits.

These Pills are recommended to persons subject to bilious attacks, as a mild aperient, which may be taken with safety and advantage at any time, without making any alteration in diet, and are suited to all climates, and to persons of every age.

The Kidneys—Their Derangement and Cure.

The Pills and Ointment are sold at Professor Holloway's Establishment, 244, Strand, London; also by nearly all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the Civilized World, at the following prices:—Pots at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each. There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes. Purchasers should be careful to observe the address of Professor Holloway, 244, Strand, London, between Temple Bar and Somerset House, as spurious imitations may be offered for sale in the name of Holloway, or with some trifling variation, so as to deceive the unwary.

No. 11—4.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Weak Stomachs.—The wisest cannot enumerate one tithe of the distressing symptoms arising from enfeebled digestion; all of which forms may be readily dispelled by these admirable Pills. They remove all unpleasant feelings from the moment they commence their salutary influence. Heiths together with freshness and complexion. Holloway's Pills raise the stomach, liver, and every other organ of digestion to that healthy tone which fully the stomach to receive all food and drink to the nourishment of the body. Hence these Pills are the surest strengtheners and the safest restoratives in nervousness, wasting and alt-side debility. Holloway's Pills are infallible remedies for impaired appetites, exhaustion, and the multitude of other diseases, constitutional and local, however complicated or formidable symptoms, which hitherto have baffled the skill of thousands. Their virtues are known by all classes

District Police Intelligence.

DRUNKARDS AT MUDDLEY.—John Lewis and Joseph Howson, labourers, were charged by Police-constable Gill, with having been drunk and riotous in the case, by Junction, on the 25th ult. In stating the case, the Officer showed that the defendants are violent characters, and the police recently remanded their wives were no arrangement in the dock. The wives of the respective defendants loquaciously pleaded their husbands' cause, but the Bench inflicted a fine of 10s. and 6s. costs in each case.

MUSHROOM-SEEKING AT LOFTHOUSE.—A man named Samuel Wilson, a collier, living at Newton Lane Head, was charged with having on Tuesday, the 4th instant, unlawfully trespassed on land belonging to Mr. Richard Sidwell farmer, which is in the occupation of Mr. Joseph Sidwell farmer, Lofthouse. The Bench inflicted a fine with costs amounting to 20s., with the alternative of seven days' imprisonment.

THE SWEETS OF REVENGE; OR, THE STORY OF A SPEIGHT.—Walter and Ann Speight, a miner and SPEIGHT. be at sworn in for the borough, for having his wife, of Methley, were summoned for having committed upon Elizabeth Eastwood, also a miner, living in the same row of houses. On behalf of Eastwood, it was contended that about eight weeks' ago the complainant's child was bitten by Speight's dog, the complainant's child was bitten by Speight's dog. The child's father demanded that the animal be destroyed, but the owner objected, hence he was the object of the malicious feeling of the defendants for some time, and the upshot was that an engine was set on the hatch, who ordered the dog to be destroyed. Then the ill-feeling arose to a high pitch, and it was alleged that the latter facts were continued in terms not the most endearing. After this contest had proceeded for some time, the plaintiff was struck several times by the male defendant, and the wife, after taunting Speight for some time, "slapped him in the face." A struggle took place between the men and it was alleged that Speight "grabbed" Eastwood's finger between his teeth, and bit it very severely. Several witnesses were then called on behalf of the defendants, and their assertions, of course, entirely modified the version given by the complainant. Eastwood, they contended with unbridled voice, was the aggressor, and deserved what he got. The Bench fined the Speights 2s., and 12s. costs.

ACCIDENT IN A COLLIERY AT METHLEY.—On Wednesday morning a collier, named Benjamin Morley, aged 53 years of age, living at Methley Junction, and who is in the employment of Messrs. Briggs, Brown & Co., was in the Ironstone Colliery, had his left leg severely fractured by the fall of a large lump of coal on it. He was removed to the Leeds Infirmary, and it was unfortunately found necessary to amputate the leg below the knee.

OUR COMMERCIAL PROSPECTS.

This is a season of the year when the merchant as well as the agriculturist takes stock of his present position, and estimates the prospects of the future. He watches the rise and fall of the markets, studies the foreign exchanges, and feels the pulse of interest, for any alteration in the minimum rate of discount allowed by the Band of England. To the uninitiated the way in which these things work is an unfathomable mystery. They cannot understand how a knot of men who are accustomed to assemble and meet together in a little area known as the Stock Exchange, should have it in their power to raise or to depreciate the value of securities which are worth an untold amount of money. As a matter of fact, they have no such power. They are simply the agents and instruments in carrying out the working economic laws which are as unalterable as are the ways of the stars in their courses. It will suit the capitalist nothing to cry "Peace!" when there is no peace, and to shut his eyes to facts which are as palpable as the shining of the sun at noon-day. There was a memorable instance in half-a-generation ago, of the irresistible action of important events upon the prices of public securities. On the 1st of January, 1809, the late Emperor Napoleon, then one of the puissant Sovereigns in Europe, received the Ambassadors of other nations, as was his custom on New Year's Day. To the representative of Austria he spoke a few words which the ambassador construed into a declaration of war. The words were flashed by telegraph to London, to Vienna, to St. Petersburgh, to Berlin, and to every town possessing a Stock Exchange or a Bourse, and by nightfall the various securities held in the European markets were worth a hundred millions sterling less than in the morning. People rushed in all directions to sell out everything which was at all of a doubtful character, and the power or no man or of no body of men would have restored the value of that which had become depreciated in public opinion.

How does Great Britain stand at present so far as her trading and commercial prospects are concerned? The question is a weighty one as affecting any country, but it doubly important to a people whose marts are filled with merchandise, and whose ships float upon every sea. First, then, let us take a glance at the top-stone of the fabric, and momentarily contrast the situation with that of the two European countries which are separated by the grim range of the Pyrenees. We have a settled form of Government, and one which, in the presence of many a severe strain, has stood the test of centuries. If the clang of arms were to echo through the land to-morrow, the inhabitants of these islands would never dream of overturning the Throne in the presence of an invading army. This, then, is one advantage, and one source of national confidence. People buy and sell, and invest their capital in enterprises of varied magnitude without fear that in cases of disturbance, a time-worn institution will come tumbling down about their ears. In one of the crushing defeats sustained by Prussia at the hands of France early in the present century, when the fortunes of the day were gone beyond retrieval, the first thought of the Prussian soldiers was not their own safety, but the safety of their King who was upon the field of battle. They closed round the beaten Sovereign like a phalanx of steel, and prevented his capture by the advancing and victorious foe. And in one supposes that in case of national misfortune, we should follow the example set by the Parisians four years ago, and visit the sins of the people upon the head of the Sovereign by pronouncing a sentence of deposition. The confidence of capitalists of all nations in the permanence of our institutions is one great reason why such trust is placed in the steadiness of our finance. They bring us their money for investment, or pay us a good rate of interest, if we lend them ours, because they believe that the mass of the people are steadfast in their adhesion to fixed and recognised principles, and because they know that there will be neither civil war nor internecine strife over a new form of Government.

CRICKET.

LOFTHOUSE versus WOODLESFORD.

Played on Saturday, on the ground of the latter, the Lofthouse team went to the wickets, and made 102 runs. For Woodlesford, Inman and Trueman were first at the wickets, after scoring 23 runs, they attempted a run for a ball played to a fielder, and Trueman was run out. The Woodlesford team objected to the decision of the Lofthouse Umpire, and said they would not continue the game unless the Lofthouse players changed their Umpire. This they declined to do, and left the ground, the following is the score as far as the match went:—

Lofthouse—F. Lazenby, 10; J. Armitage, 0; J. H. Lee, 0; T. Hammond, not out, 30; J. Charlesworth, Esq., 19; A. Atkinson, 0; W. Newsholme, 0; C. Cooper, 0; W. Crowther, 8; W. Atkinson, 0; G. Armitage, 2; extras, 11; total, 102.

Woodlesford—Inman, not out, 13; J. Trueman, 10; total for one wicket, 23.

LOFTHOUSE 2ND ELEVEN versus ROTHWELL.

This match was play ed on Saturday, on the ground of the latter.

Lofthouse Third Eleven.—Geo. Wild, 4; S. th Ward, 0; T. Watson, 2; W. Lite, 8; John Flower, 0; W. Flower, 5; W. Old stestone, 3; H. Whittle-tone, 3; J. Armitage, 5; J. Fox, not out, 3; extras, 0; total 36.

Rothwell—J. Stead, 4; W. Brear, 4; A. F. Green, 4; W. Kirkhouse, 1; C. Sharpe, 0; Lazenby, 8; W. not out

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

Owing to there being only two members of the Board present on Monday, the meeting was adjourned to Thursday,

In the absence of Mr. Charlesworth, Mr. Dickinson was elected to fill the chair.

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the first business was a letter from Mr. Bromet, enclosing the agreement for the Sterroid Well Water supply, signed by Lord Scarbrough and Mr. Smith, and also handing his bill of charges, amounting to £2 3s. 2d. After some objections, it was eventually decided that the above amount be paid, with a protest against a charge for writing a letter to Mr. Stephenson on the subject.

Mr. Smith expressed a wish that some means might be arranged whereby he would be able to have a small tap from the pipes on his own premises.

Dr. Heaps, Medical Officer, having entered the room, stated that there were no fresh cases of fever at Thwaitegate, and that the general condition of the district was healthy. He recommended the Board to obtain some carbolic chloride of lime for the drains. He also assured the Board that the most important requisite in t e district, was a plentiful and wholesome supply of water, and trusted the waiting heap, at Helen's feet.

Catch her, John, the doctor cried, as Helen lifted both hands to her throat.

One convulsive struggle, and the life-blood gushed from her lips over the snowy breast and down the white dress. Then she turned to any part of the United Kingdom.

WHOLESALE DEALERS IN COUNTERFEIT Coin.—At the Central Criminal Court, London, on Monday, Dennis Kent, (52), carpenter, Alexander Brewer, (41), Henry Hughes, (52), and Sarah Kite, (37), were convicted of having in their possession a large quantity of counterfeit coin with intent to utter the same. Mr Crawford prosecuted. Evidence was given by Agar, the warder of the City Prison, that Kent and Reede were notorious utterers of counterfeit coin, and had been previously convicted and sentenced to penal servitude. The Common Serjeant sentenced Kent on Reede to fifteen years' penal servitude and five years' supervision of the police. Hughes was sentenced to five years' penal servitude, and Kite to twelve months' hard labour. The learned judge at the same time complimented the city officers Westwood, Downes, Haines, and Ullister for the way in which they had detected the prisoners. The jury said that they were of the same opinion with regard to the prisoners, and thought they deserved great credit for their exertions.

THE NEW SHARLSTON COLLIERIES COMPANY, (LIMITED).—On Tuesday, an extraordinary general meeting of the directors and shareholders of this above company (whose mining property is situated near Wakefield), was held at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon Street, London, to receive the report and accounts of the directors, and to declare a dividend. Admiral Hornby, the chairman of the company, presided, and there was a very large attendance of shareholders, from Bradford, Leeds, Halifax, Wakefield, and other parts of Yorkshire, and the proceedings, which lasted several hours, where of a very satisfactory character. The report stated that upon the whole of the collieries there was a gross profit of £11,702 18s. 10d., from which would be deducted interest on mortgage and Local charges, leaving the net balance of £8,30 0s. 3d., out of which the directors recommended an interim dividend on the preference shares at the rate of 5 per cent per annum. A noisy discussion ensued, and finally, on the motion of Mr. Gould, which was seconded by Mr Mey, a committee was formed requesting the board of directors to appoint a committee of five gentlemen—Messrs Wilson (Wakefield), Aspinall (Halifax), Hollings (Wakefield) and Booth and Mey (London), to confer with them on the best method of reducing the working expenses, and generally advising as to the best plan of improving the management of the New Sharlston Collieries Company. The resolution was carried, and the meeting shortly after closed.

Several workmen were on Tuesday engaged in repairing the roof of a large shed at Bradford, when a large portion of it gave way, and the men were pretty fairly tried to the ground. Several were rather seriously injured.

William Jackson was executed at York on Tuesday morning, for the murder of his sister. During the night he made a full confession.

Robert Young Marsden, a stockbroker's clerk, residented at the Central Criminal Court on Tuesday, on a charge of publishing a libel concerning the Erie Railway Company. The prosecutor is the Union Bank, the Company's London agents, stating that the directors were receiving stock for a discriminating purpose. The defendant pleaded guilty, and tendered an apology, which was accepted on his entering into recognisances to appear for judgment when called upon.

Three children were burned to death on Tuesday morning, at a fire in a narrow lane off Chandos-street, London.

The great autumnal Birmingham horse show was opened on Tuesday, when a fine lot of horses were exhibited. The Judges (Lords Lifford) were very successful in their large share of the judges' awards.

The action for libel brought by the liquidator of the Liverpool Civil Service Supply Association against the Liverpool Leader, concluded on Tuesday, a verdict for the plaintiff; damages, £2,000.

A railway accident occurred at East-road, on Tuesday morning. A goods train was being shunted into a siding, but the siding was too short for it, and a portion of the train remained on the main line. Before it could be drawn out, an excursion train came into collision with the projecting portion of the goods train. Several persons are slightly injured.

The half-yearly meeting of the Midland Railway Company was held at Derby on Tuesday. Mr Ellis, the chairman, presided; and moved the adoption of the report. After some discussion and explanations from the chairman, the report was unanimously adopted.

An accountant who has been going through the books of the Norfolk and Norwich Building Society, has estimated the defalcations of Joseph Buttiffant, the late secretary, at £17,000.

The King of Denmark again landed at Leith, from the Jylland, on Tuesday morning, and drove to Edinburgh in the King, Prince Waldemar, and the Princess of Wales drove to the seat of the Earl of Hopetoun in the after noon. An address will be presented to his Majesty (through the District Council) by the Leith Town Council.

At Malton, on Tuesday, a farm labourer was sent to prison for one month for shocking cruelty to a horse by beating the animal's tongue.

Another case of kicking to death is reported from Manchester—a son having, according to the statement of our correspondent, rushed at his mother and kicked her so severely that she died within five hours.

Yet another brutal kicking case is reported from Preston, a man named James O'Neill having, according to the evidence already given, deliberately kicked a little boy six years old in the abdomen. It is feared he will be a cripple for life. The case was adjourned in order to allow time for the boy to gain a little strength.

The Mersey Dock Board have signified their intention of holding the Gas Company responsible for the recent fire at the landing stage.

The Governor-General of Canada has paid a visit to Lisbon, and been entertained by the Chicago Board of Trade. In a speech, his lordship said England and Canada desire to extend their relations with the United States. Neither imagined that a one-sided treaty was desirable or possible or possible, and it was his earnest wish to promote the joint interest of the contresting parties. The Earl's speech was well received.

The North German Gazette says, it learns that in the next few days the leaders of the Ultramontane party will hold a meeting at Geneva. Prominent members of the Centre party, Bishop Ketteler and Prince Jaime have already arrived in that city, and several French Ultramontanes have ordered apartments there.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE AT METHLEY BRIDGE.

A man of about middle age, who gave the name of Joseph Morris, and represented that he was a power-loom weaver, on trains in quest of employment, was on Wednesday afternoon last, placed in the dock at the West-riding Police Court, Wakefield, (before S. G. Leatham, Esq'), upon a charge of having attempted to commit suicide on the the previous day, the 18th instant, by throwing himself into the River Aire, from the centre of the Methley Bridge, a distance of twenty feet! The poor fellow's sunken cheeks, the peculiarly weird expression of his eyes, indeed the generally emaciated and worn condition of both his frame and attire bespoke not only extreme destitution, but, one might naturally infer, a slight degree of dementation, and this proved to be the case. P.-C. Shaw, of Whitwood, here stated, that about three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, he received information that a man had attempted to commit suicide. Some boatmen, who had been coming up the river, had seen him leap from the centre of the bridge into the stream; and he would doubtless have been drowned, but as they were almost immediately on the spot, he, upon their approach, swam to the side of the river and got out. He had thrown himself off at least twenty feet. When these men secured him, he appeared to be more dead than alive, and could not speak. He was taken to the police station and locked up. During the time Shaw told his statement the poor fellow stood with his head hanging on his breast and his hands tightly clasped, and when asked what he had to say he faintly ejaculated: "I was tired of myself, seeing myself in such a state, and I was so low-spirited, because everyone in the world was against me, that I was the reason. Some one was shouting out after me—they drove me to it, or else I would not have done it." It having been stated that no one was near the prisoner at the time, the magistrate thought the best course would be to remand him to gaol until Friday, in order that witnesses might be summoned and his mental condition examined into in the meantime. He was accordingly removed under the care of the police to the Wakefield Prison.

ROTHWELL WATER SCHEME.

We are glad to find that the small, though valuable improvement in our water supply was duly commenced on Monday morning, and is progressing very favorably.

Now that the line is cut from the Sterroid well to Church well, the vast advantage which will be obtained is more observable, and if a tank is made for the storing of the over-flow, a good, and we may almost say, never-failing supply of the best water will be secured.

One thing we exceedingly deplore, and are greatly surprised at, and that it the very, very little assistance rendered to the scheme by those who might very materially diminish the cost by a half-day's labour, which would thus stand as a good subscription.

No one will be so greatly benefitted by the improved supply as our working men, and we trust more of them will take an interest in the work, and when they have a loose day, give a few hours for their own benefit, and the benefit of the town.

THE CRISIS IN SOUTH WALES.

An important conference took place on Wednesday at Cardiff, between the coalowners and men, with respect to the reduction of 10 per cent., which is to come into force on the 1st of September. The men submitted to their delegates that the reduction should be withdrawn, but the coalowners entered into a lengthy statement showing that it was necessitated by the state of trade, and promised that they would before resolving upon another reduction, call the men together, and explain matters to them. The result has not been well received, and should the answer sent be unfavourable, a total paralysis of the coal and iron trade of South Wales will follow.

THE BELFAST STRIKE.—The British Association Conference at Belfast has been the means of bringing to a termination the great strike and lock-out of linen operatives in that town.

The quarrymen on strike in North Wales now ask that either their original demands shall be conceded, or that Lord Penrhyn shall dismiss the two chief managers as a condition precedent to further negotiations as to the scale of pay.

The members of the Sheffield police force are moving for an increase of wages.

Between four and five hundred farm labourers left Liverpool for Canada on Wednesday morning, in the Ontario.

A new association is about to be set on foot by Evangelical Churchmen and Dissenters of various denominations, to be called the "United Protestant Alliance," and to have for its object the banding together of the great evangelical element of the nation, the consolidation of Protestants against all Romanising teachings, and the protection of Protestant interests in all Parliamentary questions.

Five men lost their lives at the Barrow Colliery, Bryncethin, on Wednesday morning, by a stage giving way and falling with them into 25 feet of water.

A telegram from Falmouth announces the arrival there of the steamer Winslow, of Liverpool, bound for Hueneme, disabled. An explosion occurred on Monday night, about eight miles from the Lizard. Two firemen were killed.

SAVAGE ASSAULT AT HULL.—At the Hull Police court on Wednesday, Abraham Thompson, a seaman, was committed for trial for murderously assaulting Phœbe Smith, his paramour. Some time ago Thompson pushed Smith into the Hull Docks. She was rescued and taken to the Infirmary, where he said that she promised to tell the magistrates that she jumped in herself. A few days ago in Hull, the prisoner savagely stabbed her. She was again taken to the Infirmary, and there disclosed the whole story.

Next Monday is fixed as the day for a double execution, the co ictsbeing Henry Fanaghan and Mary Smith ans.

BREWSTER SESSIONS.

TRANSGRESSORS BEFORE THE BENCH.

Mr. Ian-on intimated that the business would be to call upon those to appear in answer to their names who had been specially noticed to be present, owing to their having been convicted of offences against the law. The ale-house keepers were then first brought up in the following order:—

OLD HALF-WAY HOUSE, LOFTHOUSE.—Mr. Thomas Birkenshaw, of the Old Half-way House, Lofthouse, when called upon did not answer and a fine of 5s. was consequently imposed. As he did not appear, the date and ground of his conviction was not stated.

UNICORN INN, CARLTON.—Edward Wright landlord of the Unicorn Inn, Carlton, was convicted on the 20th of July, 1871, and fined expenses, 8s. 6d. Mr. Superintendent Hall said he had nothing to say against the defendant as to his subsequent conduct at home. The fine imposed seemed to have acted as a caution to him, since there had been no subsequent report.

MEXBRO' ARMS, METHLEY.—Richard Matthews landlord of the Mexbro' Arms, Methley, was once, when called upon did not answer to the justices, and ordered to pay expenses for misconduct.

JOHN O'GAUST, ROTHWELL.—Mr. Thos. Laverick, of the John O'Gaust, Rothwell, was convicted on the 4th of May, and fined 20s. and 8s. costs. Mr. Hall stated that he had conducted the house very well since his last appearance in court. The Chairman: You see if you had not been convicted, you would have had no occasion to come here to-day. I hope we shall not see you next year —good morning,—(laughter).

APPLICATIONS.

THE HALF-WAY INN, CARLTON.—Mr. John Ledgard landlord of the Half-way Inn, Carlton, applied for a spirit license, in addition to that which he at present holds. Mr. Wainwright appeared on his behalf.—It was urged that this house had for a very considerable time not only enjoyed the privilege of retailing beer, and that, as it is situate at the junction of the roads from Rothwell to Ardsley, the fact of its being licensed was of general importance. Since the last application was sufficient; the tenant's character was good; there was frequent application for wines and spirits; and a numerously signed requisition in favour of the applicant's behalf.—The Bench, however, who voted by ballot, refused the license.

THE ROSEBUD INN, CARLTON.—Mr. Benjamin Oldroyd, landlord of this Inn, also made a similar application, Mr. Gill, on his behalf, urging that, as former appearances at the Brewster Sessions had borne no fruit, his client now entered court in the hope that the Rosebud would from that day burst forth with bloom, and flourish as a full-grown flower.—Mr. Wainwright stated that he was retained by Mr. John Oldroyd, landlord of the Half-way Inn, and applicant's brother, to oppose the license; and after a little parrying between the legal gentlemen, the Bench refused this license also.

THE COMMERCIAL HOTEL, METHLEY.—Mr. Joseph Morton Waring, of the Commercial Hotel, Methley, next applied for a spirit license.—Mr. Gill, appeared on his behalf, and Mr. Wainwright opposed.—The Justices considered that there was no urgent necessity for an extended sale of spirits in Methley, and refused the license.

WOODLESFORD & DISTRICT FLORAL SOCIETY.

The last Committee Meeting of the above Society took place on Monday, the 24th, at the house of Mr. Craven, Woodlesford, when the success of the late Exhibition was celebrated by a dinner and social gathering.

The large and well appointed lodge-room was gaily decorated with flags and baskets of flowers, suspended from the roof; at the further end of the room, a profusion of well-chosen flowers and ferns from Mr. Craven, had been tastefully arranged, and added greatly to the pleasing surroundings of the festive board.

Dinner was announced shortly after 7, when about 30 sat down to discuss the liberal provision before them, to which ample justice was done; there were three courses, commencing with salmon, followed with roast beef, ducks, boiled veal, fowl, ham, &c., &c.; and concluding with plum pudding, fruit pies, &c.

The expenses of the dinner were borne entirely by the Committee, not a farthing being used of the society's money.

On the cloth being removed the customary plinch bowls were set in the head and bottom of the table, and glasses filled. During a pro tem engagement, the president, (Mr. Bentley, Esq.), was unavoidably absent. The chair was occupied by Mr. H. R. Smith. The vice-chair was occupied by Mr. Turner, vice-chairman of the Committee.

The toast of "The Queen" was drunk with acclamation. Mr. Smith, having called on the Secretary, Mr. R. A. Flint, to read the report, the following items were given among others:—

Amount of Subscriptions,	£137	6 0
Money taken at the gate,	76	14 3
Received from other sources	14	4 6
Total receipts ...	£228	4 9

After all prizes and other expenses had been paid, including a present of £5 to Mr. Flint for his strenuous voluntary services as Secretary, there was a balance of about £12 to the credit of the society.

Following such a highly satisfactory balance sheet, the cup went merrily round to the toasts which were given, beginning with "Success to the Woodlesford, Oulton, and Swillington, and District Horticultural Society," by Mr. Smith, the chairman, who congratulated the society on some present position. Mr. Craven proposed the health of Henry Bentley, Esq., our worthy president, "to whose kindness and influence the committee is so deeply obligated." Mr. Townend, of Newsam Green, Leeds, moved the health of Mr. Smith, treasurer of the society, and our present chairman, to which "that gentleman responded: and in giving the health of Mr. Smith, vice-chairman, spoke of the great services he had rendered to the society. Mr. Turner returned thanks, and was glad to testify to the unanimity which had existed in the committee and general meetings he had presided. Mr. Jollyman had very great pleasure in giving the health of the secretary, Mr. Flint,* to whose exertions and courtesy they were so much indebted. Mr. Flint, in responding, expressed his pleasure in meeting the committee on this last occasion and especially under such favourable circumstances. He was greatly obliged to each committee-man, and was sure his only desire had been to make the show a success. If the committee wished him to take the office of secretary next year, he should be most happy to do his best. Before sat down, Mr. Flint had much pleasure in proposing the "successful exhibitors": Mr. Dunlop, (gardener to Captain Douglas), and Mr. Metcalf, (gardener to Mr. Newsam), being the largest prize-takers, responded to the toast. Mr. R. J. Smith proposed "the Vice-presidents coupling with the toast, the health of Mr. J. Nicholas', Mr. Nickols replied, apologizing for his absence from meeting, but hoping to do more another year.

Amid much amusement, Mr. Smith proposed the committee. Mr. Amber Flint drank the health of Mrs. Bentley, through whose interest, many visitors had been attracted, and for giving extra prizes.

Mr. Kirkbride gave "the Press," coupling with it the health of Mr. Sheard: he was glad they were now possessed of a local organ, as, had the Rothwell Times and Methley News not been established, their present proceedings would have remained unknown to the public. Mr. Marshall replied, and in thanking the company for their kindness in speaking of him, was glad that his endeavours for the advancement of intelligence were appreciated. Although a very humble member of the press, he was proud to claim any connection with a power so great, and trusted the Rothwell Times and Methley News would be the means of spreading information, of diminishing crime, and of raising the intelligence and character of the community. He wished to propose the "unsuccessful exhibitors," trusting that though they were foiled this year, they will try again at the next exhibition.

Mr. E. A. Flint proposed the extra prize givers": Messrs. Law, Nelson, Allison and Bentley. Mr. Jollyman gave the health of Mr. Davis, who had not only worked hard, but had been the means of obtaining favors from Mr. Bentley. Mr. Davis responded, and from Mr. Bentley. Mr. Davis responded, and gave the health of Messrs. Purdy and Freshwater, who had kindly improved the show by sending collections (not for competition.)—Both gentlemen suitably replied.

The "health of the host and hostess' was the last toast, which was most heartily given, the dinner being not only varied, but carefully cooked, and served in the best style by the landlord of the evening. The present in an agreeable manner, and the party broke up at 11 o'clock.

The following gentlemen were present—Mr. J. Nickols, Vice-President; Mr. R. R. Smith, Treasurer; Mr. W. Turner, Vice-Chairman; Messrs. Townend, Mellor, Ireman, H. Morton, Smith, Casburn, Purdy, Jos. Craven, Davis, Owen, McWilliam, T. Craven, Freshwater, Jollyman, J. Brown, T. Wharton, H. Parlett J. Little, G. Lee, Strafford, Committee; Mr. A. Flint, Assistant Secretary; Mr. E. A. Flint, Secretary, and a few invited friends

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Weak Stomachs.—The wisest cannot enumerate one tithe of the disorders and functions arising from enfeebled digestion, all of which may be readily dispelled by these admirable Pills, which may be readily dispelled by these admirable Pills, which may be readily dispelled by these admirable Pills. They remove all unpleasant tastes from the mouth together with flatulency and constipation. Holloway's Pills give the stomach, liver, and every other organ of digestion, all that healthy tone which fully enables the stomach to convert all food and drink to the nourishment of the body. Hence these Pills are the surest strengtheners and the safest re-storatives in the pharmacopœia, wea ing and chronic debility. Holloway's Pills are infallible remedies for impaired appetite, constipation, and the multitude of other disagreeable symptoms, which render miserable the life of thousands. Their virtues are known by all classes

EXECUTION AT USK.

James Henry Gibbs, a native of Richmond, Surrey, was executed at the County Gaol, Usk, Monmouthshire, on Monday morning, for the murder of his wife, whose maiden name was Sarah Ann Ingram, of St. Helier's, Jersey. The unhappy criminal was butler at Llwynonnen Hall, near Newport. His victim had met a diabolical murder on the 12th of May last, and had her remains in a ditch, which were not discovered until the 3rd of June. The convicted man was the chief if not the only witness against the prisoner. Gibbs's conviction was mainly pointed out. Up to the time of execution he protested his innocence of the crime, and swore it to his father so late as Saturday, and said, "God knows I'm innocent." During the night he slept well, and was heartily in the morning. The executioner was William Haywood, of Horncastle. When the operation of pinioning commenced the prisoner trembled violently, and so to be almost carried to the drop. The apparatus was one used at Monmouth fifteen years ago, and removed from that town to Usk. The criminal read the burial service in an impressive manner. When the prisoner was asked, for the last time, by Colonel Milman, governor, if he had anything to say, he replied, "God bless you all; God forgive me; it is happy for me to know that I die an innocent man." In a few moments the white cap was drawn over the prisoners face, the rope adjusted, the bolt drawn, and the prisoner was launched into eternity. He died almost without a struggle.

In connection with the protestations of innocence in the above case, a rumour is being circulated to the effect that a man named John Rogers, who belonged himself of on Friday near the scene of the murder, which confesses the two events together, and gives a certain amount of plausibility to Gibbs' assertion of innocence.

FATAL COLLIERY EXPLOSION.

Four men, father and son, named Wenvary, and Samuel Williams, were killed on Monday, by an explosion in Messrs. Hepp's colliery, near Hanley. Ruabon. Three were married men, and the fourth a lad. The explosion is supposed to be due to the use of naked lights.

THE EXTRAORDINARY BIGAMOUS CASE AT MACCLESFIELD.

The almost unprecedented details of the Crewe report of which has already appeared—were read in the course on Monday of Mrs. Holdcroft, wife of George Holdcroft, a silk plush and dog dresser of Crewe, and Mr. Bentley, a married man, charging Joseph Bentley with having unlawfully married Mrs. Holdcroft during her husband's lifetime. Bentley lodged with Holdcroft, and becoming enamoured of his wife, induced her to elope with him. Holdcroft, it appears, followed them to Macclesfield, but without success, and left them in the house, but on his return to the room with the church, and it was arranged together that Holdcroft should proceed to Chester Assizes, and therefore prisoner to cheese Assizes.

LOFTHOUSE & WOODLESFORD.

(To the Editor.)

Dear Sir,—Having observed a report of the above in your columns on Saturday last, which I presume to have been inserted by the Lofthouse party, and should be glad if you would allow me space in this week's issue, in order to make a few remarks upon the same, as I think it is calculated to mislead the public to a certain extent. The report states that in attempting a difficult run, "Trueman was run out for 5," but does not in any way allude to what took place previous to this, and it is only fair to all parties concerned that the real facts of the case should be made public. Mr. Jones got out of the way of the ball, Charlesworth's wicket was put down while he was running, and in the opinion of most of the spectators he was "out" but was given "in" by the Lofthouse umpire—to avoid any unpleasantness however, our party made no protest against his decision, and the game proceeded smoothly until Blake was just on 1 bowl slower, one of which Hunter hit to leg and was caught by Dobson, the same umpire however having called "no ball," on its delivery, Hunter continued his inning,—the next ball was likewise termed a "no ball" by the umpire, and this gave rise to a dispute as to the fairness of his decision, during which it became evident that neither the umpire nor any of the Lofthouse players, (amongst whom was a professional of many years standing) really understood the meaning of a "no ball" and could not be convinced of their error, even when shown the rules of the game. I have since written to Mr. Lilywhite on the subject, and received a reply confirming our line of argument, and which states that "the umpire's decision was altogether wrong, and he could have known but little of his business" which I should imagine ought to be convincing to any unprejudiced person. After a deal of unpleasantness, the game was continued until our party had completed their innings, when Trueman was given out in such a palpably unfair manner, that we refused to continue the game if the umpire were retained, our opponents refusing to agree to our request, the game was abandoned. The above is a correct statement of what occurred, as far as I can remember.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
ROBERT J. SMITH, Sec.,
Woodlesford Cricket Club.

In the case of Jay v. Gresham Life Insurance Company, a verdict was returned for plaintiff. The judge's summing up occupied two hours and a half, and the jury took six hours to consider their verdict.

Four men were killed by an explosion at a colliery near Hanley on Monday morning. The explosion was caused by the careless use of naked lights.

On Sunday night or Monday morning, a fire was discovered in the paint stores of the Royal Mail Steampacket Company in the Southampton Docks. It soon spread to the general workings of the company and burst with a serious character. The engines of the borough, the Royal Mail Dock, the South Western Railway Company, and others were soon in attendance, and a large body of naval reserve men were sent from H.M.S. Zealous, but, although the conflagration was soon under control, the fire was not got under for three hours, and until quite half an acre in extent of buildings had been burned to the ground.

An attempt to throw a train off the line has been made at Wellow, on the Somerset and Dorset Railway, about six or seven miles from Bath. Two heavy iron railway metals were placed across the rails of the main line. When the last train came up the engine was violently shaken, but it did not leave the line. It was afterwards found that both ends of one of the rails had been completely cut off where the engine passed over it. The other was driven before the engine a considerable distance, and in its passage swept off the heads of the screws by which the rails were affixed to the sleepers. The company have offered a reward of £100 for the apprehension of the persons who placed the rails on the line.

ESCAPE OF MARSHAL BAZAINE.—Marshal Bazaine has written to the Minister of the Interior declaring that he has no accomplices within the fort, and that he escaped with the aid of his wife and orphan alone. He resented, he says, the insulting regulations of the Central Prisons that were imposed upon him. He also felt justified in endeavouring to recover his freedom, as he had not been tried by his peers and the sentence passed upon him was therefore illegal.

THE WELSH COLLIERS.—The reduction of ten per cent. proposed by the Welsh colliery proprietors is likely to create another strike. Several meetings have been held and a gathering of engineers and stokers, on Thursday, in the Rhondda district, it was resolved not to resume work at the expiration of the fortnight given by the masters except on the present terms.

At the Middlesbrough Borough Police Court, several tradesmen were charged with conveying sugar under unwarrantable circumstances. The case stands adjourned until October 1st, the defendants being released on bail.

The wreck of the steamer Fairholn is reported. Five hands were lost.

The interest of Monday's proceedings at the British Association Conference was principally confined to the lady philosophers, who had quite a field day in the Economic Science Section. Papers were also read in the Geographical, Mechanical Science, Chemical Science, and Geological Sections.

Madrid telegram states from official reports that the Carlists shot one hundred and eighty seven prisoners in one day.

LIVER NERVES.—CURE No. 50,634.—

Of the Marchioness of Bredalbane.—"By consequence of a fever contracted in India, I was left with a liver in a very disordered state, and I have had trouble to read, write, or to talk, owing to my eyes and head being affected. I have taken DR. BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, and have derived more benefit from it than from all the medicines I have ever taken. It has entirely removed every disagreeable symptom, and I am now restored to perfect health. I have much pleasure in recommending it to all sufferers, and will answer any letter with the request of information. (Signed) MARIA, Marchioness of Bredalbane, Taymouth Castle, Perthshire, Nov. 4th, 1872." Can be sent to any address on receipt of 12 stamps. DU BARRY'S excellent REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD,

NOT TO BE DONE.

"And so you could not marry a poor man, Mary?" says Leland, Lambkin? Why, James, what on earth should I do with a poor man's wife? I have never been used to work, don't they?"

Not always, dear. I did not mean such poverty as that exactly. But suppose they have to be a little economical, and do without a great many pretty things at Hedgehog, and do without a great many pretty things that you might think indispensable to your comfort?

"Yes, I know; and they can't go to the opera, or buy a new dress when they want one; but when they pass a shop window shut up their purses ever so tight, and hurry on. Thats what Jenny Jones does, for she told me so herself; and Clara does her own cooking, and minds her own children, and she hasn't bought a new bonnet for a year.

Mary Sweet opened her pretty blue eyes very wide as she recalled the exhilarating point of her distressing as she recalled the exhilarating point of her distressing statements, and raised them to James Morley's face to meet the reassuring expression of horrified pity she expected to find there.

But instead they smiled down at her a little gravely in return.

"And yet Mrs. Jones appears to me to be one of the most cheerful, contented persons I know," he rejoined.

"Why, of course she is — because she has a husband she loves. But, then, she's a real lore—there are few like her."

"Well, look at the bad great misfortunes to bear up under, Mary. It seems to me that my friend Jones has a very cozy, well-appointed little home, and I see no sny evidences of discomfort or neglect when I go there.

Oh, James, everything is very plain and cheap all over—I don't like nice furniture—don't you?

Most people do, dear; but I don't think bamboo furniture, and Brussels carpets, and silk dresses, and theatre going, and new bonnets, are absolutely indispensable to one's happiness—do you?

I am sure I don't know about me, you bad man! But if I do think pretty things, I am not a bit extravagant, and you know it.

Not a bit—you never indulge in such costly trifles as this, for instance! and he held out the dainty white cuff, all a glittering bracelet, which cost one guinea, exclaimed by a flattering bracelet, which cost one guinea, exclaimed by a flattering bracelet, which cost one guinea, exclaimed by a flatt

Extract of a letter from Mr. Edward Davis, of 26 Charlotte Street, Commercial Road East, Poplar, dated 25th July, 1873. To Dr. J. Collis Browne. Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you of the relief I have received from the use of your Chlorodyne. I was afflicted with Asthma for twenty-five years, and could get no relief from any medicine I took, until I was induced to try your Chlorodyne. I have taken it now for about three months, and am happy to say it has entirely cured me. I am now sixty-two years of age, and have been a great sufferer from Asthma for the last twenty-five years. I have recommended it to several persons, and they have derived the same benefit from it as myself. You are at liberty to make what use you please of this letter. I remain, yours truly, EDWARD DAVIS. Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for COUGHS, CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA, COLDS, and all Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. It is the only palliative in NEURALGIA, RHEUMATISM, and TOOTHACHE. It is the only remedy in CHOLERA and DIARRHŒA. Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London.

THE PONTIFF PILGRIMS.

The Pontifex pilgrims, after having attended mass in various Roman Catholic chapels on Tuesday morning, left Victoria station, shortly after eight o'clock, for Pontigny. The pilgrims number over 200. The pilgrims embarked at Newhaven about noon, the weather being threatening and stormy.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—A large number of English pilgrims to Pontigny arrived in Paris this morning, and 240 more are expected to-night at six o'clock. To-morrow morning they will attend mass at the Church of Notre Dame des Victoires, and they will leave at eight a.m. for Pontigny.

The special correspondent of Tuesday night's Standard writes from Newhaven in the morning:—The bulk of the Pontigny pilgrims heard mass at Warwick street, London, and at several other churches, and then—a good many of them fasting—found their way to Victoria station in time to be marshalled by the clerics in charge before eight o'clock. I noticed nobody on the platform of more importance than the Hon. and Rev. Dr. Gilbert Talbot, and Lord E. Howard, except, indeed it were Mr. John M. Cook, who has accompanied the pilgrims as far as Paris, and Mr. Spiller, his representative with the party. The mere aristocratic section had gone before, and a goodly sprinkling of the middle class would appear to have followed their example. For an hour some of the pilgrims were inclined to laughing and chaff of the most peculiar, or rather let me say in the most cheery Christian manner, buying the morning papers, which they will attack and the afternoon reads just like any other Cook's party, and only to be distinguished therefrom by the badge of the "Sacred Heart," so decked in red on the white ground. About a fourth of the 250 or so who took their places in the special—having by the way a most unenviable preference for first and second class carriages, so that the thirds were left nearly empty—were ladies of one kind or other, either priests or Christian brethren, and of the remainder about a third were women of various ranks in society. Nevertheless elements of cheerfulness appeared by its almost complete absence. Anyhow there were not more than a dozen Irish in the party which arrived at Victoria Station—amidst much cheering from some 200 sympathizers—promptly to the time appointed, 10 minutes past 8 o'clock. Several were even than the Itinerar ies, or prayers-for-a-safe-journey were said, and then the Litany of Loretto was recited, all, with Pontifex Ave Maria to the mystical number of seven for the good old Pope, and "persecuted" Bishops in Germany, and elsewhere, and for the Holy Catholic, Apostolic, and Roman Church. Promptly to a minute the train ran slowly into the harbour station, and not a little water to allow the new popular Captain White to take the bar as soon as the pilgrims were aboard; but at a little before eleven the Marseilles, the regular day boat, shot out under General Brattle's flag, and led the way for the Bordeaux, which with the Papal flag at the main and the banner of the Holy Cross at the fore, followed a few minutes after. The pilgrims had provided several of the "springs" were cast off, the pilgrims began, some of them reverently enough, with uncovered heads, to sing the well-known tune, "Pilgrims of the Night," the new "Stanfield's Pop," a most beautifully scanned hymn, "Sing, Engl-nd's sons, the praises of St. Edmund," the refrain being:—

"Father St. Edmund,
The pilgrims pray with a will;
Lead us home to Jesus,
And bless, sweet Saint to thee."

With this prayer dying on the ear of the throng on the Newhaven wharf, the pilgrims left the land, which, according to the hymn,—

Robbed of God's truth, she wanders still in darkness, but none of them seemed sorry to leave the dark land, and I am sure none of them will be very sorry to come back.

It is stated that the Right Hon. W. E. Forster will sail for the United States on the 10th of September. He will be accompanied by his native, Sir Thomas Fowell Puxton. The party will return before Christmas.

SIR WILFRID LAWSON AND THE LICENSED VICTUALLERS.—Sir Wilfrid Lawson writes to a contemporary as follows:—"Let me have a form of following me, through the medium of this letter, to invite the members of the Licensed Victuallers' National Defence League—at all events they feel inclined to have a picnic—to avail themselves of my grounds for the purpose. I should be delighted to see these gentlemen, of whom I have frequently heard my fellow members of Parliament speak in the very highest terms, at their Licensed Victuallers' dinners. The place shall be open to them on the same terms on which it was granted to the Band of Hope, namely, that they take drunkenness as much as I do, and consequently declare that a drunkard is their worst enemy. I shall therefore make it a condition of the visit that they will hold a meeting in the park, and explain their views and policy for removing the drunkard's curse from the land. I am instructed to tell drink on the premises, and to this they will not object, since to-day will be a teetotal one. Temperance tea to business; but no questions shall be asked as to the amount of liquor which they may be carrying concealed about their persons."

BRYANT & MAY'S MATCHES

MY OPPOSITE NEIGHBOUR.

My kind friends at the Park little knew how much pleasure their fruit and flowers gave. There was Ellen West, a poor girl who had been lying helpless on her bed for nearly months with a spinal complaint. I never saw a prouder being such a delighted look in her face as did a bunch of those exquisite flowers call up in her poor pale cheeks; they actually flushed with pleasure. Poor Ellen had an artistic eye for the beautiful, all unobserved and unseen. The Misses Lee, of Church of Notre Dame des Victoires, and they will leave at eight a.m. for Pontigny.

THE NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE MINERS SECESSION.

There is, we believe, a well founded rumour going abroad that the North Staffordshire Branch of the Amalgamated Association of Miners contemplate going over to the National Association, as soon as the intended secession from the Amalgamation is completed.

FALL OF A PLATFORM AT A WEDDING.

The foundation-stone of a new Primitive Methodist Chapel was laid on Tuesday afternoon at Goole. A collection was made on the platform, and a sum realised £175 for the chapel fun'. Some confusion was occasioned during the ceremony by the fall of a platform erected for the school children. The height was only a few feet, and but one child was injured.

SHOCKING NEGLECT OF CHILDREN.

At the Blackburn Police-court, on Tuesday, Ann Simpson was charged with neglecting her two children, whom the relieving officer visited the house there was no food, clothing, or bedding on the premises, the children were dirty and undressed, but slept on bare boards. The mother was out drinking, and the poor children were ravenously hungry, having been without food for a considerable time. The revelations were of a shocking character.—The woman was committed for two months.

SHOCKING DEATH OF A WOMAN AT TADCASTER.

On Tuesd y morning, Bridget Boyle, a tramping Irish woman died a few minutes after being found lying panting beside the railway line, near to a lodging-house at Tadcaster. A few days before she had been brutally kicked by her husband, and had since been suffering from the effects of them, and of these her dead body bears ample and painful evidence. A verdict of wilful murder by kicking here committed to prison for another offence. An inquiry into the cause of the poor woman's death will be held.

ALLEGED POISONING OF A FAMILY BY A FATHER.

BRADFORD, Tuesday Night.—A man named Hugo Grotius Clifford was arrested by the Bradford police this evening, charged with attempting to murder, poison, his wife and family of six or seven step-children. The prisoner is a night watchman. The evidence goes to show that on occasion complained of being unaccountably ill, and on Monday morning, after breakfast, they were all seized with vomiting, which was attributed to poison. The kettle was found to contain some poison. The water and its contents are in the hands of the borough analyst.

TWO FARMERS STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

On Saturday, a severe thunderstorm broke over the village of Biddulph, Staffordshire. Charles Brown and Joseph Holland, farmers, were struck by lightning while sheltering in a farmer's house of several yards, and then fell on his face. When picked up, he was found that his clothes were torn open, and his watch-chain burnt; his hair was burnt off; half of one boot was torn away; and a large hole was made in the sole of the other foot where he was struck. Brown, who was a little behind, nearly shared the same fate, but is now recovering. Other serious damage was done in the neighbourhood.

THE MILITARY SECRETARYSHIP TO THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.

The Daily Telegraph says Major-General Sir Alfred Horsford has been selected to fill the post of military secretary to the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, vacated by the death of the late Lieutenant-General the Honourable James Lindsay, K.C.M.G. A better appointment could not have been made. Sir Alfred Horsford has had great experience throughout an active and eventful career. He is not only an accomplished soldier, a courteous gentleman, remarkable for ability and sound judgment; and the army will hear with pleasure that he has been chosen.

ATTEMPT TO CROSS THE STRAITS IN A BALLOON.

PARIS, September 2.—An aeronaut named Durouf started yesterday from Calais in a balloon, with his wife, with the object of crossing the Straits of Dover. The wind was adverse, and the authorities endeavoured to dissuade him from making the attempt, but he persisted in ascending. Nothing has since been heard of it, and fears are entertained that it may not have succeeded in reaching Norway.

MR. WARD AND THE LABOURERS' UNION.

Mr. W. G. Ward, of Perriston Towere, Ross, formerly one of the leading members of the National Agricultural Labourers' Union, has published a letter respecting the management of the union, with which he has now no connection. He says that he resigned himself obnoxious to the council simply because he opposed plundering, looked into cash balances, and denounced jobbery. When he found that he could not do so, his resignation was to benefit the man by, and at the he in my should benefit the few. He heads the letter with not having severed his former charges, and threatens Secretary Taylor with something unpleasant if he does not. He finally reminds the public that there are plenty of officers to answer him—Taylor, general secretary, and Collier, the second secretary, who has a secretary to help him—but they dare not answer him. He offers to meet them publicly anywhere.

THE BISHOP OF MANCHESTER AND MONEY MAKING.

On Sunday afternoon the Bishop of Manchester preached at All Saint's Church, Higher Broughton, in aid of the Sunday School Fund. In the first Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, 12th chapter, 20th and following verses. In the course of his sermon, the Bishop said that in this diocese there were many parishes in which rich men and large landed proprietors had felt it to be their duty to erect churches, parsonages, and the like for the people. Of course it was very right and proper employment of money, which was given to them for a higher and nobler purpose than that it should be used in the ways of business. When they died that Mr. Sound-&-So's personality was sworn under say £500,000. It might be gratifying to those who inherited it to be told how that the man had died worth that amount had left £500,000 to be spent, may be, profligately by thriftless sons or daughters. But it did not look upon it in that light. If that was the mere object in making money, there was a very unsatisfactory end to it. The man whom God had given the power of getting rich should have a warm and sympathising heart, and a large and liberal hand; he should not be uncharitable or illiberal, but should give his contribution with pleasure. There was a great temptation to give if one could be satisfied that the money on bestowed was not intercepted before reaching its destination. There was a great deal in the right use of money, and a man who made money and who possessed the power of usefulness. He believed it was true in a literal sense that "to the man that hath shall much be given." He had been told some of the business men in Lancashire stories of how men began life as factory hands who by industry, thrift, and a keen commercial eye, rose to be the possessors of large amounts of property. One wondered how the thing had been done. Men commenced in trade, for instance, had been known to die worth £100,000 or £200,000. The difficulty, they said, was to make the first £10,000, and then the matter was as easy as possible, and it came to be true that to him that hath more shall be given. God did not object to a well-propagating, self-generating power, but He meant that when a man had money he should make a good use of it.

DESTRUCTIVE FLOODS AT BLACKBURN.—On Tuesday morning, between 2 and 3 o'clock, a heavy rain fell in Blackburn in torrents. A flood came down from Blackcate and inundated many houses, doing considerable damage. The river Blakewater endeavoured to rise, and Cob Wood and the houses in Leyland street, Edmondson-street, Grimshaw street, and Wellington Barks were filled with water, and the furniture wrecked.

Special Notice.

Owing to the daily increasing sale of Clapham's Botanical Stomach Pills, and the large number of spurious imitations now in circulation, J. C. has determined to have them made in a manner that will effectually prevent the possibility of imitation. Without having any desire to libel other Medicines, we would remind the public, however, that Clapham's Botanical Stomach Pills are entirely free from Mercury, Antimony, Arsenic, Iron, Copper, Lead, Zinc, Bismuth, or any other poisons. They will be found invaluable in the following complaints, and, indeed, in every case where the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels are deranged, they will be found effectual to restore and invigorate the whole system. Headache, Giddiness, Flatulency, Fermentation, Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Bilious Attacks, Sickness, Heartburn, Hysterical Stomachs, Vomiting, Biliousness, Heartburn, Dizziness, Dimness of Sight, Soarness of the Stomach, &c., &c. all Chemists.

Testimonials Presented to Mr. Clapham, July, 1873.

We, the undersigned, having, for various lengthened periods, used Mr. Clapham's Botanical Stomach Pills prepared by MR. J. CLAPHAM, of Wade Lane, Leeds, and he recently commenced business in Kirkgate, we have much pleasure in recommending them to the notice of the public generally, as we have found them to be a most valuable medicine for the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. Without having any desire to libel other Medicines, we would remind the public, however, that Clapham's Botanical Stomach Pills are entirely free from Mercury, Antimony, Arsenic, Iron, Copper, Lead, Zinc, Bismuth, or any other poisons. They will be found invaluable in the following complaints, and, indeed, in every case where the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels are deranged, they will be found effectual to restore and invigorate the whole system. Headache, Giddiness, Flatulency, Fermentation, Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Bilious Attacks, Sickness, Heartburn, Hysterical Stomachs, Vomiting, Biliousness, Heartburn, Dizziness, Dimness of Sight, Soarness of the Stomach, &c., &c. all Chemists.

LIVER AND BILIOUS COMPLAINTS.

Dec. 5, 1872.

Sir,—I have long known and appreciated the virtues of your PULMONIC WAFERS. For some time I suffered from a severe cough, and felt myself ill. I was induced to take a box of your WAFERS, and before I had finished them I felt myself much better. I have since taken a few boxes, and am happy to say that they have entirely relieved me of my cough, and restored me to my former health and strength. I have also found them very beneficial in cases of Indigestion, Biliousness, and Liver Complaint. I have no hesitation in recommending them to all who are afflicted with any of the above complaints, as I am sure they will find them to be all that is represented.

I am, Sir, yours truly,
JAMES T. CAMPBELL.

LOCK NERVES.—CURE No. 38, 614.

Of the Rev. Canon de Broke, Vicar of Dunsby, near Bourne, Lincolnshire, after a severe illness, and an affection of the nerves of the heart, which rendered him unable to read the service of the Church, or to preach, for many months, and which had resisted the skill of the most eminent physicians, he was induced to try DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, and found himself restored to perfect health by it, after taking it for a short time. He has since published his testimony in favour of this delicious food, and has had the gratification of receiving numerous letters from persons who have derived the same benefit from it as himself. Dunsby Vicarage, Bourne, Lincolnshire, March 24, 1870.

CURE OF CONSUMPTION BY DU BARRY'S FOOD.

"DU BARRY'S delicious food has brought a lady of Manchester, who was pronounced by the Faculty to be in the last stage of consumption, and for whom I had given up all hope, to her present state of health, in the short space of two months, after having derived no benefit from the many remedies she had taken during the last two years. I have much pleasure in recommending DU BARRY'S FOOD to all sufferers from consumption, as I am sure they will find it all that is represented."—THOMAS CHESLEY.—March 5, 1869.

LABOUR AND WAGES.

THE DURHAM MINERS' ASSOCIATION on Tuesday, agreed to arbitration with the masters on an open basis. Mr. Burt, M.P., and Mr. Lloyd Jones were appointed on behalf of the men.

MR. MACDONALD, M.P., AND THE SCOTCH MINERS.—A letter from Scotland in the Manchester Examiner says:—From what I hear, there is no likelihood of a reconciliation being effected between Mr. Macdonald and the miners, whom at one time he was able almost literally to turn round his little finger. It is not in Lanarkshire alone that they are breaking loose from their allegiance to him; on the contrary, the Fifeshire and Clackmannanshire miners are almost as inimical to him as the former; and, indeed, I hear that a vigorous attempt will be made by the disorganised and disheartened miners to form a new union, of which, Mr. Macdonald will not be the head. He has done a great deal of injury to his position by the intemperate character of his language, and by a hot and illnatured quarrel with your Glasgow contemporary the Herald, regarding which the general opinion is that he had the worst of it in temper, in argument, in tact, and in everything.

FARM LABOURERS.—The lock-out of unionists in the Eastern Counties has been resumed. It is anticipated by the farmers that unionism may be destroyed thereby.

THE WEST YORKSHIRE COAL TRADE.—An adjourned general meeting of the West Yorkshire Colliery Owners was held at the Great Northern Hotel, Leeds, on Tuesday afternoon, for the purpose of hearing the miners' decision respecting the arbitration regarding the proposed reduction of 20 per cent. in their wages. The proceedings were strictly private. The result, however, has oozed out, and we are informed that the colliery owners pressed their proposal for a reduction of 20 per cent. in the men's wages, offering the alternative of arbitration in terms of the last award on the 2nd of June last. The representatives of the miners reported that the men did not think the proposed reduction called for; and they virtually repudiated the alleged arrangement as to the alternative of arbitration, stating that they had not authorised their representatives at the last conference in London to accept any such condition.

THE FIFE AND CLACKMANNAN MINERS. —Throughout Fife and Clackmannan there is a strong feeling on the part of the miners in favour of some steps being taken with a view to a settlement of the present dispute, and it is probable that some definite step will be taken by either the masters or the men in the course of the present week.

AFTER a strike of nearly two months duration, Lord Pearhyn's Carnarvonshire slate quarrymen, to the number of 3,000, resumed work on Tuesday morning.

OPENING OF A BAPTIST COLLEGE.

At Manchester on Wednesday, a new theological institution for Baptist students, to be known as the Baptist College, Broughton road—was formally opened. The Principal (the Rev. H. Dowson) presided; and Professor Newth, (Rev. D. Fyfe (Canada), Rev. Dr. Price (Aberdare), Rev. Dr. Stocks (Huddersfield), and others. The college was instituted in 1866, and carried on its work in small premises at the Chamber Hall, Bury, until last year. There is now a handsome building in the outskirts of Manchester, and at a convenient distance from Owens College. The cost, £9696, has been nearly defrayed by liberal private subscriptions, and from proceeds of a bazaar.

THE JURY SYSTEM.

Many have (remarks the Daily News) been so many tinkerings, or attempted tinkerings lately at the jury system, that a good deal of violence cannot have been done to the venerable superstitions which secured it so long against serious innovation. It may even be doubted whether the present constitution is likely to outlast our time. There is growing up in the public mind the idea that a juror ought to be selected with some regard for his supposed qualification to discharge his duties. The old haphazard system of throwing out the judicial dragnet, and hauling in an indiscriminate draft, does not seem likely to stand the test of many succeeding generations. The responsibility of a juror in criminal cases has been completely changed in our time. He is no longer bound under terror of any peine forte et dure to find his verdict within a certain time, or to find any verdict at all if he does not see his way to it. This change ought of itself to lead up to some principle of intellectual or educational qualification. We have much more reason than we had before to be anxious that mere stupidity or ignorance should not find its way into the jury-box. In regard to civil trials the complications of modern commercial dealings are every day enhancing the importance of having men of broad and general intelligence summoned to act as jurors. It is not unlikely that those facts, taken in connection with the almost intolerable irregularities and inequalities of the present system, may one day lead to a more effective narrowing or selecting of the class from whom juries are to be summoned—a very liberal principle of exemption in individual cases, and a scale of remuneration which shall be genuine and sufficient, if not alluring.

CURIOUS CASE OF MATRIMONIAL INFELICITY.

Mr. Joseph Goodman, described as a gentleman living on his means, was charged on a warrant, before Mr. Vaughan, at Bow street Police-court, on Wednesday, with assaulting and threatening his wife. The complainant said she resided in the house, with the defendant, whom she married 18 weeks ago. She was formerly a widow. At eight o'clock on Tuesday morning, while she was in her bed room, he seized her by the hair and tore her nightdress. Her arm was much bruised. He used foul language towards her, as he was always in the habit of doing. He ill-used her before she had been married a fortnight, and she was always afraid of him when he "got in his tempers." He was always sober, but her life was a misery. He turned her out of doors on Monday night. She was afraid he would repeat his conduct, for he had threatened to do her all the injury in his power. On being cross-examined, the complainant admitted that she pulled the defendant's hair last week, but it occurred at first as usual. She also refused on Tuesday to make out a list of his linen, and told him to do it himself. The defendant stated that, a fortnight after their marriage, while they were at Brighton, his wife attempted to poison him by putting prussic acid in his cheese. The complainant denied this most emphatically, and said the poison was in the form of medicine prescribed for herself. Mr. Vaughan said he did not believe such a lamentable case had ever come before his notice as the present. He would endeavour to find two sureties in £50 each, and his own recognisances in £100 to keep the peace for twelve months.

THE LIVERPOOL COUNCIL OF EDUCATION.—SCHEME OF SCHOLARSHIPS.—The Liverpool Council of Education, which has been recently established to promote and encourage education in local public elementary schools, has just issued a scheme for the establishment of eighteen scholarships to connect the public elementary schools with the lower schools of the Liverpool College and the Liverpool Institute. The scholarships, of which there will be six in each year, will be open to candidates from all the public elementary schools of Liverpool. The candidates are to be nominated by the school managers from boys of not more than fourteen years, who have been on the school roll for two years and regular in attendance. The subjects of examination are reading, writing, dictation, arithmetic, scripture knowledge (or an equivalent secular subject in cases of conscientious objection), geography, grammar, composition, and rudiments of history. The council intend to pay for three years a sum not exceeding six guineas per annum for the education of each candidate received, and twelve guineas per annum to the parents of the candidate so selected in aid of clothing and maintenance. It is expected that those successful candidates will greatly stimulate the intellectual activity of the schools from which they come.

THE CARLIST ATROCITIES.

Respecting the recent massacre of Government troops, which has already been briefly alluded to, a Genoa paper, the Lucha, gives the following further details. The massacre took place at Wallfagona. By order of Saballs, the Carlist intendance, represented by Don Ramon Cabrinetty, caused the deserters to be tied together in couples, whilst they were told they were going to be taken to a safer place. The unfortunate men had got by fifty Catalans, under the command of Bosch and Bru. The march was exceedingly painful for the prisoners, whose hands were in a deplorable condition. One of the prisoners having sprained his ankle, and being unable to proceed, the Catalans, after wounding him by shot, bayonetted him, and left him on the roadside. The prisoners arrived at Llayen on the 17th July last, where they were locked up in the prison church. After some debating between the chiefs, Bru was charged with the execution. He entered the church, and had the ties of the prisoners doubled, telling them they were to continue their march. This precaution having been taken, he announced to them that he had received orders from Saballs to shoot them all immediately. On hearing the news the victims uttered shrieks and imprecations. Bru told them that they were "in chapel," and that they had to prepare for dying well. Three curates who were then introduced to take their confessions. A heartrendering scene then took place. Most of these brave soldiers were married, and fathers; their last thought was for their wives and children. Some of them had bits of pencil and paper, and almost all availed themselves of these for sending a last farewell to their beloved ones, whom they left without support. An hour scarcely had elapsed when Bru returned. They begged of him to delay the execution another hour, and gave him all their moneys. "No," was the brutal answer; "they ought to have shot you." And they took you. All the Customs' guards are there. I do not want money; I long for blood. Have you confessed?" And on their affirmative reply, the exec

THE QUARREL BETWEEN DENMARK AND GERMANY.

The opinion of Prince Bismarck on plebiscites was placed on record in the matter of Hanover and the other states annexed to the Prussian kingdom in the 1866 He professed the most complete contempt for the favourite device of French Imperialism, and stated boldly that conquest was a sufficient basis of public authority. This opinion he has frequently repeated, and in some time since, in a conversation published by a Danish patriot who had the privilege of an interview, the question was treated in the most practical manner by the Chancellor. The Press speaks still more frankly. The fact is, Germany holds the Danish districts of Schleswig, and is resolved to hold them. To give them up would, she thinks, be to narrow the limits of the Empire in reference to vague sentiment and imaginary obligations. If there are people in Schleswig who speak Danish and thinks themselves Danes, the next generation will speak German and be proud of being German. The narrow language and nationality must necessarily be absorbed by the great German mass. By holding the Danish district against the ignorant impatience of the Danes, the true German Government is only carrying out the decrees of Providence. As for the Treaty of Prague, it was concluded with Austria, and the right of demanding its fulfillment rests with Austria alone. No other State or nation was a party to it. It does not stipulate any time or method for testing the opinion to which it refers, nor does it specify what territory is meant by the Northern District of Schleswig. The execution of the Article is not only inexpedient, but impracticable. Against such a denial of justice as this the Danish agitation is directed. The Danes, although their society is saturated with German speech, and manners, and habits of thought, cling to their political independence, and never did their patriotism burn more strongly than now that the kingdom is restricted to the islands and the peninsula of Jutland. Our Danish Correspondent has lately given an account of the activity of the opposition carried on by the Danish Press in the disputed districts, and of the repression to which German authority resorts. The victims find a ready sympathy at Copenhagen, and at the present time the anti-German spirit runs as high as on the morrow of the war. There have been rumours of difficulties between the two Governments, and of communications in which the expulsion of certain Danes from Schleswig was treated as a matter of international concern. These are declared on semi-official authority to be inaccurate, but there can be no doubt the Danish Government shares to the full sentiments of the people, and hopes heartily wish, though we have little hope, that the German Government would of its own accord propose some measure of conciliation.—The Times.

ROTHWELL DEBATING CLUB.

From our advertising columns, it will be observed, this society opens the session on Thursday evening next, with an address on "Shakespeare," by Mr. Kirby. We trust the society will be productive of real good to our young men, and that such subjects will be chosen as will result in something higher and nobler than mere discussion.

THE LATE HENRY WALMSLEY.

We are informed that Mr. Walmsley, was for eighteen years in the Police force, part of the time being stationed at Middleton.—His funeral last Friday, was attended by a staff of Constables with Sergeant Denham.

THE—GLENFIELD STARCH, has been more in trade than all the other starches in the world. No higher compliment could be paid to it, as all good manufactures are stimulated that it is the finest starch in use. Trade-men have doubtless less profit on its sale, but with it is kept by all respectable grocers and oilmen who prefer supplying their customers with the best articles, to their own pecuniary profit. The public should insist upon having Glenfield Starch.

MR. HOLMES AND THE WEST YORKSHIRE MINERS.

SIR,—I was more hurt than surprised to see the letter from Mr. John Holmes, of Methley, this morning in your paper, about the West Yorkshire miners and arbitration. We had concluded that, having grumbled and grovelled to every miner he met with, both in the streets and lanes, and even (with some of them) in there own houses, telling them he would have nothing more to do with them, Mr. Holmes would have let us alone to go our own way, and to mind our own business. But it appears it is not the case, for Mr. Holmes is not content with bullying and threatening in private, but he must have recourse to misconstruction in the public papers. I do not know what are his motives or intentions in this action, and perhaps if he himself were asked he would have a difficulty in answering. Last March we were asked by our masters for a reduction of wages, and not thinking that such a demand was justified by the state of the country, we agreed to submit the question to arbitration and with his consent appointed Mr. Holmes as one of our referees. The basis for such arbitration was arranged with our employers, on the 31st of March, at a full representative meeting, and that basis gave our referee full power to call in any evidence he desired, and go as far back as ever they liked. but no further forward than the 31st of March, 1874. Mr. Holmes had a copy of this basis placed in his hands when he went up to London on the 24th of April, but he would seem that he was not content to act as referee for the pending dispute, but must set himself up as legislator for all other disputes in future, and because the answer did not approve of this he is angry with them His letter in your paper seems to be a curious piece of complicated argument and contradictory sentences. He first says that we repudiate their arrangement with the arbitrator, he says the award was either in part or wholly repudiated; and third, that those sentences which he had put in italics were alone repudiated. His last assertion is simply false, and we did not repudiate the award upon wages, because there was no award at all, but a decision mutually agreed upon in respect to wages, and the amount of reduction being the matter of reference to Mr. Kettle, with the consent of the referees, was written out by Mr. Kettle.

If Mr. Holmes can find a word or sentence in the above basis that warrants him in agreeing to the addition of those sentences which are in italics to the award, then I will agree that we are wrong; but if he cannot, then I must tell your readers honestly, like a gentleman, whether he be right or wrong. It seems, from what I can gather, to be in a fog about the importance of those sentences being in the award. He first says "Perhaps it would have been better if the disputed clause had been left out, or it was really no essential part of the especial point of jurisdiction." If it were not essential, why did they insert it at all? and then there would have been no need for the addition. But mark Mr. Holmes' next sentence, where he says, "But to show its real bearing, and that it really was pertinent and indeed essential both to the construction of the arbitrator's award and to the future action, I will give you the very rule itself bearing up n the question. Mr. John Holmes, however, has not given you the rule itself, only his version of it, or you would have seen that it was not the construction he puts upon agreed at the meeting of the referees on the 31st. Rule 1st does not provide for a Court of Arbitration, but it does provide for a joint committee consisting of an equal number of masters and workmen, which all disputes occurring in any individual colliery may be referred; and no one but Mr. Holmes would have construed it otherwise. Rule 2nd does not say the objects of the joint committee, but only grievance that may arise in any individual colliery. Rule 4 does say that if the committee cannot agree they shall call in an umpire, but this applies only to disputes in individual collieries, and not to anything the jurisdiction of the committee, and and not to general reductions, or advances, or to any other question that affects the district generally. Rule 5 does not be dealt with by the joint-committee until it has first been before a general meeting of coalowners and miners. Mav I ask Mr. Holmes if those sentences in the award which are put in italics were ever before a general meeting of masters and men when he agreed to their insertion; and, if not, will he tell your readers where he got his authority to agree to them? and from whom he quotes his authority for the future. It applied to the dispute he had in hand, and he knows it, and it is no use for him to want to gull your readers in any other way.

We have not been bitter with Mr. Holmes, for I have never heard the question raised amongst our members since, nor is there any difference about it, only what he has made himself. Yours respectfully,

JOHN DIXON.

Normanton, Sep. 10th, 1874.

THE MARQUIS OF RIPON.

The Ripon people must have been edified on Sunday week by the spectacle of the Marquis of Ripon going to mass while the young Earl-de-Grey was officiated to perform his decease in the Cathedral. This is by no means a solitary instance of the way in which the rising generation takes precisely the opposite turn in religion to the parental. The late Lord Dunraven could not make a proselyte of Lord Adare, whose Protestantism seems to have taken a deeper dye from opposition to parental counsels. It is the same with the Earl of Pembroke. Lady Herbert was the Earl of Pembroke's ideal of the strictest sort; but her son, the newly-married Earl, is by no means inclined to go on a pilgrimage, nuless it be to shrines such as those visited by the Earl and the doctor.

HYDROPHOBIA AT ROTHWELL.

We are requested to state that the mad dog seen in Royds' Lane and Rothwell, last Wednesday, was going in the direction of Methley. It was first seen on Bell Hill, where it bit a dog, which was destroyed; it then passed through Rothwell, where it came across three or four dogs, which have since been put away, and after being seen at Royds' Lane, it took across the country to Methley, also doing damage there, where all trace of it was lost.

Advice to Mothers.—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless, and pleasant to taste. It produces natural sleep, and the mother and child from pain, and the quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.—Manufactured in New York, and at 493 Oxford-street, London.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR YOUR HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore to every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Certificate from Dr. Vermont for every bottle, with full particulars. Ask your Chemist for "The Mexican Hair Renewer," prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford-street, London, and sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere.

COLLIERS ON THE SPREE AT METHLEY.

Four young men, named James Rider, George Dews, Luke Smart, and William Hardy, who are employed as coal miners, at Allerton-Bywater, were brought up at the West Riding Court, Wakefield, on Monday, on two charges, first, for being drunk and disorderly in the United Kingdom Hotel, at Methley, on the previous day (Sunday), and secondly, for refusing to leave when requested by the landlord. Christopher Teall: and secondly, with being drunk and riotous on the highway at Methley. It appeared that about seven o'clock on Sunday night, the men were in the above-named hotel, and after making inquiries about a train for Leeds, they sat down in the tap-room and called for beer. Each being served with three pints they began to be noisy, and to indulge in a little "larking," as they called it, amongst themselves. The landlord requested them to retire, but they refused, and while he was remonstrating with them, in walked police-constable Gill, at whose request the men left the public-house. After leaving the hotel, the prisoners misbehaved themselves on the public highway, rudely jostling against people returning from church and chapel. All four men were taken into custody, but not without a little trouble, caused by Rider and Dews. At the police station at Methley, whither they were taken, the men behaved themselves most disgracefully.—The bench imposed a penalty of 7s. 6s. and costs, making 15s. 3½d. on Rider, Dews, and Smart, and 5s. and costs, making 12s. 3½d. on Hardy, for their conduct in the street, and a fine of 5s. and costs on the same three for the public-house affair. Hardy having a fine of 2s. 6d. and his proportion of his expenses to pay.

CAUTION TO HAWKERS.

On Monday, at the West-Riding Court, Wakefield, a man who gave the name of Francis Gregan, was summoned for hawking goods without a license. On the afternoon of the 16th inst. a police-constable observed the defendant and another man going from house to house at Crofton and offering cloth, dress pieces, &c., for sale. He demanded to see their certificates. Neither of them had any, but one, named James Flinn, residing at present in Leeds, said he had one, but had left it with the superintendent of the West Riding police, at Leeds, for endorsement This statement turned out to be correct, and therefore Flinn was not summoned. The defence was that Gregan was the servant of Flinn, and was only employed to carry his bundle. As the evidence showed that he had done more than carry the parcel, had actually solicited, the bench imposed a fine of 5s. and 9s. costs.

ANCIENT SUPERSTITION AMONG MINERS.

Large numbers of the employed at some of the Bedworth collieries, in North Warwickshire, giving way to a superstitious feeling which prevails amongst their class, have refused to descend the coal pits in which they are employed. The men are credulous enough to believe that certain nocturnal sounds, which are doubtless produced by flocks of night birds in their passage across the country, are harbingers of some impending colliery disaster. During Sunday night it was stated that these sounds were heard, and been designated "the seven whistlers," had been distinctly heard in the neighbourhood of Bedworth, and the result was that on the following morning when work should have been resumed, some of the men positively refused to descend the pits, and were to be seen idling about the streets of the town The recent colliery accidents at Bedworth, and the "sounds" by which they are said to have been preceded, seem to have argumented, rather than diminished, this superstitious belief.

District ofter News.

DRUNK AND RIOTOUS.—Benjamin Williams, a farm labourer, for being drunk and riotous, at Oulton, on Sunday night, Sep 13th, was fined 5s. and costs. Police-constable Wetherell said the defendant was drunk and disorderly on the highway, and was in great danger of being run over.

THREATENING TO BREAK A MAN'S FACE AT LEE MOOR.—Joseph Hargreaves, a miner, living at Lee Moor, preferred a charge of threatening to break his house against Abraham Barker, also a miner, of Lee Moor. Mr Husband appeared for the defendant, and Mr Burton for the complainant. It appeared that the complainant for some time had been living in the same house with the defendant, being a member of an Oddfellow's club at Lofthouse Gate, was ordered away to Scarbro' for the good of his health, by Mr Whiteley, who is surgeon to the club. Whilst the complainant was away the defendant took about a nasty report in reference to the cause of his illness, and, in consequence, when the complainant returned home he found that the report was in every body's mouth, and the taunt was hard to bear. On Sunday, September 13th, the parties met. The complainant asked defendant if he still maintained that the report was true, upon which the defendant said he held it to be true, and he had previously stated, as it was true. Defendant was thereupon irritated, and threatened the convalescent, who was thereby afraid to walk out, thinking that the defendant would knock him down some bodily harm. Mark Newbould was called as a witness for the complainant, and Edward Land and Arthur Welbourne for the defence.—The Bench, after that in the case the evidence was very cancerning, and it was a very disgraceful case to bring before the Court. The defendant would be bouny over to keep the peace in his own recognisance of £10 for six months. Mr. Husband applied for a similar order on behalf of the defendant, that the insinuations against his client's daughter might be stopped.—The Bench, in reply, said they thought their decision put a stop to the case. Defendant had 15s. 6d expenses to pay.

SUICIDE OF A SOLDIER.

On Wednesday morning as the mail train from Dublin for Cork, was passing Newbridge, a soldier laid his head across the rail and was decapitated.

MY OPPOSITE NEIGHBOUR.

Why, Mrs. Reed, what has become of Miss Lawrence O th ins'ant, I know you'd be frightened to find them gone, said she. But Mr. Lawrence, he has a queer man, and he does everything promiscuous like, and he says one day——

Excuse my interrupting you, but is there no message or one for me, Sir.

Yes'm. Miss Lawrence, she came over one morning, a-looking as pale as a turnip, and she says, says she, "Mrs. Reed, give this here to Miss Wilmot when she returns; and she brought this packet of books and this here letter.

My lanlady stood by while I opened Clore's letter. It was penned in anguish of heart. They were going to London. There was a chance of a termination of the famous lawsuit, and Mr. Lawrence desired for a time to keep their address secret. She begged me to "forgive and pity her Poor girl, I knew that nothing but her father's commands would have prevented her from corresponding with me.

To say that Clare, would but half express my sense of her loss; she had crept into my heart, and her absence left a blank which I could not fill. I grew restless and unsettled, and at last I wrote to Leigh, asking him to take lodgings for me, near his own; and I started one day for London.

As I was whirling along in a comfortable first-class carriage, I thought how dreadfully I was acting. Surely at your time of life, I said to myself, you might know better than to suppose that a change of scene would satisfy the yearnings of the heart. Will the din and confusion of that mighty Babel soothe your spirit, or the roar and rush of the mighty ocean of life that surges through its streets be more grateful to your ears than the ripple of the blue sea, or the murmur of the trees around the trees.

At the terminus I met Leigh. He looked a little care-worn and anxious, and there was rather a forced gaiety in his manner. He escorted me to my lodgings, and a-stayed to partake of my dinner, "Chops for two being all that time would allow my landlady to provide.

As we sat in the grey twilight, talking over many topics, Leigh suddenly said to me if I had any old letters or memoranda relating to my father or grandfather.

None, I replied. "You know your m-ther and myself were so very young when our parents died, that we had scarcely any knowledge of our family. But why do you ask?

Because, said he, a singular and remarkable occurrence has brought to light incidents relating to the past; and if one or two links can be found to complete the chain bf evidence, I may find myself the heir to a long contested estate."

"Leigh! I said in pitiable. I exclaimed. Beware, my d-ar boy, of that ignis fatuus, the law. Do not enter on a long contested 'award. Think of poor, infatuated Mr. Lawrence and his wasted life.

I do think of him and of Clare, said he, If I can establish my claim to the estate, I become Ht, I would risk all, possess for the chance.

But you have not told me the discovery you have made, said I.

Strange coincidences occur in life, said Leigh, and one of these has thrown into contact with the son of an East Indian lawyer. As solicitor to the executor of a deceased merchant, various papers passed through his hands; in fact, a large accumulation of documents had to be waded through. Among them was a correspondence between George Wilmot and John Bartlett, which applied them to the heirs to the long sought for. Our grandfather's real name was Challoner; and it appears that he married beneath him, and was disowned by his family. He went to India, and there assumed the name of Wilmot, breaking of all communication with his family. Finally, all our people had of his succeeding to the estate, but the elder brother died without issue, and several claimants appearing, the estate was thrown into chancery, at the request of Chancery. All the claimants have dropped off but one, Reginald Hastings, whose title is good if George Challoner's death without issue can be proved. Having gained a clue, we have been working to establish it, and I come with the fair prospect of success. But, Reed, it will be a hard-fought battle, and for long years of affluence will be the reward of the victorious party. Are you ready to risk your future happiness on the issue of a lawsuit?

Give it up, Leigo, said I. It will ruin you.

I think not, said he. At any rate, I am pledged to my fate.

All this startled and saddened me, and the long harassing law business that followed inspired me with a horror for it, more than ever pity poor Clare.

I could find no trace of her though sometimes I detected her pen in the magazines of the day. I eagerly read them, and tried to discover my dear girl's productions; but as she wrote anonymously, it was hard to do so. Leigh, too, declared that he could recognise her style immediately and once tried to discover her address from a publisher, by offering a high price for the beautiful poem that appeared in Clare was a well known writer of the day, and was at the age of nineteen years of age. Of the nine years that followed morning when work should have been resumed, some of the men positively refused to descend the pits, and were to be seen idling about the streets of the town The recent colliery accidents at Bedworth, and the "sounds" by which they are said to have been preceded, seem to have argumented, rather than diminished, this superstitious belief.

John Walter Coppen, coffee-house keeper, was yesterday tried at the Old Bailly for his murder of his wife, at Camberwell. He was found guilty, with a strong recommendation to mercy, and was sentenced to death.

A shocking accident took place at Woolwich, on Wednesday. A battery of Royal Artillery were at drill on the Common, and a gunner, named Driscoll, was standing at the muzzle of a gun. Owing to some misunderstanding, the gun was fired, and Driscoll was almost blown to pieces. Four or five men have been placed under arrest.

WATER SUPPLY.

To the Editor.

Sir,—As I ventured to complain a few weeks ago of (what appeared to me to be) the indifference of our Local Board to provide the town with a better supply of water. Will you kindly allow me a small space in your columns to thank the board for what they are now doing towards this object, we have a fair prospect of having in a very short time the Sterroid Well water flowing into the Church Well; and we shall find this a considerable relief, but it will not be so complete a work as it might, and ought to be, unless the Board carry out the proposal of Mr. Dickinson, viz.—to provide a cistern to receive the flow of water during the night as a reserve supply. To let all the water which is not caught at the well run away would be a waste, which I am not present conditions we cannot afford, and, which I earnestly hope the Board will not allow. I would beg respectfully to suggest, that without delay, permission be obtained from Mr. Hronnet, to make a cistern by the Church Well, on the other side of the wall in the field, to hold from two to three thousand gallons, and to fix two pumps against the wall, one of them to lift the water high enough to load a cart. Without such a provision the public will yet suffer great inconvenience, and cannot have the full benefit of that excellent water. We shall hail with pleasure the time when by means of a water work's scheme, every house in the district will be provided with water.

Yours respectfully,

A SUFFERING TOWNSMAN.

A WIFE KILLED BY HER HUSBAND.

At Stretton-upon-Dunsmore, near Rugby, a labourer, named Osborn, has had an altercation with his wife, because she had not got his tea ready. Blows were exchanged, and it is said he kicked her. The violence used, resulted in her death in about an hour. The husband is in custody at Rugby, awaiting the coroner's inquest.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the Liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the mouth from all impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a pearlike appearance, and imparts a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delightful to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s 6d for the liquid, and 1s per jar for the Floriline Tooth Paste, of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford-street, London.

VALENTINE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Certificate from Dr. Vermuden on every bottle, with full pamphlet. Ask your Chemist for "The Mexican Hair Renewer," prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 493 Oxford Street, London, and sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere at 3s 6d per Bottle.

HEALTH BEAUTY, AND LONGEVITY WITHOUT MEDICINE OR EXPENSE, BY DU BARRY'S DELICIOUS REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, which saves fifty times its cost in medicine, in diseases of the stomach, nerves, blood, lungs, liver, bowels, kidneys, and urinary organs, and gives healthful regularity and energy, to the most delicate constitution, when all other remedies fail, even in the worst cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, indigestion, habitual constipation, diarrhœa, sick headache, biliousness, fevers, spasms, cramp, heartburn, skin eruptions, and humours of the blood, low spirits, hypochondria, hysteria, melancholy, nervous irritability, despondency, loss of appetite, debility, sleeplessness, paralysis, rheumatism, gout, sciatica, colds, coughs, asthma, consumption, bronchitis, croup, hooping cough, fluxes, sickness during pregnancy, after eating, and at sea, and under every other form of human suffering, however long standing or hopeless. FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1874.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

The usual fortnightly meeting of the Board was held on Monday last, and, in the absence of Mr. Charlesworth, Mr. Hargreaves took the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.—A committee was appointed to value the hay used for the plant respecting the hay used for the horses, resulted in an order to change the dealer who supplies it.—Very little money dealer who supplies it.—Very little money having been collected for the Sterroid-water Scheme, Mr. Bumby and Mr. Smith offered to try what could be done in the town, it being understood, also, that there were a number of promises already made to several members of the Board.—The deputation appointed last meeting to wait on the Rothwell Gas Light Company, stated that they had had a long interview with the directors, and that they had now to submit an offer from the Company to sell the Board the pillars, brackets, lamps, &c. (numbering 15 light) for £20, which offer was accepted. The proposal of the Company to light the lamps for 30 weeks at the rate of £2 6s. per lamp, to be lit at dusk and turned off at 11 o'clock was accepted. It should be stated that this amount is 6s. per lamp less than last year; amount is 6s. per lamp less than last year; there will shortly be 11 more lamps, so that the money item will be about £50.—Owing to lamps to be lit on October 1st.—Owing to Mr. Huggon's absence from home, the sanitary matter to be analysed have been sent ples of water to be analysed have been sent to Mr. Fairley, the Leeds Borough analyst. A letter from the trustees drew the attention of the Methodist Chapel drew the attention of the Board to the want of an outlet for their drains looked at, as many of the inhabitants really gorged with offensive matter; they should be disinfected thoroughly.—Another question affecting the health of the town arose from the refusal of the vicar to inter on Sunday, the body of a woman, named Sarah Handforth.—It is well known that Mr. Heberden objects to Sunday funerals, but it had been thought, this was a case of emergency, and that the vicar would relent, the house in a rapidly decomposing state, called for its interment on Sunday.—It was stated that the vicar had offered to perform the office either at 8 o'clock on Saturday evening, or at 8 o'clock on Sunday morning, neither of which times were convenient for friends from a distance.—On being asked, the doctor stated what the effect of a funeral on the doctor stated what the effect of a funeral on the decomposing to the general public, he had no doubt in a case of emergency, if required by the medical man as prejudicial to health, that the vicar would interfere.—After a Local Government Act having lately come into force, the clerk was directed to write for orders from the Local Government Board, so that the privies and ashpits may be kept in a proper state.—A resolution ordering the Inspector to have a thorough cleansing organized, was moved by the chairman, seconded by Mr. Lunn, and carried.—According to the recommendation of the auditor, a cheque for £20 was granted to Mr. Jowett, on account of men's wages, &c.—Mr. C. T. Walker's plans were referred to the Public Works Committee.—On a question as to whom the wall which has fallen down in Church Lane belongs; the Clerk was directed to write to Mrs. Meynell Ingram, requesting her to repair it.

District Police News.

FAMILY QUARRELLS.—Sophia Mason, a Birmingham woman, and who did not appear, was summoned for an assault upon an old woman, named Charlotte Hall, of Woodrough, Methley, on the 21st ult. The assault arose on account of what complainant had said respecting the defendant, and on the plaintiff's son, and the defendant was fined plaintiff's son, and the defendant was fined 10s. with 15s. 6d. or 14 days imprisonment.

USING THREATENING LANGUAGE AT METHLEY.—A married woman, named Sarah Ann Turvey, was summoned for having used threatening and abusive language to Mary Ann Martin, a young girl, at Methley, on the 18th September. The language alleged to have been used on both sides is not fit for publication in these columns.—The bench thought the defendant was the aggressor, and inflicted a penalty of 10s. including costs.

CAUTION TO TRESPASSERS.—John Thorsainthouse and William Ainsworth, both boys, were summoned for trespassing on land at Rothwell, belonging to Mr. Jos. Bumby. On Monday week they were gathering mushrooms, and also treading down potatoes.—Ainsworth, who is a very bad lad, and has been previously convicted, had 10s 6d to pay, or 14 days; and Ainsworth had 10s 6d to pay, or 7 days.—William Crabtree, a lad of tender appearance, was summoned for having trespassed on land at Whitwood, the property of Mr Wm. Lacy. On Sunday they trod down the grass growing in a field, on which they had no right to pass—hence the present proceedings. Complainant stated that he had suffered so much from this conduct, that he was determined to put it down if possible.—Defendants had each 7s to pay.

WILLIAM Welsherill and Joseph Hall, of Hunslet, were summoned for treading down peas, the same morning as above, in a field belonging to Mr Lacy; and in each case the Bench inflicted a penalty of 10s. including costs.

AN INFAMOUS PUBLICAN.—Mr. Hanson stated that a man named Thomas Birkinshaw, who keeps a public-house at Loftshouse-Gate, who was warned to be present at the General Brewster Sessions, as one of the 'defaulters,' was on that occasion fined 5s. for non-attendance. He had written to Birkinshaw, but he had taken no notice. The Bench, after commenting upon the strangeness of the man's conduct, imposed another fine of 5s., and remarked that if he did not appear before the rising of the Court the license would be suspended.—Mr. Birkinshaw put in an appearance, and explained that he "hardly yet knew the law."

THE "NEW SCARBRO,'" WEST ARDSLEY.—Mr. Moses Illingworth, the occupier of this house, sought for permission to sell wines either on or off the premises (he had previously been refused a full license.—Mr. Furniss, the assistant-overseer, spoke as to the character of the house, but the Bench said they could not with consistently grant the license after the previous refusal.

AN UNSUCCESSFUL EFFORT TO EXTRAVITALIZE THE CARLTON "ROSEBUD."—It will be remembered that, at the recent General Licensing Sessions, the landlord of the "Rosebud Inn," Carlton, and the landlord of the rival "Old Half-way House," each appeared before the justices with the view by not only of obtaining full licenses instead of those which they now possess—and which only entitle them to retail malt liquors—but from a spirit of mutual opposition which utterly excluded the slightest promise of a compromise, and the effect of their stern opposition to each other was that both licenses were lost. The parties in question are brothers, though one is known as Mr Benjamin Oldroyd, of the Rosebud, and the other as Mr John Holroyd, of the Old Half-way House.—The former made another appearance in court at the present sessions, being supported by Mr. Gill, and opposed by Mr. Wainwright, it being urged, on his behalf, that Mr J. Charlesworth, Mr Chadwick, Mr Benj. Scarth, Mr Swift, Messrs, and many others, had signed a requisition to the justices on his behalf.—The chairman remarked that, an application having been made so recently to the justices, it could be scarcely right, however good the case made out might be, to grant the license. It was simply tantamount to making a duplicate application: they were in court, with documents and machinery which could be produced, but a very short time since, and it was the feeling of the bench that it was sufficient to renew the application after a year at the utmost. Mr Gill remarked that there was apparently a disposition on the part of the former bench to grant the license to the Rosebud, but that applicant would not accept it. Mr Gill then said, "I am not going to get a license for a house which is the property of another man, unless I can get one for the Rosebud, which is my own property"—he very naturally felt that he had the best title to a license, but the opposition of his brother had resulted disastrously to them both.—Mr. Wainwright (for the opposing brother): Well, we have had our chance, being on the turnpike road, and yours not having any houses near it, that ours is the one which ought to have license. It was in consequence of the opposition of the brother that our license was refused; and we say again that if any license is granted it should be allowed to us: —The chairman: This is not the time for re-hearing the application, at any rate! on the general licensing day it was thoroughly considered.—The application was refused.

WOODLESFORD MISSIONARY ANNIVERSARY.

On Sunday, the 27th, sermons were preached and collections made in the Wesleyan Chapel, Woodlesford, on behalf of the above mission, by the Rev. S. Seaton, of Rothwell preached in the morning, and Rev. E. Salt, in the evening.

The annual meeting was held on Wednesday evening, when the little chapel was quite filled with a respectable and interested audience.—After singing, and prayer by the Rev. R. Cooke, (the newly appointed superintendent). Mr. Shann, Esq., of Dult-n, was called to preside.

Rev. I. E. Page, read an exhaust of the general report, showing a large increase in the number of members and in the finances of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, the total income amounting to £167,000, of which sum Woodlesford contributed £13 5s. 6d.

Mr Shann, in making a few opening remarks was delighted to see such a large company, and was sure they would have what the preachers called "a good time."

Rev. I. E. Page, in passing the congregation, dewelt on the importance of unity with Christ: unity with each other as Church members, and unity and sympathy with other churches. He mentioned several interesting circumstances connected with the late Oxton conference for the promotion of holiness, and announced a similar gathering of a similar character in Wakefield next Monday.

Rev. R. Cooke received a hearty welcome, and in an agreeable and stirring speech, instanced a number of facts to show the power of Christianity, and the beneficial results of missions. He also read a characteristic sermon preached by a negro in Western Africa. He concluded by holding up the liberality of mission converts as an example to Christians at home, and urged them to go and do likewise.

The collection was then made, after which, a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Shann for his kindness in presiding.

THE BABY FARMING NEAR HULL.

ARREST OF THE NURSE.

The nurse in this case, in which an inquest was held near Hull a short time ago, has been arrested on a charge of poisoning. At the inquest a verdict of death from poisoning was returned, but the evidence, it was thought, did not show an intention to administer an overdose of cordial.

CHILD MURDER IN NEWCASTLE.

A shocking case of child murder has been discovered at Newcastle. On Saturday, a dreamland while at Mr. Priestman's Benwell House, detected a disagreeable odour in a room in which she was sitting She informed Mrs. Priestman, and the door of the bedroom, occupied by the cook, Elizabeth Nesbitt, having been broken open, the body of a male child was found in a drawer in a state of putrefaction. The doctor who examined the body, found a garter so tightly around the neck of the child, as to cause its death. Elizabeth Nesbitt has been apprehended, and at the inquest a verdict was given that she had strangled and murdered the child.

OUTRAGE AT A SCOTCH COLLIERY.—On Sunday morning, about two o'clock a distantly outrage was perpetrated at Pollok Colliery, near Glasgow. The colliery pay office is situated at the pit, near Pollok Farm, and it appears that, for the convenience of the workmen, a few pounds of gun cotton are kept there. The office was left all right till fire in it at six o'clock on Saturday night. It is one person accustomed in the morning open the door, and, it is believed, broken in during Saturday night or Sunday morning, and having lain a train to the powder barrels of powder known to be there, the explosion was the complete demolition of the building. The colliery books were fortunately uninjured, the safe having withstood the shock of the explosion, but everything else was blown to atoms. An outrage of a similar character was perpetrated a short time ago in the neighbourhood of Paisley, but the culprits have not yet been discovered

MY OPPOSITE NEIGHBOUR.

So the time came round when I, paid my long pretended visit to Darling, the incidents of which have nothing to do with my present story; and on my return journey I was to see instead of the several free of my opposite neighbour, a staring bill with "Apartments to let" displayed in the parlour window. I summoned my landlady immediately.

Former interviews, she said, he, I am sorry my memory is so treacherous, but I really cannot recal it.

Mr. Lawrence seemed puzzled to account for the present interview, and, I fancy, considered it an unwarrantable intrusion.

I do not wonder that you do not recognise me, said Leigh. Your years work a change in appearance.

Especially when a man cultivates a beard, I remarked.

Mr. Lawrence looked from one to the other inquiringly.

My present object is to renew a suit that was then unfavourably received, said Leigh, and to ask your permission once more to pay my addresses to Miss Hastings. If I can win her consent—

Mr. Marston!—is it possible. I thank you for your generosity—I may say chivalrous behaviour. If my daughter accepts you, I shall give her to you with pleasure. And, in extenuation of my former rejection, I may say that I was totally unaware of your connection with the family.

Not more unaware than myself, said Leigh.

And, resumed Mr. Hastings, having a prejudice, perhaps you will call it, in favour of good birth, I felt bound to reject the offer, however advantageous in other respects.

At this moment I saw Clare pass the window and heard her knock at the door.

My daughter has returned, said Mr. Hastings, as we heard her voice as she went up stairs. I will send for her.

Excuse me, Mr. Hastings, I remarked, but if you will allow me, I will speak to her first of the two.

Certainly, certainly, madam. He rang the bell, and the smart young woman appeared. Take this lady to Miss Hastings apartment, he said, with an imperial air.

The young woman seemed in considerable awe of him. She preceded me up stairs in silence, and tapped at an attic door.

Miss Hastings, your pa' desired me to say a lady wishes to see you.

The door opened, and Clare started at seeing me—a start of surprise and pleasure, her pale face irradiated by one of those rare smiles that are like a gleam of sunshine.

My dear Miss Wilmot, how I have longed to see you! How did you discover us.

My dear girl, my good friend, how pale you look! Ah you have worked too hard, and this London smoke is not so invigorating as the sea breezes.

Very dull and dismal, and her large dark eyes were full of tears.

And as the great case is lost, Clare. I said, after we had exchanged many questions as to our mutual welfare.

Yes, irrerievably, she replied. And really, I am glad it is settled; it is like the removal of an incubus from my heart; and when you come down to Hastings it will be better for him; the feverish anxiete and suspense will vanish. But oh, Miss Wilmot, what it has cost him in health and energy and mental prostration.

Do you remember, Clare, a little conversation we had about flowers, and some thriving bent in the sun, and some in the shade.

Yes; I am one of the shady flowers, she replied; but I do not repine now. I believe that the ruler of all events knows best.

The sunshine is coming at last, dear, said I. Try to bear the change as well as you endured the shade.

What do you mean, Miss Wilmot. I will confess the successful Chancery suitor is now below, urging another suit, I replied. Clare, the heir of Brooklyn has proposed for your hand.

Miss Wilmot I cannot think you would jest on such a subject.

It is most earnest, dear.

And without knowing me, she said. Does he think I am in a position to plead for with the fortune was superbly scornful, and her eyes sparkled with indignation. Miss Wilmot. I would not have believed that you—

Would have so insulted you, I said. Listen Clare —do you know who the heir to Brooklyn is.

There have been so many names mixed up with the business, that I scarcely know more than the claims descent from Mary Challoner through her second son.

Which second son was my grandfather, I said. Now do you guess.

A quick blush suffused her face, and the overcharged feelings found relief in rain-bow tears, for the sun was dawning in the grey sky.

Can you see him to-night, Clare. I asked, or shall I take him now as an intruder.

No I will go down presently, she replied. Oh Miss Wilmot, how good you are to me.

I will leave you to recover your surprise, and that I may leave you to recover your surprise, and the gentlemen below. I felt that she would be all alone for the present.—alone with her new-found joy.

Presently she came, her sweet face still rosy red, her dark eyes dewy, and altogether with a serious self-possession and suddenly dignity that seemed to have been born with her. She took my hand in both hers, and the overtasked brain would have found peace now, and the overtasked brain would rest. Clouds might overtake the sky for awhile—but Clare's life would no longer be passed in the shade.

Deaths.

JUDSON—September 26th, aged 16, Hannah, youngest daughter of Mr. John Judson, White Swan Inn, Rothwell.

HANDFORTH.—September 30th, aged 28, Sarah, wife of Edward Handforth, Rothwell.

242 MINERS SUMMONED FOR LEAVING WORK

At the West Riding Police-court, Leeds Town-hall, on Monday, 212 miners in the employ of Messrs J Bower and Company, Limited, West Ardsley Collieries, were summoned for having left their work on the 10th inst., on account, it was said, of a rumour being circulated to the effect that the miner's wages would be reduced 20 per cent, without any further notice than a verbal one given by the coal-masters at a recent interview between the two parties. Before the case could proceed further, however, it was stopped, there appearing to be a report in attending the proprietors of, it was estimated, 5s. each man. There was no desire to unduly press the defendents, and that if they would agree to pay the costs of the hearing up to this time, they would forego the compensation claimed. After the matter had been fully discussed, it was agreed that the cases should be withdrawn on payment of the costs incurred, viz.—the expences of the summons and one half of fees of counsel and attorney, amounting altogether to £95 13s.

A WOMAN DECAPITATED NEAR SCARBOROUGH

On Monday an old woman named Bromby, belonging to Cayton, near Scarbro', was decapitated by a passing train on the Hull and Scarbro' Railway, about half a mile south of Cayton. The woman had been out in the fields gathering sticks, and appears to have been returning with her burden when she was struck down by the train and knocked down upon the metals. Her head was severed from her body, as the train passed over her. One of her hands was also cut off. Her remains were taken to her cottage, awaiting an inquest. She was upwards of eighty years of age, and was much respected by her neighbours.

LORD PENRHYN'S QUARRYMEN.

SHOCKING DEATH OF A YOUNG LADY.

On Monday evening an accident took place at Councillor Cook's corn mill, Barnsley, by which his only daughter, Martha Ann Cook, aged 17 years, was killed, and her brother William injured. Deceased was in the mill, and whilst passing some machinery her dress was caught by a spindle, and her head dashed against the mill and ceiling, death was instantaneous. Wm. Cook, brother of deceased, attempted to rescue her, and in doing so was much injured.

CURE OF LIVER AND BILIOUS COMPLAINTS.

From the Rev. James T. Campbell, Unitarian Rectory, near Belfast.

"Gentlemen,—I have long known and appreciated the virtues of DR. PAGE WOODCOCK'S WIND PILLS, and now for the second time I have had occasion to make use of them. I had unwell take for breakfast. When about to leave home for my office I felt a pain in the region of the liver, and was unable to proceed further. I returned home, and, after a few hours' rest, took a dose of your Wind Pills, and in a short time I was perfectly free from pain, and able to attend to my business. I can recommend them to all who are suffering from biliousness, and particularly when the liver is more than usually affected. I have also found them a most excellent remedy for sick-headache. I have in cases which would not admit of more than one pill at a time, and I find that they act as a tonic to the system, and not a purgative. You can make what use you please of this communication.—I am, gentlemen, yours truly,

JAMES T. CAMPBELL."

LIVER NERVES.—CURE No. 38, 614.

Of the 38,614 cures of Dr. Page Woodcock's WIND PILLS, complaint I was wasting away for seven years, and so debilitated and reduced that I could not walk across the room. At times I was unable to retain food on my stomach, and was troubled with a dry cough, with a nervous palpitation all over, and depression, extreme nervousness, and sleeplessness. I was induced to try Dr. Page Woodcock's WIND PILLS, and, to my great surprise, found relief after taking the first dose. I persevered in taking them for some weeks, and was soon able to resume my usual occupation, and have since enjoyed excellent health.—Mr. Thomas Chorley.—March 3, 1869."

HEALTH AND STRENGTH RESTORED.

Extract from the Rev. Jno. Farrar's letter, dated Headingley College, April 17, 1872.

"I have much pleasure in stating even than the best testimonials can say that your Wind Pills have restored me to health and strength. I was much reduced by pain on receipt of my 42 stamps. Copies of 70,000 cures for 12.

New Wesleyan Chapel and School at Oulton.

LAYING OF THE FOUNDATION AND MEMORIAL STONES.

This day which has been of much thought about has at last become a thing of the past, and the noble undertaking which the Wesleyan Methodist of Oulton have set their minds upon, was fairly commenced last Saturday by the laying of the first stones of the new erection. Though the morning seemed very threatening, and the possibility of performing the outdoor ceremony under refreshing (?) showers was greatly feared, the afternoon turned out most favorably, and there was a fair attendance of on lookers from Oulton, Woodsford, Rothwell, Lofthouse, Lee Moor and several friends from Leeds and Wakefield. The plans for the new premises have been designed and prepared by Mr. John Shaw, architect, of Leeds, and the building will be superintended by him. The site to be built on includes the ground on which the old chapel stands and the land adjoining, which were two cottages and gardens, making together a very desirable and eligible piece of land. The new erection is to be of Gothic archit ctur , freely treated and adapted to the requirements of the purposes for which the chapel and school are to be used. The chapel is to be 56 feet by 47 feet in area, and will be entered through a porch rising with its spire to a height of 60 feet. On the other flank of the tower is the schoolroom, 45 feet by 20 feet, entered by a separate door, and the whole building is enclosed by a st ne iron railing. In the gable end of the chapel is a large geometrical window, 15 feet in height, filled in with ornamental tracery, and the body of which is divided into four lights, the schoolroom is also supplied with part of this window. The interior of the chapel is to be seated 300 persons, while the schoolroom will accommodate about 100 scholars. With the subject of the building, we may as well state here that the contractors are as follows: builder and mason, Mr. Wood Huggins, Rothwell; joiner, Mr. Lockwood, Leeds; and plumber, Mr. Keighley, Leeds; plasterer, Mr. Lovell, Leeds; ironmonger, Mr. J. Tennant, Leeds.

The proceedings on Saturday were commenced at three o'clock by the Rev. R. Cooke (superintendent of the Wakefield Circuit) giving out one of the hymns prepared for the occasion. After singing, the Rev. Mr. Woodhouse, of Keighley, read the 122nd and 132nd Psalms, and the Rev. Enoch Salt engaged in prayer. Another hymn was then sung, after which, Mr. Joseph Lawton, of Oulton, deposited in a cavity of the stone, a bottle, containing copies of the Leeds Mercury, Yorkshire Post, the Methodist Times, the Wesleyan Times, and a brief report of the Rev. J. Farrar's Sunday sermons), the names of trustees, &c., circuit plan, and other matters of interest.

Mr. Shann next introduced Robert Bowman Mackie, Esq., of Wakefield, referring at the same time to the fact that a number of ladies present desired to take part in the ceremony. He said he was very largely owing to the countenance and help given to the work by the late Mr. Mackie, whom he had looked upon almost as a father. He gave £100 when on his death bed. This was a noble step in the history of Oulton Methodism, and he had great pleasure in performing the noble son of a noble father, to complete his father's wish.

Mr. Mackie having stepped forward, was received with cheers, and declared, to lay the mortar and superintend the lowering of the stone; when correctly fixed, Mr. Mackie declared it properly laid, and would, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; may the blessing of God prosper the work of raising, and when declared it truly and properly laid, which announcement was received with the waving of hats, and cheers. Standing on the stone, Mr. Mackie addressed the audience.—"My Christian friends,—It gave me very great pleasure to comply with the request made on behalf of this stone. My late father took very great interest in this undertaking, and on his deathbed promised the first subscription. It is right and necessary that Methodism should have a fitting home in this village. This building is raised out of no spirit of opposition or rivalry to other churches. A Churchman myself, I am still glad to support other means of doing good. We are as Methodists not to be ashamed neither Rationalism nor Ritualism will be preached, and that there will be no attempt made here to foister the tenets of religion—I trust the liberal truths of the Gospel will ever be maintained. It was my father's hope that at some early period there should be a resident minister in this locality for Rothwell, Oulton, and Woodlesford, and I am sure it would be highly beneficial to the cause here. I heartily wish you success, and trust the blessing of God will be upon your work, and that it will be a blessing to the whole neighbourhood for generations to come."

Mr. Mackie desired the committee not to present him with a silver trowel, as he would bring with him one which had been used by his late father on a similar occasion at East Moor Chapel. Mr. Mackie's address was received with cheers.

The laying of the memorial stones was next proceeded with the ladies being separately conducted by Mr. Mason or Mr. Shann to the stone allotted them, and, after touching the mortar, and tapping the stone, declared it to be stone well and truly laid. The following are the names of the ladies in the order in which they laid the memorial stones: Mrs. Shann (for Mrs. Wilson) £25; Mrs. Cookson, £25; Mrs. Roberts, £25; Mrs. Hall, £25; Mrs. Parkinson, £25; Miss Woodhead, £25; Mrs. Wright, £25; Mrs. Mason, £25; the first-mentioned lady laid the corner stone at the left hand of the building; the second, the one between the corner and the foundation stone, and so on in rotation, there being four memorial stones in front, four on the side, and the foundation stone below the tower. Each lady was presented with a mallet and silver trowel, bearing the following inscription:

"Presented to Mrs. (lady's name) on the occasion of laying a memorial stone for the Wesleyan Methodist Chapel and School at Oulton, October 17th, 1874."

A basket was next placed on the foundation stone, in which the children, teachers, and friends placed their donations and collections, the secretary (Mr. Jeffreys) announcing the names and amounts; after which, a collection on the ground was made.

The proceedings next sung, and the company was then addressed by the Rev. J. Farrar (Governor of Headingley College), who said it was now 138 years since Methodism was established in this village, and he said on leaving "there was a little company, but they indeed love as brethren."—Mr. Farrar thought that the proceedings of to-day indicated that though from different churches, they still "loved as brethren." The Methodist of Mackie was always associated in his mind with Wakefield Methodism, and during a ministry of 32 years he had never found a more kind and generous host and hostess than at the late Mr. Mackie's. He congratulated them on the proceedings of that day, and was greatly pleased with the beautiful chapel elevation. There is a very great improvement in all classes of buildings at the present day. He showed how the more houses of the poor, the middle class, and the nobs were greatly in advance, and, thinking of their own beautiful homes, they might say with David, "I dwell in a house of cedar, but the House of God is under curtains." He was glad to see the ladies present, as Methodism was an enemy to needless and useless extravagance. Turning to the necessity for having a preacher of power, he said that "whatever system controls the oral word" the preaching of the gospel had been the great and until very recently the only means of conveying the truth, and to let them dwell on the abilities and powers of the rising ministry, and believed they need had such men of power and intelligence. He trusted that they would ever speak plainly, and so as to be understood; call a spade, a spade; let their words be few, but full of meaning; avoid all possibilities, a nebulous mass of latent potion in fact, let let them speak in the plainest possible words. He again congratulated them on the success of their undertaking, and concluded his address.

The doxology was then sung, and the benediction pronounced.

A very agreeable tea was provided in the old chapel, which had been demuded of the pews downstairs to make room for the tea meeting, and presided over by ladies, being pulled down to commence the new buildings.

At half-past six o'clock the public meeting was opened in the chapel by the singing of the third hymn on the programme. Prayer was offered by the Rev. E. Salt. Rev. Farrar announced the first hymn, and Rev. R. Cooke, introduced Mr. Reynolds, of Wakefield, who had been advertised to preside.

Mr. Reynolds, on taking the chair was well received, and among other remarks, said that though they had been advertised to preside at a meeting, he had spent most of his life in a place far more fairly circumstanced than they were, and there was a small cottage, and without the hope of raising a large sum. He was glad to see they were likely to succeed. He was gratified to hear Mr. Farrar's remarks about beautiful chapels, and thought barns and ugly chapels did not tend to excite devotional feelings.

The Chairman then called on Mr. Shann to make a statement.

On coming forward, Mr. Shann expressed his pleasure at Mr. Reynolds's presence among them, and then set the history of the movement in which they were engaged. By means of subscriptions and £100 given by the late Mr. Mackie, Sewing Meeting, £1,000 had been raised; the collections on Sunday were £12 2s., and eight ladies who had laid memorial stones, with Mr. Mackie's subscription, amounted to £225; by means of cards distributed among 28 children, they had realised £8; the cards of teachers and friends had produced £200, the collections in the afternoon amounted to £14 18s. 6d., while the offerings laid on the stone brought up the amount to £488 17s. 10d. He also stated that a brother-in law of his, who was not a subscriber to the work, had promised, if they got £475, to make it up £500, so they claimed that now, and, with the sale of old chapel, their total owing was £1,343 17s. 10d.—Mr. Shann referred to the great difficulties and expenses they had had, and considered they had still a large sum.

Mr. Cain, of Headingley College, then spoke highly of the manner of the proceedings, and contrasted with the school, and trusted their undertaking would be carried to a successful and happy termination.

Rev. E. Salt next spoke, and in a thoughtful and thoughtful address, showed the influence and meaning of religion and religious exercises, and the reference to sentiments sometimes expressed, assured his hearers religion was a greater power than ever, and that Methodism was never more likely to be useful than now. Every one would have to adapt their modes and machinery to the advance of the times, and wanted by approving of the style of their chapel, and wishing in every success.

The collection was then made.

The Rev. Cooke then moved, and Mr. Walker seconded, "That the thanks of this meeting be presented to Mr. Mackie, Esq., to the Ladies who laid the memorial stones, and to the Ladies who presided at the tables.

Mr Mason proposed, and Mr. Jeffreys seconded, a vote of thanks to the chairman.

The evening collection was £12s. 6d.

It was decided in the meeting that the Rev. Dr. Hunting, opened the present day, Sammy Hick should the first tone, and Mr. Bilton, of Woodsford, the second one.

Woodlesford Cricket Club Annual Supper.

On Monday evening last, about thirty members and friends of the above club sat down to tea in the large room of Mr Jonathan Craven, the "Two Pointers' Inn," Woodlesford.

The supper provided was of a very profuse and substantial description, and from its excellent character, evoked the hearty approval of all present.

On the cloth being removed a general meeting was held, Mr W. H. Higgins occupying the chair.

The secretary next read the financial report, which showed the club to be in a flourishing condition, notwithstanding the unusually large number of defeats sustained during the season. The income during the season has amounted to £37 5s. 2½d., a considerable portion of which has been derived from the charges for admission to the ground, a system which was introduced for the first time this season, with a result which justified the committee in continuing it next year. The expenditure on the other hand has reached £28 12s. 6d., leaving a balance in hand of £8 12s. 8½d., against £6 7s. 6d. on the commencement of the season.

The club has engaged in 21 matches with the following results:—Won 8, lost 11, drawn 2. Lock-up matches were played in a most close, account of the opposition being unaccustomed with the rules of the game. The prize last for the highest average is gained by Mr E. Blake, he having played in 9 innings, (in which he has been not out 4 times one only, 108 runs) up an average of 12. Mr F. Hartley, who last year obtained the prize bat, takes the belt presented by Mr Craven, for the second score, having played in 23 innings for 207 runs, and averaging 9. Several others have obtained good scores, the highest amount in a single innings

Rothwell Times.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1874.

Our First Birthday.

YES, 'tis a fact, the Rothwell Times has weathered the difficulties and dangers of its first year, and to-day appears before the public to receive your congratulations and good wishes for the future.

We cannot but feel some pride and gladness that our protegé has reached its first anniversary. Like other parents, we celebrate joyfully our child's first birthday, proud in the fact of its growth in the past year to its present size of 42 columns, and though other recurrences of the day may take place, there is never precisely the same degree of thankfulness and joy as that which accompanies the entry of the first return of the first-born child's natal day. We therefore, as the parents of the Rothwell Times, most heartily present our congratulations, feeling certain that its future life will be prolonged, and that it will become every week both stronger, wiser, and more useful to the friends and readers for whose benefit it came into the world.

Like the first year of other children, the Rothwell Times has encountered the accustomed number and variety of troubles, but, fortunately, those who prophesied its decay by consumption, its extinction by the law, or its death by high fever, have been deceived, and our child is still in the land of the living, in the best of health, increasing both in stature and knowledge' and looking forward to the time when it shall become 'a perfect man' among its contemporaries.

We believe the use of our columns for letters of general importance has tended to support or guide the movements of our local authorities, while the publication of the doings and proposals of our Board of Health has given such light and information to the public as they could not otherwise have obtained, and kept them posted up in all the items of local income and expenditure. The reports of public meetings, lectures, sermons, concerts, &c., have also extended to those who were not present, a digest of the proceedings, and also served to recall to those who were present the occurrences of the day. In many cases such reports form a pleasing memento of words spoken or deeds performed. These are among the special benefits which can only be obtained through a local newspaper, and should commend themselves to everyone as reasons why it (i.e. Rothwell Times) should be supported by all well wishers for the improvement and advance of the town and neighbourhood. Besides these advantages, we think we may claim an improvement in the state of crime in Rothwell especially, as due very largely to the publicity given to all local court news in our paper; and, if this claim is a correct one, it behoves all, on the score of economy, to assist in still further increasing the circulation of the paper, that the burden of rates may not be increased by a larger amount of crime. As our court-news reporter is resident in Wakefield, and is thoroughly impartial we do not alter his reports, therefore if we have offended some, we offer the above facts, and while sorry to offend anyone we cannot but act without fear or favour in this respect.

Any retrospect of the year we shall defer till the end of December, and in drawing to a conclusion, would again impress on the friends of education and local advancement, the importance of sustaining and enlarging our circulation by being subscribers to this journal.

We should be glad if the villages round us, would make more use of the paper, and either give us notice of events to come off, when we should have pleasure in our reporter being present, or forward reports which we would be most happy to insert.

We should also be glad to receive notices of marriages and deaths which are inserted free, and of any occurrence which would be interesting or profitable.

We would now most heartily thank those friends, who have regularly supported us by their subscriptions and advice, as well as those who have forwarded literary contributions, and trusting they will continue to do so, and will influence others in the same direction, conclude by sending forth our Vol 2. No 53, with wishes for MANY HAPPY RETURNS OF THE DAY.

District Police News.

EXTENSIVE THEFT OF PIGEONS AND RABBITS AT METHLEY.—John Lewis, a miner, living at Methley Junction, was placed in the dock upon a charge of having, on the 20th inst., feloniously stolen fifteen pigeons, and two tame rabbits, the property of Mr Edwin Chadwick, farmer, Pinder Green, Methley Junction.—Police Sergeant Hodgson Denham, deposed that he went to Methley Junction, and met a man named Isaac Gabriel, who I searched; not finding anything on him I let him go, as I did not then know exactly what had taken place. Hearing a knocking a short distance off, I went to a house occupied by the prisoner, where I saw a light. I knocked at the door and asked for admittance. The light was immediately put out, but not a word was spoken. I knocked a second time, and the inquiry was made from within "who's there?" I replied "the police," and prisoner then asked "what do you want?" I said "I want to see Lewis," and eventually, after a delay of about five minutes, the door was opened. I went in, accompanied by P.-C. George Gill. When I first got in the prisoner was standing in the middle of the room, partly undressed, and his wife was sitting on a chair. I got a light and told the prisoner that I had reason to believe that he was concerned in a robbery, and that I should have to search his house before I left. He said "very well." I then asked him where his boots were, and he gave me those that were in a state dry, and said—"Those are them I had on last." He had fetched them out of a cupboard. Not believing his statement, I went to the cupboard and examined it myself, and found a pair which were wet and warm, and dirty with cow dung. I asked him how he accounted for that, and he replied that he had not had them on that day. I said this statement could not be true, and searched the house, noticing that his wife was sitting in a peculiar position on a chair, I ordered her to get up but she refused, and the request was repeated several times before she complied, when eventually she got up. I noticed the rabbit lying on the floor, having been concealed under her petty coats. I took it up, and examined it, and found that it was quite warm, as if recently killed. I told the prisoner that he would have to get ready and go with me, as I should charge him with having stolen the rabbit from Mr Chadwick's farm. In answer, he said, "well I shall be as well there as at home, for I have nothing to eat here, I shall get something to eat there." He also said "as well like me alone" — as with me. I afterwards found traces of a field, near the railway, and into another field where there was a hay-stack, some 200 yards from the prisoner's house. On examining that stack, I found several pigeons (deceased) concealed about the stack and covered over with hay. They also were slightly warm, and felt as though they had been recently killed. On the 21st instant, I further charged the prisoner with stealing the pigeons, when he replied "I never had them." After other evidence, the prisoner was duly cautioned, but made no statement. He was then fully committed for trial at the next sessions.

DRUNK ON THE HIGHWAY.—John Eyres, a coal miner, for being drunk on the highway at Rothwell on the 17th, inst.—proved by Police-constable W. Johnson—had 5s to pay.——Stephen Hudson, for a like offence at Rothwell, on the same night—also proved by Police-constable Johnson—was mulcted in the usual fine of 5s and costs.

CASES OF DRUNKENNESS AND REFUSING TO QUIT.—Thomas Bullock, a young man, was charged with refusing to quit the house of Riley Cheesebrough, the Prince of Wales beerhouse at Carlton on the 16th inst.—The case was proved by Police-constable Barker and Mrs Cheesebrough, and it appeared that the defendant had gone into the house in a drunken state and refused to go away—and had to be ejected by the officer.—Fined 7s 6d and costs, £1 1s in all, or fourteen days' imprisonment.

Rothwell Local Board Meeting.

The usual fortnightly meeting of the Board took place on Monday last, when all the members were present.

The minutes of last meeting had been read and confirmed, a conversation ensued as to the complaints now so frequent, of the badness of the water running from the Sterroid Well pipes, it being of a very different quality from the water obtained at the fountain, and causing a suspicion that through some flaw, other water found its way into the well pipe. It was decided to thoroughly examine the part in which the flaw is supposed to exist, and to remedy all defects.

In reply to the Chairman's enquiry, Mr Hargreaves said the Board is sinking a well at the top of Butcher Lane, now about 18 yards deep, that there was good water there, but not in sufficient quantity. Mr Harwood would also like to sink a well in the poor-house ground, and another near Mr John Brown's property, at both of which places water would be obtained at 8 or 9 yards depth.

These three wells and the amended Sterroid Well supply, would then serve every part of the town very well, at present.

Several members again asked about the levelling and surveying to be done by Mr Crutchley, but no definite result was arrived at, part of the Board maintaining that the matter must be decided on, before the surveyor could properly arrange his plans, while others thought that as the sewage must go down the town, it was unnecessary to wait considerations as to the exact point of outlet. It was thought also, that as there are no water closets the liquid might be carried down into the tanks and the overflow directed into the beck, and that the Local Government Board would not oppose that.

The Chairman thought they should carry out a resolution for Mr Crutchley to meet the Board and arrange with Mr Farrer for an outlet which was accordingly resolved upon.

In reference to several objectionable and disgraceful nuisances in the town, the Inspector stated that Mr Roodhouse had that day taken steps towards improving his back yard, but that nothing had yet been done at Mr Calverley's, near the Cross. The Sanitary Committee who had visited the places also stated that this was the worst one in Rothwell, the privy being built next the house and that the house wall was quite damp. The Board are determined to summon persons not complying with their notices.—The Chairman said that it was of use the Board trying to improve the state of health and to prevent fever in the district, if people did not try to keep themselves from contracting it, and their houses decent; no Local Board had got on better, and they must go into the sewage system at once.

Mr Hargreaves then introduced a resolution, That the Board sink a well in the poor-house grounds, and another near Mr Brown's property.

Mr Kendrew seconded.

Mr Smith proposed as an amendment that the question of sinking well in the poor-house ground be postponed till the overseers had been consulted. On being put to the vote, it was carried.

Some discussion ensued as to the right of the Board to sink a well in the abovehouses' ground, but on being put, the original motion received 5 votes, and was therefore carried.

In reply to the Chairman, Mr Sanderson said there was no water in Royds Green, they had it all to fetch.

Owing to a slight error in the report of last meeting, some trouble had been caused by the leaving work of some highway's men. It appears the members of the Board was not to give notice to the other Hunslet men employed on the road, but to replace Dufton by employing Wilson as foreman. The reporter while sorry that any difficulty should arise from incorrectly interpreting the wishes of the Board, pointed out the desirability of having proposed resolutions written, as is usual in public meetings, and thereby preventing any misunderstanding whatever.

Mr Dickinson strongly objected to the conduct of Mr Lunn in moving the resolution (being on the High-way Committee), but Mr Sanderson and others defended the part Mr Lunn had taken in the matter, and thought that if Mr Dickinson as a member was not at his post, any member of the Board, if he saw a thing which he considered wrong, had a right to mention it at the Board meeting. Mr Lunn also stated that Mr Dickinson that his motives were quite pure in that respect, and was sorry if Mr Dickinson felt aggrieved, as he had not the slightest personal feeling in the matter.

The Medical Officer stated that there were only two new cases of fever in the town, to his knowledge, and that the district was in as healthy a state as most places at this season of the year. There were cases of influenza, bronchial colds, &c., but not more than is usual.

The Doctor also complained of the disgraceful state of Mr Calverley's property before mentioned.

Mr Lunn stated there had now been received £14 11s. 04d. towards the Sterroid water supply.

WON AND LOST.

The dusky gold of unnumbered stars was sparkling through the darkness of a beautiful Venetian night; the antique clock had just struck nine, and drowsily smoking his cigar on the balcony, mechanically counted the strokes without realising the onward creeping of time.

"I think she loves me," he mused, watching the far-off lights that seemed to float upon the crystal distance of the Adriatic Sea. "Surely I cannot be mistaken."

The major was dark and handsome, with features possessing regularity and beauty, and brown misty eyes, where the light slept dreamy quiescence—a man in the full prime of life. And as he sat there watching the stars and sky, there was a soft rustle on the balcony beside him, and an arch, triumphant little laugh.

"So I have found, you out at last, Major Wentworth!" were the words exclamation that met his ear.

"Were you looking for me Mrs Vail?" said the major.

Lillian Vail was a woman, every inch of her, and in her woman nature she felt the strong, subdued tenderness of the heart that spoke out through his words.

"Looking for you—no," said Lilian, with a charming simulation of total indifference; "but I wondered were you had gone."

Major Wentworth tossed his cigar over the railof the balcony with a strange flutter as he spoke; he felt somehow that the hour of his destiny was nigh.

Why do you do that?" she questioned. "I shall not stay more than a minute.

"Stay, Lilian, be pleased. I must speak to you. Lilian came out a step or two further on the balcony, and took the seat that Major Wentworth moved forward.

And now what his this wonderful secret! she laughed, looking up to the face of the man who stood close to her, leaning against the rail of the balcony with folded arms—an erect, graceful figure.

It is no secret, Lilian, he said composedly; only that I love you; you must have known it long ago.

Heavens! And I could almost have sworn you hated me! she exclaiming backwards No, Gerrase—not another word. I must not listen.

He looked her with a wonder that almost amounted to terror. Was this the way women received a declaration of love?

I have a right to expect an answer, Lilian, said the major. I have a right to know, from you own lips, whether or no you will marry me.

I cannot marry you, Gerrase, she replied.

You cannot marry me! he repeated slowly.

Lilian, Lilian, have you never loved me?

Oh Gerrase, do not ask me. Do not compel me to disclose my own weakness, she sobbed.

My darling he said, taking both her hands in his, and looking into her eyes with a searching gaze, I believe you, Gerrase, she said; I have loved, you, Lilian.

Yet you will not marry me, Lilian? he asked.

I tell you it is impossible, she replied. Oh, if I had but come away weeks ago—if I had ,only died, Gerrase!

He checked her hysteric sobs with gentle words.

I am to understand, then, that there is some deep mystery here, he said: What is it, Lilian? Way can you not marry me?

I am married already, Gerrase! she replied.

I know— know he said, with a puzzled look; but you are a widow.

I am not a widow, Gerrase, she replied. My husband is still living.

Lilian! he said relinquishing his hold of her hand.

It is not my fait Gerrase, she sobbed. To me he has always been dead; but he his still living, as he will till death. And then she told him all her griefs.

My poor Lilian! he murmured. And I would have cherished you as tenderly!

Do you blame me now Gerrase? she whispered.

No Lilian; we must bear our burdens as best we may, he replied, sadly.

Mine will always be less grevious for the knowledge that you have loved me. And now dearest, we part for ever.

But you will love me still? she said; with wild startled eyes.

For ever, Lilian! he replied.

When the guests next morning at the break fast-table one accustomed face was missing. Major Wentworth had returned to England.

Gone! echoed the young girl—how so all shall miss him; shall we not, Mrs Vail?

Certainly we shall miss him, replied Lilian calmly.

From England, Major Gerrase Wentworth sailed for America, where the war had just broken out, about as indifferent to what could befall him as a man well can be. Accepting a commission in the Southern army, he passed through the four years war scathless.

Fate is a strange problem through Major Wentworth Death—an honourable death—would have been a boon to me; yes how many times have I stood unharmed, and seen all around me those who had nearly ceased to make life sweet to them. My very destiny is a mystery to me. Promised to Lilian; I wonder if she is half as happy as I am.

It is often hard to live patiently in the driven ground, and another near Mr Brown's property.

Trade Disputes.

A numerously attended meeting of coal-owners in the West Yorkshire district was held at the Great Northern Railway Station Hotel, in Leeds, on Tuesday. Mr Tennant, M.P., in the chair, to receive the answer of the lodges to the proposal of the masters to submit the question of the proposed reduction of 20 per cent. to arbitration, on condition of a reduction of 10 per cent. being accepted pending a decision. The lodges virtually declined to accept this proposition. At the meeting on Tuesday, after a long discussion, the masters renewed their offer of arbitration under certain conditions, one of them being that, if the miners preferred, arbitration should be immediately proceeded with, and work not to be resumed until a settlement should be arrived at. Mr Dixon, as representing the men, declined to express any opinion on this modified offer; and when the meeting separated, a settlement of the dispute appeared as remote as before.

The arbitrators appointed to decide the dispute between the Dartlands coalowners and their workmen as to a proposed reduction of 20 per cent. in wages, met again on Tuesday, in the Westminster Palace Hotel, London. After a short sitting, it was found that they could not agree, and the matter was accordingly referred to the umpire, Mr Russell Gurney, M.P., Recorder of London.

Case of Emberzlement.

At the Leeds borough sessions on Tuesday, the Court was occupied all day with the trial of Robert Wilson Ambler, for many years master and superintendent of the Leeds Industrial Schools, who was charged with having embezzled various sums of money and appropriated goods belonging to the institution. He was found guilty, and sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment.

TWENTY EIGHT YEARS' INVARIABLE SUCCESS.

"Gentlemen,—I have long known and appreciated the value of DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, at one time I had to look it for 18 months, and found it do me more good than all the medicine I had taken in that time. I am happy to say that I am entirely relieved from the distressing symptoms of liver complaint, indigestion, spasms in the stomach, and pressure of blood to the head, from which I suffered for years, and which had become chronic. I have also given it to many of my parishioners with the most beneficial results, and shall be happy to answer any letters of inquiry as to the efficacy of this excellent food. I remain, gentlemen, yours faithfully, JAMES T. CAMPBELL."

LIVER NERVOUS.—CURE No. 58,614.

Of the Marchioness de Brehan :—In consequence of liver complaint, I was very low and nervous, unable to eat, digest, and slept at intervals. I was unable to read, write, or do anything, and was reduced to my last bottle of wine. Your Revalenta Arabica Food has restored me to perfect health, and the most intolerable nervousness has entirely disappeared, and I am now able to read, write, and do anything. I feel deeply grateful for the benefit I have received from your excellent food, and shall be happy to make any sacrifice to secure my useful position.—Marchioness de Brehan, Nantes, April 17, 1857.

CURE OF CONSUMPTION BY DU BARRY'S FOOD.

"DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD is the best remedy for consumption, and has been the means, under Providence, of preserving to me the life of a dear wife, who had been given up by her medical attendants as a confirmed consumptive, and was reduced to the last stage of existence, when she commenced your food, which restored her health and strength in a few weeks, and she has remained well and strong ever since. I have a thousand times expressed my gratitude for the benefit I have derived from it, and shall be happy to answer any inquiries.—JAMES T. CAMPBELL."

HEALTH AND STRENGTH RESTORED

without medicine or expense, by DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, the best known remedy for indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, diarrhœa, flatulency, sickness, and nausea. Has the best effects in the most obstinate cases of nervousness, sleeplessness, cough, asthma, bronchitis, consumption, croup, hoarseness, all chest and lung complaints, inflammation, debility, and all disorders of the blood, liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys, and urinary organs, even when all other means have failed. Thousands of cases of the most wonderful cures can be produced, many of which have been considered hopeless. A few are quoted below.

TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS' DYSPEPSIA.

From which I have suffered great pain, nervousness, and debility, for which I have consulted the most eminent physicians, but received little or no benefit, and have taken many quack medicines, &c.—PARKES D. BINGHAM, Captain Royal Navy, London, 1st December, 1856.

CONSTIPATION, ASTHMA, &c.—CURE No. 49,833.

Of 50 years' indescribable agony from dyspepsia, constipation, asthma, cough, nervousness, sleeplessness, sickness, and vomiting, by DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD.—MARIA OGLE.

CURE No. 32,427 OF CONSUMPTION.

CURE OF STOMACHIC AND ABDOMINAL DISORDER.

"It is with sincere pleasure I bid testimony to the excellence of DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, and to confirm all that has been said in its favour by so many friends. Its healing virtues have restored me to the blessings of perfect health, after I had suffered from stomachic and abdominal disorders, and applied in vain all the remedies recommended to me. I am happy to add that DU BARRY'S Valuable REVALENTA FOOD manifested themselves in my case in a manner almost miraculous. Its effects on my system were instantaneous, and I was restored to the blessings of perfect health, from which I have ever since enjoyed.—PERRY DE LA HITOLEE, Rue Vaneau, 49, Faubourg St. Germain, Paris."

CURE No. 68,471 OF GENERAL DEBILITY.

"I am happy to say that your REVALENTA ARABICA has, for two years and I am 80 years of age, restored me to health and strength. I have not felt the want of my dinner since I commenced your food, and, at my advanced age, my sight has improved so much as to enable me to read and write without spectacles. I can walk with ease four miles, and, in short, I feel once more quite young and hearty. I speak warmly in favour of your food, as I owe my restoration to health entirely to it.—THOMAS HEWLETT, Bachelor of Theology, late Curate of Hilton, Dorsetshire."

CURE OF LIVER, NERVOUS, & BILIOUS COMPLAINTS.

"For 20 years I suffered most painfully from nervous and bilious attacks, palpitation of the heart, and an extreme nervousness which rendered me incapable of attending to my business. I resolved to try DU BARRY'S excellent REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, and perfect health has been restored to me. I can now take exercise, am always well, and is enabled to take long walks.—ATANASIUS LA BARRERA, Major of Tropps."

CURE OF DYSPEPSIA AND NAUSEA.

"During 10 years I have suffered fearfully from nervousness and dyspepsia, and could not take any food but the lightest, despite all medical aid, they could not stop the vomiting. I was induced to try DU BARRY'S delicious food, and from the first spoonful I took relief, and gradually recovered.—Mrs. PERCY."

CURE No. 30,212 OF EPILEPTIC FITS.

Allen reports the cure of his daughter of E. Leptic Fits, by DU BARRY'S FOOD.

CURE No. 16,916 OF BRONCHITIS.

CURE No. 32,060 OF PARALYSIS.

OF DEBILITY, BAD DIGESTION & IRRITABILITY.

"DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA has produced an entire change in my health. I was afflicted with debility, bad digestion, and irritability, with terrible irritation of the stomach, and had digested nothing for months. Your food has given me strength and appetite.—E. COMPARET, Parish Priest, St. Romain-les-Iserlohn."

CURE OF NEURALGIA AND SLEEPLESSNESS.

"DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD has cured me of Neuralgia, which I had suffered from for seven years, and which caused me great pain. I had no sleep for three months, and was reduced to a mere skeleton. I am now in perfect health, and can sleep well.—Rev. JOHN HUNTER, Parish Priest, Valognes, (Manche)."

ASTHMA.—CURE No. 62,848.

"I suffered from asthma for 30 years, during which time I obliged me to get up four or five times every night to relieve me. I had also a bad cough, which is entirely gone. I am happy to have taken DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA for the last six months.—Rev. JOHN BOILLOT, Parish Priest, Belabrelles, Orne."

CURE OF DYSPEPSIA AND LIVER COMPLAINT.

"I have already derived much benefit from the use of DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD, and feel it my duty to the public to state that you are at liberty to make use of my name, that others may know you may do their patients good.—Dr. Pacini, Nice, Feb. 15, 1860."

CURE OF No. 70,429 OF EXHAUSTION.

Rev.—My daughter, my housekeeper, and myself, have been greatly benefited by DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD. It has been especially useful to my daughter, who was reduced to a mere skeleton, and could not retain anything on her stomach. By DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD.—Rt. Rev. MONSEIGNEUR, Bishop of Pella, Vicar-Apostolic of Norway.

School Board for Rothwell.

No one with ears to ear, and eyes to see can have failed to know by this time, that a School Board is to be formed for the township of Rothwell and Thorp Stapleton, and that persons of various opinions have been nominated for the five seats of which the Board will consist. Already private meetings have been held, at which gentlemen representing different shades of idea, have been proposed and for whose election, those individuals are determined to use their best endeavours.

On the sentiments of the several parties we shall not make the slightest remark, but we would urge every voter to get to the bottom of the views and intentions of the several gentlemen soliciting his suffrages, and to act with his eyes open, knowing exactly the result which his vote will have, and electing, so far as such ratepayer is concerned, the person or persons whom he considers the most suitable for the office.

We trust none will be influenced by favour or fear but that every man will act conscientiously, and for the greatest benefit to the children of the townships.

Mr Curzon's Lecture on Charles Dickens.

On Tuesday evening, the members and friends of the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute had the very great pleasure of listening to a lecture on Charles Dickens, by the clever and well-known agent and lecturer of the Yorkshire Union of Mechanics' Institutes.

As is, unfortunately, almost invariably the case, the audience though moderate, was nothing else so large as such a speaker and such a theme should have attracted, but to those who were there a most agreeable treat was supplied.

Mr Mason, who had been announced to preside, being unable to be present, the Rev. A. J. Irvin kindly and willingly took the chair and introduced Mr Curzon.

The lecturer, in commencing his address, with his usual rare, readable facility in sketching, drew a capital portrait of Charles Dickens' head on the blackboard, which seems to be to him an indispensable accessory in his delineations of men and subjects.

The various beauties and originalities of the great novelist's works were most skilfully pointed out, and the utmost constant recurrence of portraitures, the subtleties of humour and wit in every-day life.

He commenced, David Copperfield, the best of his books, and urged his hearers to read carefully the productions of this author.

Oliver Twist roughly reading of Dickens' works was given, that being "The Trial Scene." Pickwick, the intermission, gentleness, and its quaint emphasis displayed by the author were duly considered.

As an instance of the quiet humour of Dickens, the lecturer read a scene of his, from Dombey and Son, the subject submission to wealthier. His first being exceedingly cutting.

Mr. Curzon quoted the private character of Dickens in respect to his domestic life, and made no mention of his wife, sorry not to connect in speaking in her with coincidence that there was no breach of morality, but that the sudden rise of fortune and higher social position led she failed or was unable to follow in the same bright path of honour and fame.

He concluded with the sketch by maintaining that Dickens was a noble and a useful life-work, and that his works had drawn the veil of many a wrong, and obtaining its redress, had comforted many a sorrowing one, had instilled pure and brighter sentiments in the heart of English society, and that his work was done well and with an eye to the elevation of his countrymen and the advance of morality and justice.

Votes of thanks having been accorded to the lecturer and to the chairman, the meeting separated.

School Board Meeting at Rothwell.

On Wednesday evening a public meeting was held in the Mechanic's Institute, Rothwell, for the purpose of hearing the views of the several candidates nominated for the School Board of Rothwell and Thorp, Stapleton.

Mr. J. R. Seanor, in proposing that Mr. S. Batty take the chair, stated that though the Hall had been taken by the committee of the Wesleyans and Primatives, every candidate was desired to state his own opinions, and was welcome to make any remarks he thought fit.

Rev. G. Heberedn had great pleasure in seconding Mr. Batty, having every confidence in his character and integrity.

Mr. Batty, accordingly was unanimously asked to preside.

Mr. Batty wished it to be perfectly understood that this meeting was for no party object, but simply to hear the sentiments of the various candidates, and trusted the ratepayers would then be better able to judge which gentlemen they would vote for.

The name of Mr. William Brown being first on the alphabetical list was called, but was not present.

A letter was read from Mr. Hall, of Woodlesford, who would support the existing schools, and would also try to carry out the provisions of the Act with an eye to economy in the education of the children.

In Mr. Hall's absence the vicar said Mr. Hall was a person of high, good character, and was himself a Sunday School teacher at Waterloo.

Mr. James Hargreaves was absent through sickness, but sent word through Mr J. Bramley, that, if elected, he should support Bible reading without dogmatic teaching.

Mr. William Hargreaves was also absent.

Rev. G. Heberdon being called upon, stated that as they had been unable by voluntary subscriptions to raise schools at Waterloo and Thwaite Gate, the Government had taken the matter up, and they must now provide accommodation by means of board schools. These two schools must be built, and in them no distinction teaching would be allowed. The Bible would be read without explanation. His principle anxiety, however, was concerning Rothwell. The church schools very materially, while it would not benefit Dissenters and others. The provisions of the conscience clause were then explained, in which it is stated that parents objecting to the religious teaching pursued in denominational schools, may send their children after, or their children may stay before, (as the case may be,) such religious instruction is given. This part of the Education Act is hung up in all schools receiving a government grant, and in the school at Rothwell. If the religious teaching was to be done away with by erecting board schools, he feared greatly for the future of Rothwell, as this teaching was all the children obtained during the week in their families in Rothwell, although there were some bright exceptions. He was wishful that his letter should not be interpreted as referring to Dissenters, but he must again repeat what he had then stated, as to there being nothing to stay the current of indifference and infidelity, if board schools were to be opened here.

Mr. T. Kendrew not replying to his name, Mr. W. Lunn next made a few remarks, the substance of which were that he would support the views of those he represented. He would be sorry to exclude the Bible, and desired that all the children should be brought up in the fear of the Lord. His wish also was that the next generation should have a thorough secular education. If elected, he assured his hearers he would do his best for the children, and with an eye to economy.

Mr. Charles Nichols urged the desirability of having a school unconnected with any denomination, and while he dared say he read the Bible as much as most people, he considered it best to exclude it altogether, and like no religious teaching whatever. He was not aware that before meeting that the Bible was read in board schools. He thought it would be found that all the candidates must meet together and try and prevent a contest, (which would be a great expense,) by some of them withdrawing. He thought whatever might be theoretically said in the heat of the election would be forgotten afterwards, and that they would be as good friends as they were to-night.

Mr. J. H. Senior next addressed the meeting, premising that he had not chosen than his present position as candidate, but that his friends had nominated him in his absence, and bowing to their wish he came forward.

Mr Heberden had boldly announced his convictions, and he respected him for it, and he too had convictions which although they might be in opposition to the vicar's, trusted he would also respect his convictions.

He considered the formation of a School Board was to secure religious equality. In reference to the existence of Church Schools, he said, all honour to those who have supported them and provided education. Dissenters should have helped, but we were not rich enough to do it, by having a day school of our own. They have done nobly; but government has undertaken better work, and will help him in the education of our children What do the parties want? Mr Heberden wishes things to remain as they are.

Another party would put the Bible out of the schools altogether. We dissenters wish to have religious equality, not supremacy, and to read the Bible without any sectarian teaching. I trust that agitation will cease and that to give future Bible teaching in our Sunday schools, and that 40 or 50 young men and women will rise up and become teachers in the Church Sunday-schools, as we have in our Wesleyan School. Is the simple reading of the Bible worthless? We think not, as a large acquaintance with it is thus obtained, which can be turned to account in our every-day teaching. As to the assertion of Mr. Heberden, that the Board has no power in this matter in Board Schools, why is it so anxiously solicited to obtain a majority of Church Candidates, if there must be some influence? As to Board Schools including in religious teaching, if I had the slightest fear that such was the case, I would withdraw from this platform to-night advocating them. I have not found this the case in other Board Schools.

Mr Seanor then went into the qualifications necessary to be a member of a School Board, and urged that those who had not had anything to do with education since they were lads themselves were not the most proper persons, but recommended had experience in training and were most deeply interested in the welfare of their children.

Let our working be for principles and men, and men only; do not send men simply because of your being able to carry them, consider qualifications.

If you wish things to remain as they are vote for the Church Candidates; if you desire to promote "irreligion and infidelity" by the exclusion of the Bible entirely vote for those who would do so; if you wish for religious equality in education and for Bible reading simply vote for the Dissenting candidates.

He concluded by urging his hearers to have no false colours, to go in for what they are; he gave all credit to those who had boldley avowed their convictions, and assured them that if they honoured him with a seat on the Board, he would try to do his duty.

Mr John Swales, as a stranger in a strange place, and among a strange people would give the Church Candidates his vote, would act independently of either Dissenters or Churchmen.

They must have a school for the locality in which he lived; there seemed to be sufficient accommodation, and he should oppose the erection of a Board School out at Rothwell.

If elected, he should carry out the School Act in its spirit and letter. He thought the Government did perfectly right in recognising existing schools; the supporters of these schools deserve the warmest thanks of the public. The other denominations had had a chance of providing day schools, but they had not taken advantage of it in Rothwell. You can get a similar education at the Church Schools as at a Board School and if you object to the religious teaching, you have the conscience clause and need not have your children at school during the time of that teaching.

He would oppose the erection of a Board School at Rothwell, because it is neither right nor necessary.

He had no sympathy with people who would exclude the Bible believing it to be the basis of England's glory, and that to take the Bible out of the School would be like taking the sun out of the firmament.

Mr Swales further stated he was in favour of compulsory attendance; if they did not send their children to school, he would make them do so.

As to the schools to be erected, he would have plain substantial buildings, fitteed up with economy and adaptation.

This completed the list of candidates and after Mr James Hopton and Mr Jonathan Bramley had made a few remarks, the chairman thanked them for the attention the audience had given and trusted they would vote for the men who would best carry out their own views.

Mr. Payne said there would be no need to erect any new schools, supposing a board school was decided for Rothwell, as there were two good rooms might be rented.

Mr. J. Senior moved a resolution that Messrs. Heberden, Swales, Seanor, Lunn, and Jas. Hargreaves are fit and proper persons for the School Board.—Mr. Hopton seconded.

Mr. Turner stated that Mr. Hall could not possibly be at the meeting, as he was engaged in some important negotiations respecting the future of Thorpe.

Rev. G. Heberden also mentioned Mr. W. Hargreaves absence as being caused by important business.

It was then moved as an amendment that the proposition be not put to this meeting.—Mr. Turner seconded.

On a show of hands, the amendment was declared carried.

Mr. Swales proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman, which Mr. Heberden seconded, thankful that such unanimity and Christianity had been exhibited.

Being put, the motion was warmly carried, and Mr. Batty having replied, the meeting broke up.

We cannot forbear remarking on the extraordinary order and decorum which characterized the meeting, the hall being quite full of men holding all shades of opinion, and although the speeches and speakers were frequently applauded, not the slightest ill-feeling was manifested.

Lofthouse Cricket Club,

The annual meeting of this club was held on Saturday evening last, at Mr. Hammond's, the Elephant and Castle Inn, when an excellent repast was served at six o'clock, to about 50 of the members.

In the absence of Mr. Charlesworth, Mr. Tomlinson was voted to the chair.—The report read by the Secretary showed the club to be in a very good condition. Mr. Lee was re-appointed secretary and treasurer, and the Committee for the year are Messrs. R. Colley, W. Crossley, W. Atkinson, J. Bentley, A. Atkinson, C. Green, and A. Charlesworth. Toasts were given, several songs, &c., were sung, and altogether a very pleasant evening was spent.

WHY SUFFER? RELIEF IS CERTAIN.—CORNS, ARTHUS, DIFFICULT OR DESEASING, are speedily cured by KAETHON'S ANODYNE LIQUEUR (recognised as Chloroform by the Medical Faculty). Extremely is so effective. One Lotion cures corns at once. They require no Opium, Morphia, or any violent drug, and may be taken by the most delicate female. Relief is obtained without rest when rubbed on the throat. The proprietor receives, constantly, letters of thanks for relief taken from those who have suffered great benefit from their use. KAETHON'S CORNS AND BUNIONS, 1s. 1½d. per bottle, may be had of all Patent Medicine Dealers, sold by Chemists in Rothwell, Leeds, and all towns in England.
CHRONIC DISTEMPER.—NO ENJOYMENT WITHOUT HEALTH.—How sad to see the wealthy in the world are laid up by disease. For some to find a family to keep without employment. And on this Floor means of living able of work. An ulcer on the leg, spreading sickle, a gouty joint, a rheumatic pain, or the various ills, will so disable any one if the affected part be well fomented with warm water, and, after dry and briskly rubbed with Holloway's ointment, healing and preventive ointment. There is no sufferer who has it and obedience to the directions accompanying it can fail to cure his complaint, however severe, in the shortest time. Holloway's Ointment is recommended or however obstinately it resists other measures C 174930.
FLORILINE.—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Florilline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevent decay, stops toothache, and imparts a peculiar purity, whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Florilline," being composed of the purest essence and extracts, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. "Florilline" is the liquid, and "Florilline" for the tooth powder," of all Chemists and Perfumers. Prepared by HENRY G. GALLEY, 146, Oxford-street, London.
THE—GLENFIELD STARCH, has been more intated then all the other starches in the world, but higher commendation could be paid to it, as all those imitators are satisfied that it is the finest starch in the market. Your laundress gets more profit on its sale, but still it is kept by all respectable grocers and oilmen, who prefer supplying their customers with the best article, to getting their own pecuniary profit. The public should insist upon having he Glenfield Starch.
A safe, permanent and speedy remedy for Pimples, Sores, Scrofula, Scurvy, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, we can with confidence recommend CLARKE'S World-famed Blood Mixture. Sold by Chemists everywhere.
I AY'S COMPOUND ESSENCE OF LINSEED, for Colds and Coughs, Asthmatic, Consumptive, or Bronchial) cures in cases out of 10.
FRIED MUSSELS, ICELAND, DUBLIN, MOSCOW, AND VIENNA.—We observe that Messrs. Bryant and May have now obtained four prize medals for their Patent Safety Matches, which are not Poisonous, contain no Phosphorus, are entirely free from fumes, and will not ignite except when rubbed on the sides of the box prepared for them. Those engaged in their manufactory are not liable to spontaneous combustion and Light only on the Box. Trade mark an Ark.
ARE YOU TO MOURNS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It relieves the child, it softens the gums, allays all soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is the Old Established and Only Genuine Remedy. Sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s 1½d per bottle.—Manufactured in New York, and at 493 Oxford-street, London.
KAY'S COMPOUND ESSENCE OF LINSEED. This marvellous remedy is by many considered a "Specific." Asthma and Bronchitis are immediately relieved by it.
JOHN S. STUDEN'S celebrated TOBACCOS and CIGARS have attained a high reputation for superior quality and fine condition.—Wholesale—Rothwell, 13, BOAR LANE, LEEDS,

SPECIAL PUBLIC NOTICE
COMPLETION
EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS AND ADDITIONS
IN HYAM AND CO.'S PREMISES,
42, BRIGGATE, LEEDS.
This is unquestionably an age of Improvement. Improvements arrest our attention wherever we turn our eyes. Public thoroughfares, bridges, buildings, monuments, ships, railways, mercantile and trading establishments, all evidence the fact above asserted. With these preliminary remarks,
HYAM and Co.
would proceed to make mention of those important Alterations and Additions to which the present announcement is specially devoted.
It is most extraordinary, but nevertheless true, that the career of HYAM and CO. has been marked with a success that is totally unprecedented, as the following details will show.
On March 2nd, 1841, the old premises, No. 9, Briggate were successfully opened, but in the course of time they were found totally inadequate to the requirements of their vast increase of trade. HYAM and CO. then removed in 1849 to far more commodious premises, viz., 42, Briggate, but their trade still increasing and surging on like the waves of the sea, compelled them in 1860 to make a further move, and now again in 1874 they have been compelled to enlarge their premises, and make them as large again as they were before.
If it be asked what has rendered these re-arrangements necessary? the reply is—
A VAST AND STILL INCREASING TRADE.
Ample and Commodious as HYAM and CO.'S Premises were previous to the Additions and Improvements which they have now undergone, they proved inadequate for the large requirements of so extensive a business as that of the Proprietors; it is certain, however, that now every emergency is sufficiently provided for, and the Proprietors, in thus expanding the scope of their operations, have fully in view
ADEQUACY OF SPACE
AND
FURTHER FACILITIES & ACCOMMODATION, and the public will now have ample opportunities of judging for themselves whether those desirable objects have or have not been attained.
Previous to entering into a brief description of the various Departments of their Establishment, HYAM and Co. would observe that by those important Additions to their Premises they are now
NEARLY DOUBLE IN SIZE,
AND
COMPRISING FOUR FLOORS,
EACH OVER 150 FEET IN LENGTH!
On the GROUND FLOOR, on the right, is the Hosiery Department, 50 feet in extent, continued on the same hand by the Men's Department, over 100 feet; continued by a Commodious Trying-on Room. On the left hand is the Lace Department, 25 feet long Approached by an easy Staircase, on the FIRST FLOOR, is the large and handsome Juvenile Department, and also Bespoke Department; together with commodious Trying-on Room, Measuring Rooms and Offices.
On the SECOND FLOOR are the commodious Warehouses, where are stored the large Reserved Stocks for replenishing the various Departments. And on this Floor also are arranged the Spacious Cutting Rooms, Work Taking-in Rooms, and Waiting Rooms.
Extending over the whole of the THIRD FLOOR are arranged the Lady Closerist, and Well Ventilated Workshops, capable of accommodating nearly two hundred workpeople.
On the BASEMENT are arranged the following Departments, viz.:—Mechanics Department, specially devoted to Artizan's Clothing subjected for every trade; Warehouse and Packing Cases at the west end is the New Department, 75 feet long, fitted up as a Show Room for Ladies', Gentlemen's, and Children's Boots and Shoes, with commodious Fitting Rooms and such Departments as wish for extent and convenience cannot be excelled in the provinces.
Having now given a very imperfect description of the Premises, and a rapid glance as the old ones, HYAM and CO. feel great pleasure in giving a and in so doing they invite their patrons and the Public generally to examine in detail the various new and important Improvements of their Premises and Additions. HYAM and CO. have every confidence in giving this open invitation. They ask all classes to visit their Establishment, and they will be perfectly courteously attended to, and they will be under no obligation to purchase unless they feel disposed. Rothwell School Board.

(To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.)

SIR,—I congratulate all parties concerned at the School-Board Meeting of to-night, and trust that sufficient light has thrown upon the subject to guide the votes of the electors. But, for one candidate to go in so thoroughly for compulsory education, and then curry favor with the Church party so far as to advocate no Board for Rothwell, is simply absurd. There could be no compulsion when there was no Board School to send them to, and whether compulsion is resorted to or not the Church Schools are already too crowded. With compulsion, another school will be required, and can be found at rental, without outlay for building.

I am, &c.,

"Our First Birthday."

(To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.)

SIR,—I beg to offer you my hearty congratulations upon the anniversary—notwithstanding the trials that always attend young journalists—of the birth of your offspring, the Rothwell Times. Success seems somehow to have crowned your efforts, especially when one takes into consideration, and ponder over the fact that during the past few years many newspapers rush into existence, only to live for a while and then disappear, with remarkable precipitation, from the presence of an unsympathetic public—a month or two being generally sufficient to determine their existence at the utmost generally determining their existence. The world as a rule looks coldly on young beginners, but the Rothwell Times, in a district where a journal could hardly be expected to flourish, seems especially maintained with any sort of success, is still in existence, and growing older and older day by day. This tense, and growing older and older day by day. This speaks volumes for the perseverance of its Editor, and that it is the duty of the inhabitants of this district especially to support your paper, cannot for a moment be disputed. That you have now a grand opportunity, which, in their own interests, they should lay hold of, and by contributing news, par-graphs, &c., and furthering the sale of the said Journal, they are but fostering the sure means of elevating their native town to a high moral position. Not that in asserting this do I mean that Rothwell occupies a position over which hangs the cloak of morality that either wants. In not many a home action thwarted, and many a premeditated evil deed left undone, for fear of the exposure of the press, which is sure to follow. And, Sir, as you justly remarked in your article, "Our First Birthday," I am fully speaking of a people's benefits to be derived from a local paper, you proceed to say, "which should command the support of every one as readers who the Rothwell Times who did be supported by all well-wishers of the town and neighbourhood." Upon the above grounds claim the and neighbourhood." Upon the above grounds claim the support you should command especially from those who take a prominent part and great interest in local affairs. That you have so long graced the existence of your protégé is to me a phenomenal matter of great surprise, and I am delighted beyond measure to know that you have carried it through the difficulties of a year, and by your own untiring exertions prevented the too common result in such cases—a natural death.—Yours, &c., ALPHA.

QUARREL BETWEEN RELATIONS AT ROTHWELL.—A woman named Fanny Hudson, who resides at New Nosel, well, on the other side of Barnsley, was summoned for having, on the 21st of October, threatened to kill Henrietta Hudson, her sister-in-law, appeared that the husband and wife had been quarrelling, resulting in the former illusing the latter, whereupon Frank Sidebottom, Henrietta Hudson's brother, espoused her cause by breaking her husband's skull with a plumber's 'dummy.' Thereupon Fanny, the other members of the family went for a letter to the defendant, of which the following is a copy: "October 25th, 1874, my Dear aunt you are to come to morrow for they very near killed your Stephen last night my arms are to be sore and mine or hels he will be dead before he can come so you must come and beware and run can come so you must come and beware and run can come." Thereupon the 'aunt' did 'come,' and a row was the result.—After a number of witnesses had been called, the Bench ordered the defendant to pay the sum of 20s. 6d.

AN OBJECTIONABLE NEIGHBOUR.—William Dobson, a man who follows a thrashing machine, and lives at Oakwell Green, Lofthouse, was summoned for having threatened to inflict bodily injury upon William Idle, threatened to inflict bodily injury upon William Idle, —The Bench considered the case proved, and bound him over in the sum of £5 to keep the peace for six months, and ordered him to pay 16s. 6d. expenses.

EXPOSING AN INJURED SISTER'S CLAIM.—Two quarrymen, of stonemasons, named Joseph and Samuel Peake, were summoned for having unlawfully assaulted and beaten George Wriggle-worth, at Oaktion, near Woodlesford, on the 23rd of October.—Complainant, after recounting his but for the provocation given by the complainant in ill-using the defendants' sister, a severe fine or imprisonment would dants' sister, a severe fine or imprisonment would have been imposed, inflicted a fine and costs amounting to 19s. 6d. in each case.—The money was paid.

AN OULTON STONE-MAN TURNING HIS WIFE OUT OF DOORS.—George Bramhill Wigglesworth, a stonemason, and keeper of Cows at Oulton, was summoned by his wife, Sarah Ann, for having committed an assault upon her, in consequence of which she prayed the Justices to bind him over to keep the peace.—In the evidence on both sides adduced no far from an ordinary conjugal quarrel that the onlookers in Court exclaimed "Shame, shame, gentlemen!" Chairman: I am very sorry your wife and you do not agree, though it seems yours is a mutual one. As you promise a good deal, we shall only bind you over to keep the peace, in your own recognizances of £10, and you will have to pay the costs.—The costs were paid.

A smart young man, the other day,
A visit to his lover would pay;
For as his breast he wished to ease,
He to Burnel Lee's he went in case,
And for a Coat, the Winter Chest
Of Suits and Clothing got so low.
He could not say, he so order gave,
But took home his lady-love both smart and brave.

The Maiden was but scarcely borne,
Her Thomas in a suit new-drest,
Yet fitted without a doubt,
That love combined and plied in vain,
For Love's Victory he had obtained;
Then to the Guiding Star he went for good advice—

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Impurity of the Blood.

Unless the blood be kept in a pure state, the constitution must be undermined and disease must follow. These wonderful Pills possess the power of removing or counteracting all corruptions of the blood and stimulating the liver to healthy action; but certainly, overcome all obstructions or debility in the digestive organs, and restore them to vigour, so that they perform their functions with regularity. They quickly purify the blood, and thus remove disease from the system, whether it arises from irritation or debility. They are wonderfully efficacious in all complaints incidental to females, as they act upon the main spring of life, and thus save thousands from a premature grave.

Complaints of Women & Children.

The very mild and painless action of these invaluable Pills recommends them as a perfect remedy for the first derangement of the female system. Any medicine, or young person suffering the slightest irregularity should take them. Holloway's Pills has at once established itself as the greatest blood purifier and strengthener ever introduced, and is the best friend and comforter, we may rely on them as the most effectual remedy for checking disease in its early stages, and restoring from the system all gross matter, and carrying off the humours that lead to consumption. They are indeed, at all ages, the friend and Friend.

Loss of appetite and headache usually the forerunners of stomachic disease. Holloway's Famous Pills exercise the most salutary power in all affections of the liver, and all internal viscera. Without producing debility, they promote a healthy function to of the stomach and bowels; they restore a healthy function to every internal organ, overcome all obstructions, and cast out all impurities.

Weak Stomachs.—Impaired Digestion.

The wisest cannot overcome one-tithe of the distressing symptoms resulting from enfeebled digestion, without more the be readily dispelled by the administration of these purifying, invigorating, and tonic Pills. Indigestion or flatulency, fever, and all forms of bilious complaints will follow in their train, and the whole of the vital functions will be deranged, unless the digestive organs receive a timely assistance, and the moral remedies in the nervousness, trembling, and confusion of

No. 16—L

1874. WINTER SEASON. 1874.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

MESSRS. JOHN MILLING & PARTNERS

Encouraged by the ready sale of their AUTUMN PURCHASES have been induced to visit the Markets a second time this season. This visit has been attended with enormous success. Arrival of over 300 Bales, Boxes, and Hampers of NEW SEASONABLE AND CHEAP GOODS.

These extraordinary purchases are at present laid out FOR SALE in the FOUR FLOORS of their large Warehouse, in BOAR LANE, TRINITY-STREET, and BANK-STREET, LEEDS.

Owing to their greatly increased trade, combined with a rush of customers unprecedented since the opening of their Establishment, they have engaged a number of extra experienced hands, in order that the public while making their purchases may be attended to with despatch and comfort.

Those who have not visited MILLING'S EMPORIUM OF FASHION ought at once to do so, and be convinced that it is really the proper place to be WELL AND CHEAPLY SERVED—no other house in town having anything like the assortment to choose from, or the room to display it in.

Owing to the rush of customers the first day of this Show, we fear many left unserved. In order to have more counter room, which, with an increased staff of assistants, we hope will add greatly to the comfort of and attention to customers.

This LARGE and UNPRECEDENTED NEW CHEAP PURCHASE contains,

ON THE GROUND FLOOR.

About 100 IRON BEDSTEADS, made specially strong, from 16s. 9d. to 8 guineas. One of each pattern, in order to give proper display and a fair opportunity to each customer for examination, will be fitted up in our extensive show-room, which measures 70 feet by 40—it being absolutely necessary that beds should be seen as they will appear in the bedroom. Children's cots of every description and price. A specially strong Single Bed, with six pillars, will be found well adapted for servants, &c., &c.

Also on this Floor, FIFTY PATTERNS of Patent Floor Cloth, Linoleum, and Kamptulicon, Matting, Mattresses, Palliasses, Haie and Feathers in several qualities. To the Heads of Families this Floor will be found specially attractive.

The School Board Election.

Ratepayers of Rothwell—to-day you will have a duty to perform for the benefit of your children. The past fortnight has been used for the spread of information, and for the canvassing of opinions.

Now the day has arrived to which all this excitement and anxiety pointed —To-night will decide the composition of your School Board! To-night will be the begining of a three-years course of action in regard to education. Know yourselves, know the opinions of candidates, then act firmly, without influence of fear or favour; do right to yourselves, to your children; let every man and woman who has a vote, use it; don't think it does not matter for my vote, it does matter; your vote may turn the scale. Let every Rothwell elector be at his post, and record his vote for the men of his choice.

More than any day which has dawned on Rothwell does it behove "Every man this day to do his duty."

Rothwell School Board MEETING OF DISSENTERS.

On Monday evening a meeting of the friends and supporters of the Dissenters' candidates for the Rothwell School Board was held in the Wesleyan School Room, the chair being occupied by Mr. S. Batty. Mr. Batty having read the Bill of the recent act, particularly cautioned the electors not to give more than twelve votes, as they would then by invalidate the whole.

Mr. Lumb's name was then called, but being engaged at the Local Board Meeting, he was sorry to be unable to be present.

Mr. Jas. Hopton, who had also been invited, was not present, though as it was, but it was stated that if elected he would act. He also said that he was not a candidate, and that if there was insufficient accommodation, he should support a Board School for Rothwell.

Mr. J. Mee Hopton regretted the necessity of more day-school accommodation, from the fact that both the Wesleyan and Primitive Sunday-schools are now both crowded, and he believed there were a good number of these children in the Church Sunday-schools. How then could the present singe-school accommodate all those children that ought to be out of the streets? He advocated the necessity of the very unfriendly competition of the present day schools as proved by the evidence of our own schools. He also said there was no need for a new school, but that rooms might be had for rental which would supply any present requirements, and a new school might be erected if required. He brought on before working men to the Board. He brought on before working men to take advantage of the Act, which had been given them by a new government in enabling a working man to have the same number of votes and to enjoy liberty of voting as others. After strongly commenting on the inconsistencies of Mr Sowden, in endeavouring to the Conservative cause introduces into voting exclusively the denominational question, he said nation at schools, whereby children of many denominations are mingled by the same schoolmaster during part of the day. He then discusses the method of voting for the candidates, and concluded by urging them to be bold, stop for their own consciences, and vote for none else.

Mr. H. Sadler, in an exhaustive speech, reviewed the several clauses of the Education Act, showing its great value to ratepayers as to the power it gave to the great value to ratepayers as to the power it gave to the ratepayers in enforcing attendance, and how it was a national scheme, whereby children of many denominations are mingled by the same schoolmaster during part of the day. He then discusses the method of voting for the candidates, and concluded by urging them to be bold, stop for their own consciences, and vote for none else.

Rothwell Local Board.

On Monday evening, the usual fortnightly meeting of the Board was held. Present:—Messrs Dickinson, Clayton, Smith, Lunn, and the Clerk.

In the absence of the Chairman, Mr. Dickinson was elected to take the Chair.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read, and confirmed.

The report of Nuisances Committee was brought up and read by the Clerk—The members of the Committee, together with the Medical Officer and the Inspector of Nuisances had visited a number of the most urgent cases and with one exception, the considerations of them was postponed till there was a fuller Meeting.

It was proposed and carried "That a final notice be given to Mr. Joseph Acomb to make suitable accommodation to his property."

It was also resolved "that the plan submitted by Mr. Wm. Hainsworth be passed."—An objection to the buildings of Messrs Newbold Bros., was raised by the Inspector, stating that they were making the gable end of three houses only one brick thick; and all houses must be 10 inch walls.

Mr. J. Wright's tender for fixing a pump over the top of Butcher land was as follows; pump 15s; fixing it, £1 15s.; blacksmith's work, £3 5s.; plumber's work, £25 17s.; total, £34; the decision was deferred till next meeting.

A tender by Mr. Wright for the lamps and work connected with the fixing and painting and repairing of the same (not including excavating and stones for the lamp post) was accepted.

Letters were read from two parties giving the price of coal per cwt. Mr. Hainsworth on offer to supply the stone at 4s. 6d. per ton, delivering at Rothwell stage station; Mr. Green will deliver a similar quantity at Hewitts Gate wharf for 4s. 3d. per ton. There are various items connected with the cost of getting stone and the relative distance from the locality where it is most needed, brought the prices pretty nearly equal, as other circumstances respecting the number of carts, reckoned as in a ton, caused the Board rather to incline to Robinson's. As some stone is now required, an order for 100 tons was given to Mr Robinson.

Mr. Lunn proposed and Mr. Clayton seconded, that a cheque for £3 12s. be paid Joseph Wood for lighting in Butcherland.

It was also resolved that Joseph Wood be paid £5 on account of the well now being sunk near the pinfold. Several other monies were also ordered to be paid for wages, salary, &c.

The Medical Officer stated that he only knew of one case of scarlet fever in the district, and that had been reported an hour before the meeting. He only been reported an hour before the meeting. He only been reported an hour before the meeting. He only Ratepayer's Meeting at Oulton.

On Monday evening, a meeting of the ratepayers of the Township of Oulton-with-Woodlesford was held in the Oulton School-room

On the motion of Mr Douglas, seconded by Mr Heron, the vicar (Rev. R. N. Hamilton) was unanimously voted to the chair.

Mr Hamilton said, that whatever difference of opinion there might be as to the means to be used, he had no doubt they were all agreed on the necessity for a more adequate supply of good water. He also attributed the large number of fever cases to the want of a thorough drainage scheme.

Dr Nowell, Medical Officer of Health, then defined the powers of the Rural Sanitary Authority as being similar to the powers of a Town Council or Local Board. He stated that the maximum rent for water was 2d per week per house.

There are about 25 wells in Oulton but 15 are either dry, or from other causes unused. Mr Cawley owns 22 of these wells of which 13 are not usable.

He argued that though an anomaly existed in the fact that owners of property must provide privies, but were not compelled to supply water, yet on humanitarian principles every owner of property ought to provide water for his houses. However, as the law did not compel owners to provide water, the Rural Sanitary Authority must do so. He recommended obtaining a supply from Swithin's Hill, which would be sufficient for Rothwell, Oulton, and Woodlesford. In the course of further remarks, the Doctor did not consider the water at present used as being good enough to satisfy an inspector and would not drink it himself.

Mr Holdsworth suggested the advisability of submitting the water to analysis, as it was no use sinking wells, if the water was not fit (of which he was not aware until lately).

Mr Horn strongly deprecated people coming and building houses and causing the ratepayers the expense of providing water.

After further conversation, the following resolution was moved by Mr Douglas, seconded by Mr Wood, and carried.

"That in the opinion of this meeting, there is a water in the district sufficient for the supply of the inhabitants, and they will thank the Board of Guardians to send some qualified person over, to examine the quantity and quality of the water, and to suggest the best method of supplying it.

The chairman then directed the attention of the meeting to the other question of which they should decide, the drainage of the township of Oulton-with-Woodlesford.

Mr Douglas felt strongly on the point, and believing there was no reason why their beautiful village should not be one of the healthiest spots in creation, he considered the prevalence of typhoid and other fevers entirely due to their want of proper drainage; and they ought to act about this work of Sanitary Reform in good earnest. The only way was for the ratepayers to lay down a main drain, and then compel people to drain into it.

Dr Nowell explained that mere slops are not considered as refuse which may not be thrown into the drain and are not deemed polluting to streams and rivers, he would advise, however, that the main drain be made at such a level as will admit of a future plan, if need be, of filtration.

Mr Douglas then proposed and Mr. Wood seconded, That the same person who is commissioned to inspect and report on the water supply is also authorised to inspect and report on the drainage of the township of Oulton-with-Woodlesford with a view to its amendment; carried.

A vote of thanks to the chairman was then moved by Mr. Wood, seconded by Mr. Horn, and carried unanimously.

Serious Accident at Woodlesford.

On Tuesday evening, a carter, named William Middleton, in the employ of Messrs. Bentley & Co., while loading coke, fell from the top of his cart, pitching on his head, and causing a fracture of the base of his skull. Though in a precarious state, hopes are now entertained of his recovery.

KAY'S COMPOUND ESSENCE OF LINSEED. This marvellous remedy is by many considered a "Specific." Asthma and Bronchitis are literally relieved by Dr. Kay.

A safe, permanent and warranted cure for Pimples, as Scrofula, Scurvy, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, we can with confidence recommend KAY'S WONDERFUL FAMILY-PAWED HOMILY. 4 Mile Chemists everywhere.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism and Neuralgia.—Those cases which have without end all other means of treatment are here met with the sure cure powers of these ointments: they are sure, whatever the condition or duration of the complaint. It is something difficult to determine which of these diseases is afflicting the sufferer, but this ignorance will not hinder if Holloway's remedies be used. They alleviate and control all muscular and nervous pains. In hereditary rheumatism, after bathing the affected part with warm salt water, Holloway's ointment should be well rubbed upon the skin.

NO MORE PILLS OR ANY OTHER MEDICINE.

DR BERRY'S delicious fresh-receiving REVIVING ARABIC FOOD, which contains three times the nourishment of other digestion, strong fifty times its cost in medicine, restores sleep, functional regularity, nerve, energy, health, and happiness to the most delicate, debility and scrapy to the most distressed. Thousands of cases of half-starved children, dyspeptics, consumptives, bronchitis, liver complaints, diphtheria, fevers, sea sickness, nervousness, nervous prostration, paralysis, neuralgia, rheumatism, gout, indigestion, weakness, in the head and stomach, sore throat, hoarseness, coughs, asthma, influenza, colds, irritability, dizziness, sleeplessness, hysteria, wasting diseases, debility, dropsy, cramps, nervousness, and all nervous, bilious, liver, stomach, and blood complaints, are speedily relieved and cured by this food. Wesleyan Concert at Rothwell.

The Wesleyan Choirs, together with a number of Teachers and Scholars, gave a Concert (mostly sacred) on Monday evening, in the Wesleyan School-room. A temporary platform had been erected at the further end of the room, on which the vocalists were accommodated. Perhaps the most noticeable part of the programme was the new popular song "The Nightingale Farmers Boy," the rendering of which elicited a repetition of the last two verses.

Perhaps the best piece during the evening was the very sweet and tasty "Dialogue Song" entitled, "The Great Teacher." The solo part of the Teacher was splendidly sung by Miss Bulmer and was as beautifully replied to by the scholars; without question, an encore should have been demanded.

The "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah," and the Gloria in Mozart's "Twelfth Mass" were given by the whole company, Mr Lancaster shone in the short solo in "Come and be at rest" the rest of the anthem being nicely done. The only "Child Solo" was Phillips' "Scatter Seeds of Kindness" by Miss Annie Turner. Several sacred songs from "Song Life" were given by the scholars, and an anthem or two by the choir. Mr. J. Naylor contributed "I know that my Redeemer liveth," and "The Lifeboat," besides a Pianoforte solo.

The instrument accompaniments by Messrs. Joseph Gibson, Joseph Naylor, and Joseph Iliffe, were most well done, and we are glad to know that our young men are turning their attention to the study and practice of the divine art of music.

To Mr. Ward, on whom rests the entire responsibility of the performance, a well merited vote of thanks was given, on the motion of Mr S. Batty, seconded by Mr. Marshall. His efficient talent in training and conducting the singers was most creditable, and he was ably assisted by Miss Boulter, and by Mr Kirkby as choir master.

Mr. J. B. Senior announced the pieces, and agreeably broke the musical monotony by short and appropriate remarks.

Considering the inclemency of the weather, the audience was very good, although a finer evening would doubtless have led friends from a distance to increase the numbers.

The receipts of the Concert amounted to nearly £5, which will be devoted to the reduction of a small debt on the old school.

Local Board Meeting.

At a meeting of the Rothwell Local Board held on Monday, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. Farrer, of Oulton, attended, and desired the Board to lay before him a plan of what they intended to do with the sewage of Rothwell.

There was also sealed session as to the drainage of the Station Estate, Mr. Wells, Hargreaves impressing the Board with the necessity of doing something towards the drainage of it.

The plans of Mr. Newbould's intended new buildings at Thwaite-Gate were passed.

It was resolved to issue advertisements for the pump in Butcher Lane, until more progress was made in the wells, and they had bored deeper.

In answer to an enquiry from the School Board, it was resolved that the School Board should have the use of the room for their meetings, condition: By that they paid one-half the cost of gas, fires, and cleaning the room, and also one-half of any future expense that might be incurred in painting and papering the room, or in any other manner, but that the room be not used by the Clerk to the School Board for the transaction of any business other than at the meetings.

PRIZE MEDALS, LONDON, DUBLIN, MOSCOW, AND VIENNA.—It is certain that Messrs. HUNTLEY AND PALMERS have now obtained four prize medals for their Biscuits, a fact which proves that they are not Poisonous, contain no sickly Medicine, which are not Poisonous, contain no Phosphorus, are entirely free from alcohol, are not in any way injurious to those employed in their manufactory, are not liable to spontaneous combustion, and that only on the Box. Trade mark an Ark.

THE—GLENFIELD ST ARCH, however more insisted than all the other starches in the world, the lighter soap is found it should be paid to it, as all the lighter soap is found it should be paid to it, as all the Tradesmen have distributed two medals on its sale, but still it is kept by all respectable grocers and oilmen, be prefer supplying their customers with the best at cost, to their own pecuniary profit. The pull it cost, to their own pecuniary profit. The pull insist upon having the Glenfield Starch.

RE-OPENING OF ROTHWELL PARISH CHURCH.

The restoration which has been in operation for several months' past in the ancient Parish Church of Rothwell has been nominally completed, and the first services were held yesterday.

The choir-vestry which is being made in the west-end of the church is not yet finished, but when accomplished, will not only be a great improvement in accommodation for the choir, but will also utilise what has for a long time been an eyesore, and add to the warmth as well as the appearance of that end of the church).

Holy Communion was celebrated at 8 o'clock in the morning, at which the Rev. G. Heberden officiated.

At 11 o'clock, Morning Prayer was joined in by a large and highly respectable congregation, the choir having been somewhat augmented, and the following clergymen being inattendance :—The Ven. Archdeacon Dealtry, M.A., Rev. J. Eddowes, M.A., Rev. Mr. Williams, Rev. Mr. Chadwick, Rev. R. Burrell, Rev. H. H. Hamilton, Rev. Mr. Chadwick, (Wakefield), Rev. Mr. Gammill, Rev. Mr. Armitage, Rev. Mr. Pearson, and the Rev. A. J. Irvin, curate of Rothwell.

The Rev. G. Heberden, M.A., (Vicar of Rothwell) conducted the first part of the service' the Rev Mr Eddowes reading the first lesson, and the Ven. Archdeacon Dealtry the second.

The Rev. J. Eddowes preached an excellent sermon from Haggai, ii chapter, 9 v. The preacher introduced his subject by referring to the religious revival which it was our happy lot to witness, and to the outward alarm in Church building, and restoration. He congratulated his hearers on the completion of their work, and said, as above was only a small debt left to be cleared off, he suggested that it would be a happy and appropriate mode of celebrating their Church Restoration, by clearing the fund, that no debt should be left on the building after that day.

He concluded the sermon by pointing his hearers to the temple "Not made with hands" and where there was no need of the sun, God himself being the light thereof.

LUNCHEON

was served in the large room of the Mechanic's Institute, to which over 100 persons sat down shortly after one o'clock. The tables were very beautifully supplied with cold meats, pastry and jellies, Mr. James Steel, of the Coach and Horses Inn, being the purveyor. After luncheon, the Chairman, the Rev. G. Heberden, proposed the toast, the Rev. G. Heberden, proposed the health of Her Majesty the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the Royal Family,' trusting that God may prosper her, and long maintain her on the throne. He paid a high tribute to her piety, and believed religion was bound up with our national constitution.

Edmund Calverley, Esq., gave 'the Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese,' coupling with it the name of the Rev. J. Eddowes. He stated he had in his possession a petition from the inhabitants of Rothwell 150 years ago, asking the Archbishop to redress their grievances, they having no preacher for 30 years, and having also left the village; they had to go to other churches for the celebration of marriages, and for baptisms, and their dead were buried without any religious observance. He referred to the exemplaries of the church, and to the piety of her ministers, and to unwise members weakening her, who, and believed she was never more warmly supported by her people than now. He trusted the time would never come when Church and State should be separated. He congratulated them on the success of the School-Board Election, and on returning the Vicar at the head of the poll. He also congratulated them on having amongst them a resident curate like Mr Irvin, of whom he spoke highly. He thanked Mr Eddowes for his excellent sermon, and the toast was then drunk.

Rev. J. Eddowes, in a cordial manner, thanked Mr Eddowes and Mr. Calverley for the honor they had just conferred on him and his fellow-clergymen.

Dr. Hobson proposed 'The health of our worthy Vicar,' which was warmly responded to.

He expressed his satisfaction at the great improvement in the church, which he attributed to the indefatigable exertions of Mr. Heberden.

Mr. J. Naylor thanked the audience for their kindness, but would take the liberty of distributing the thanks to those to whom they due. There were few days in a clergyman's life which were more gratifying than a day like the present. He described the impediments which had been completed, and heartily thanked the people of Rothwell and other districts, especially referring to one now gone to his rest, Mr. Oddie.)

Mr. T. W. Jewison, who was received with rounds of applause, gave the Health of Mr. Clorley,' the architect, and that gentleman briefly responded, paying his compliments to the contractor, who had so ably carried out his wishes, and to the Vicar, to whose assistance and kindness he was greatly indebted.

The Chairman next gave the 'Health of Mr. Calverley,' who suitably replied.

Mr. Harrison proposed 'The Churchwardens,' coupling with it the name of Mr. Harrison.

Mr. Harrison, on behalf of himself and fellow Churchwardens, responded, and hoped that as an arrangement had now been come to respecting the seats, all parties would agree to the decision.

A public tea took place in the Institute at half-past five, for which all the trays were given, and to which a large number sat down.

At half-past seven, Divine Service was held in the church, when the Ven. Archdeacon Dealtry preached. The Choir contributed Sebastian Wesley's magnificent anthem, "Blessed be the God and Father,' besides other choral efforts during the service.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, we recommend "Hall's Hair Renewer" for it will restore it to its original colour. Prepare Hair Renewer to its original colour. Prepare without leaving the disagreeable smell of most Hair Preparations. It is thoroughly cleansing, and as a dressing for the hair unequalled, as well as promoting the growth of it, a small debt left to be cleared off, he suggested that it would be a happy and appropriate mode of celebrating their Church Restoration, by clearing the fund, that no debt should be left on the building after that day.

RE-OPENING OF ROTHWELL PARISH CHURCH.

In continuation of the re-opening services, the Rev. G. Heberden preached the following sermon on Sunday morning, to a large congregation.

SERMON.

"The dead praise not thee, O Lord, neither all they that go down into silence; but we will praise the Lord from this time forth for evermore.—Psalm cxv., 17-18.

The events of the past week have been full of deep importance to us. Once more our Church is restored to us in more than all its former beauty, and the much unseemly has been cleared away, and no expense has been spared in order that the work which was undertaken should be carried out in a manner in accordance with our notions of what is due to the House of God. Although the work has been costly, no unnecessary expense has occurred to the mind of those to us that our money has been unnecessarily expended; or that what in our affection for our Parish Church we have cheerfully given could on any sense be called "waste," not one of us begrudged a penny that has been spent, or for a thought that it could do too much for the House of his God. Indeed, it has been no small source of satisfaction and deep thankfulness to me, that this loyal feeling so generally prevailed throughout the Parish, among every rank of those who call themselves Church people, and that among others, who for reasons of their own themselves are unable to explain, have drifted from the care of the Church. It is a subject of deep thankfulness which I feel sure we all participate; and now that our work is done, now that we have a building enlarged and beautified and more suited to our present notions of what becomes our Heavenly Father's House of Prayer, there is need of caution, lest for a moment we lose sight of the great purpose for which this House has been built. The same thought must have been passing through David's mind when he gave instructions to the architects of the text, if, when he said "the dead praise not thee, O God" he meant that the bodies of our fellow men, who in the Church yard are taken to be audible part in the worship of God which is carried on within the walls of God's House, it would be unquestionably true; but as the Psalmist is evidently dealing with spirits as well as bodies, and speaking under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, it is more than probable that there would are capable of being applied to the compound nature of man and if the w rd dead, in such a place, denotes the spiritual and lifeless state of the inner man, whilst actually living in the body, it may very likely do so here, in which case David may really be alluding to the fact that we may be disposed to apply his words to those who are crumbling in the dust. When St. Paul is calling upon the saints at Ephesus with a view of rousing them to the active duties of Christianity, he addresses them as men "who are dead in trespasses and sins," Ephesians ii. 1. "You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins," so that it was a common matter of speaking with him, and of every common matter of speaking with him, and of every minister, we find the words "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because He hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the meek, and among other blessings which are there enumerated as consequent upon Christ's arrival, is the giving unto such a garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness, so, this disposition to praise G d is not natural to man, but is the gift of the Holy Spirit. The Lord is a giver of life, and though it is literal true in its primary meaning it is none the less true when applied to those who have not been awakened by the Gospel to a sense of life, and who so not in fact praise God. A careless habit in matters of extreme importance can only fade to effect upon the souls of those who watches over the faithful disciple, but aucts is an index of a heart within that is dead to such enjoyments, and is not alive to the joys of living in the services of the Redeemer. If we look to that welkin wa quation from Isaiah which was employed by our Saviour upon first entering upon His

The "Amen" is the seal which the whole congregation affix to the petition, and by which they make it their own. Every petition, the subject as a matter to their thereon, applying the different sentiments stand necessities, while they bow their souls before God.

The sentences which follow, have been wisely calculated to promote the devotion of those who will give their attention to them; we are cautioned against cloaking our own sins before our Heavenly Father, and are admonished to take our part in the general confession with an humble, lowly, penitent, and obedient heart. The Minister, as involved in the same condemnation, takes the lead, while the whole congregation are directed to say it after him, All kneeling. The attitude of our bodies should be such, (as it would be if the Lord were visibly present,) and as will be in all those who whose faith is strong enough to see Him who is invisible; (I must say word, and I must say it point, because I am well aware that most of the sittings in this church are nonrovided with hassocks, and that there is a great deal of unnecessary discomfort in kneeling without them. I know that we shall not consider the church's restoration complete until this most important deficiency is supplied, but let us pass not; we would each participate in the promises and blessing, and forgiveness which is announced before the absolution, so must each of us be prepared before the Lord confess special transgressions, for which pardon is so much needed. The one is made dependent on the other, and we have the promise of hearing it said by Christ, "The Lord hath put away thy sin, thou shalt not d e," unless with David we have said in the sin of my heart," I have sinned against the Lord." We see then, I hope, how important it is that we should bear our part, in order to profit by every privilege & means of grace. It is no mere question of form and custom, but the words have to the terms on which human ear, and to which the Apostle " with the salvation is offered to us, for with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." We confess our naturally lost condition by declaring that "there is no health in us," and at the same time, we express our thankful acceptance of the blessed hope of restoration, when we resolve henceforth, through God's help, to lead a godly, righteous, and sober life." This is the way, which our Church has chosen, by which we may dedicate ourselves afresh to Christ before we venture to rise our voices in Psalms of praise and thanksgiving to our Heavenly Father. When we rise from our knees, we sing aloud unto God with our strength, and make a cheerful noise unto the God of Jacob. It is little we know of the courts of Heaven, but the assurance is that there is no created Heaven, but the assurance is that there is no created Being present there who does not offer to his Maker his tribute of praise and thanksgiving, whilst he falls down in adoration before the glorious throne. Sufficient information has been given to us, and we have been told, I hope, to make us all feel thoughtful while we contemplate what it is we desire which we are about to undertake, when we take part in the holy services of our Father's House of Prayer, for I feel sure it must be next to impossible that any be which we are about to undertake, when we take part in the holy services of our Father's House of Prayer, for I feel sure it must be next to impossible that any be which we are about to undertake, when we take part in the holy services, and without wandering at himself if he has not been present, and engaged in the holy exercises of the day; or, if I am speaking to any who may be here to-day, as the exception to the general rule of this, my brethren, we have, I trust, been present in spirit, even when thou gone into the House of God," for this is none other than the gate of Heaven.

Allow me, then, in conclusion, that our thanks are to be given to the Lords Legionary, and to the Consolement Hospital Fund, for I have been anxious to include the claims of this other institution upon us for the reason that our sick who require this stimulant are not always but few opportunities of stimulant of the kind themselves, of this most valuable resource; by reminding themselves of this most valuable resource; by reason of their being no subscribers in the immediate neighbourhood, and also from the small number of admission, and it is my desire to divide what may be collected to-day between these two excellent refuges for the sick, and by whom they are instructed to obtain Securities. I am sure that I may safely appeal to

Old Sores and Old Skin Diseases.
The seeds of these disorders are effectually reached by this Ointment. It penetrates to the inmost recesses of the superficial parts, but from the internal source of all external maladies, even of twenty years' standing, speedily yields to its influence.
A Certain Cure for Bronchitis, Diphtheria, Sore Throat, Asthma, &c.
For curing sore throats, quinsy, diphtheria, bronchitis, asthma, tickness of the chest, and swelling of the throat, this Ointment has never been known to fail. Acting more serious maladies, this Ointment has the same power over their complaints as a blister possesses, without causing pain or debility. Old asthmatic invalids who have been compelled to sit up night after night, unable to obtain rest, have found relief from the first application of this unrivalled remedy, and after every other means had signally failed.
Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Sores, and Ulcers.
By rubbing the Ointment round the affected parts, it penetrates to the tissues beneath, and exercises a wonderful power over all the blood vessels in the neighbourhood. It is the only remedy known that will reach the most obstinate disease, the presence of which is indicated by a sore, however deep-seated it may be, or however severe the inflammation may be which has been established. Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following complaints:—

Bad Legs	Corns (Soft)	Fistula	Sore Throats
Bad Breasts	Chigoe	Gout	Stiff Joints
Burns	Chilblains	Glandular Swellings	Scurvy
Blotches	Coco-Bay	Lumbago	Sore Heads
Chilblains	Piles	Tumours	Tumours
Chapped Hands	Rheumatism	Ulcers	Ulcers
Contracted and Stiff Joints	Ringworm	Wounds	Wounds

The Ointment and Pills are sold at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment, 533, Oxford Street, London; also by nearly every respectable Vendor of Medicine throughout the Civilized World, in Pots and Boxes, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each. The smallest Pot of Ointment contains one ounce; and the smallest Box of Pills four dozen.

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE
From WENTWORTH LANGDALE SCOTT, Esq., Surgeon, Wentworth, Rotherham, and Wakefield.—"I have thoroughly and carefully tested Godall's Orange Quinine Wine, and have much pleasure in recommending it as a most valuable tonic of decided superiority over the composition."

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE.
From Dr. Hill, Mar 17th, 1870.—"It is decidedly the most palatable preparation of Quinine I have ever tasted, and I have frequently ordered it to be prepared expressly upon the quality and quantity of the Quinine being stated. I have also tested the genuineness of the Quinine Wine purchased from the agents of Godall's Quinine Wine we have found it to be of the best description, and the most desirable tonic for invalids."

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE.
Highly recommended by the most eminent Medical Men, and pronounced to be the best and most agreeable tonic yet introduced.

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE.
Is invaluable for Tic, Toothache, Neuralgia, Ague, &c.

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE
Is acknowledged to be the most delicious, and Patients to whom Quinine in any other form is distasteful, readily take it.

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE
Is a most valuable tonic, speedily builds up the system, and is a valuable remedy for the wholesome effects of Cod Liver Oil.

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE.
Is a most valuable tonic for weak young, or aged.

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE
Is a most valuable tonic, and very agreeable to take, differing from plain Quinine Wine in not one of taste.

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE.
Per bottle or dozen. It stands pre-eminent.

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE.
Is a most valuable tonic, and specially adapted for Females, Children, and Invalids, and combines in an agreeable form the whole of the properties of Cod Liver Oil.

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE.
Per bottle, 36 stamps. Per dozen, 30s. Carriage paid to any Railway Station in England.

GODALL'S ORANGE QUININE WINE.
Is a most valuable tonic, and specially adapted for the debility of Females. Combining the two most valuable remedies for that complaint, Orange Wine as a tonic and Quinine as a febrifuge, it is a most valuable remedy for Females.

GARDENING OPERATIONS FOR THE WEEK.

(From the Gardener's Magazine.)

[An excellent work in general, containing much valuable information for amateur and professional gardeners.]

KITCHEN GARDEN.

Vegetables in Season.—Seakale, Asparagus, Broccoli, Brussels sprouts, Cabbages, Colewarts, Endive, French Beans, Leeks, Lettuces, Mushrooms, Onions, Rhubarb, Salsify, Scorzonera, Scotch Kale, Seakale, Tomatos, and Turnips.

Seakale, Sandy, and Chadsell will now be coming in plentifully from the forcing ground. If these beds are covered with fresh litter, they will be neither good nor pleasant to the gather-ers, or to those who partake of them at the table; therefore exercise judgment in clearing the soil from the litter, and in forking it deep. If dry give a good soaking with liquid water. As the roots for forcing, take only those which are thick and fleshy, and cut off the crowns either to plant immediately or to model, or they will soon be burst by the action of the atmosphere.

Carrots should be prepared in quantity as there is now a chance of getting it well frosted before it is time to sow in the winter is over. The frosted carrots are the best for the table, and are free from all traces of specimen plants, and, in fact, with whatever propriety a good compost, and the best of manure may exercise. It must be remembered that carrots are frequently ruined at the table through their coarse-ness, but with the version, but the roots are tender and delicate when it is thoroughly decayed, but they are then in a state that it more effectually than by frosts.

Peas are now in season even in frances, to transplant Peas can be sown in sufficiently advanced, and they are not to be sown in the open ground before the end of January, to be sown for transplanting in succession, and they are not to be sown for transplanting in succession, and they are not to be sown when the transplanting takes place.

Water Fowl.—There ought not to be now a single spare pool of unoccupied ground that is not stocked with some kind of water fowl. Decreasing and increasing in number that was taken off. Decreasing and increasing in number that was taken off. Decreasing and increasing in number that was taken off

Our London Correspondent.

(We deem it right to state that we do not at all times identify ourselves with our Correspondent's opinions.)

The influence which the associations of Christmas exercise over Christian peoples has been the theme of many a writer. In our own land, especially at Christmas-tide, the air seems laden with good cheer. The multitudes and the wealthy, the children upon the hillsides, and in the scattered dwellings upon the plains, all classes prepare for this yearly festival. Christmas Eve finds us rejoicing or reflecting to millions of hearts, in big with pleasure or of saddening memories. The bells both young and old, and especially the children, are ushered in the morning of Christmas-day, than the hours, as they roll on, appear full of innocent delight. There is a tradition amongst the children that "Father Christmas" regularly makes his round in the night, distributing gifts to good boys and girls. In some cases an old-fashioned fable, and some of the presents on the breakfast table, and when the time is done depend upon it that the real, so far as the children are concerned, is a matter of secondary importance. There are full of what their unknown benefactor has left for them in the night. Well, it is good to hear the merry laughter of the young people, and there is a general wish to allow them to be happy and free from care, as years creep on, to meet the stern realities with them. Let them clap their hands with pleasure over the Christmas Tree, all aglow with many coloured lights. Yellow with oranges and gilt bon-bons, and rich with presents both for old and young alike. Let them be glad at a time which, as it commemorates a solemn festival, is made a sort of ideal season to the real mutual happiness which has characterised the year.

But Christmas is anticipated with pleasure, not only by those on a quarter of a century hence, but by those who have left childhood behind them, and taken their places upon the great stage of human life. There is a class to whom great and busy community to whom Christmas is a matter of indifference. Take the sailor. Christmas is a matter of indifference. Take the soldier. Christmas is the social ends between the Queen upon her throne and the pauper in the workhouse, and it will be seen that there is a large class who look forward to the celebration. The royal baron of beef graces the sideboard at Windsor Castle, and the head graces the sideboard at Windsor Castle, and the head graces the sideboard at Windsor Castle, and the sideboard at Windsor Castle, and the sideboard at Windsor Castle, and Christmas.

We have again arrived at the time-honoured festive season, and, we take the opportunity of suggesting that the season, so honoured of time, and also by the circumstances which created the reason of it, should be spent so that it will bear morning's reflection, and it be of a kind to render all happy around us. We all, in some measure, can out of what we have, make some one participate in our happy (not) merry time, that in our midst we hear of as few aching hearts as possible. Trusting that such will be the case, we wish all to accept our congratulations, with the "Compliments of the Season."

Local Board Meeting.

The usual fortnightly meeting of the Local Board was held on Monday evening. Present—Messrs. Hargreaves, Sanderson, Dickinson, Bumby, Lunn, and the Clerk.

In the absence of Mr. Charlesworth, through sickness, Mr. Sanderson was called to the chair.

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, a letter from the Clerk to the School Board in reply to the resolution passed at at the preceding meeting, was read and considered. The School Board are willing to pay half the expenses of the room provided they have also a fair and proportionate share of its use.

The Clerks of the two Boards, and the Assistant-Overseer, having consulted, the question was agreeably settled among them, as to the time of day when each would require the use of the room, and the matter was accordingly left open, Mr. Hargreaves giving notice, that two months' lease he should moved resolution be rescinded.

As the room is insufficiently provided with closets, and drawers, for the keeping of books, correspondence, and other documents,

Mr. Hargreaves moved, and Mr. Lunn seconded "That we advertise in the Rothwell Times for tenders for putting in another closet and drawers in the Board Room, for the use of the School Board and Local Board, carried unanimously.

A letter was read from Mr. Douglas, of Oulton, complaining of the state of the road between John O'Gaunts' Inn and Thwaite-Gate.

The surveyor reminded the Board of the amount of time and labour occupied on Bell Hill and afterwards at the Sterroid-well, thereby preventing much attention being given to the Pontefract-road, which he said wanted thoroughly covering.

Mr. Hargreaves spoke strongly on the disagreeableness and impropriety of laying themselves open to receive such a complaint and proposed "That the serious attention of the Highway Committee be given to the state of the Leeds and Pontefract Highway. Mr. Lunn seconded the motion, at the same time urging the frequency with which the enquiry prior to the formation of the Local Board, on August 2nd, 1872, amounting to £3 13s. 6d. Ordered to be paid.

A letter from Mr. Bromet requesting the payment of his bill in connection with the conveyance of the Sterriod water to Church-well, and amounting to £5 3s. 2d. was received and amounting to £5 3s. 2d. was adjourned to next meeting.

It was supposed by Mr. Lunn, seconded by Mr. Dickinson "That Joseph Ward have a cheque for £15, for sinking a well at Pinfold Corner. Carried.

It was proposed by Mr. Bumby, seconded by Mr. Hargreaves "That the town's pump in Pump-field be taken up and examined, and if fit for use be put down at the well at Pinfold corner. Carried.

The Inspector stated that the well in Butcher-lane is four yards deep of water.

Mr. Hargreaves enquired if a resolution had been carried out ordering a notice to be placed at the outlet at Church-well stating that the water was unfit for drinking purposes.

The notice had not been put up, but will be done forthwith.

It was resolved on the motion of Mr. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Dickinson, That the Clerk write to Mr. Wright to have the pumps put up at once.

Rothwell School Board Meeting.

On Friday afternoon, the School Board for Rothwell and Parts Scattered Townships, held a special meeting in the Board-room, Churchfield. Present—Rev. George Heberden (chairman). Messrs. Wm. Hargreaves, Mr. S. Hall, J. R. Scanor, James Hargreaves, and the Clerk.

The first business of the meeting consisted in the appointment of a Treasurer to the Board.

It was proposed by the chairman "That Mr. Thomas Hargreaves be and is hereby appointed Treasurer to the Rothwell and Parts Scattered Townships School Board," seconded by Mr. Hall, and carried.

It was proposed by Mr. W. Hargreaves "That a precept for £20 be served on the Overseers of the Poor for Rothwell," second'd by Mr Scanor, and carried unanimously.

Mr Scholefield's account having been examined, and found correct, it was proposed by Mr. Hall "That Mr Scholefield's account for election expenses, amounting to £20 11s 6d. be ordered to be paid, seconded by Mr. James Hargreaves, and carried unanimously.

The special business for which the meeting had been called having now been executed, it was proposed by Mr. Wm. Hargreaves "That the members of the Board do form themselves into a Committee of the whole Board for the transaction of business," seconded by Mr. James Hargreaves, and carried unanimously.

A list of miscellaneous for the conduct of the Board's accounts and correspondence, having been submitted by the Clerk, it was proposed by Mr. Wm. District Police News.

GOING TO WORK DRUNK.—Richard Britton brick setter, was summoned for having gone to his work at Hall in a state of intoxication on the 12th inst. Defendant was engaged to go to the Midland Coal Pit, Rothwell Haigh, owned by Messrs. Charlesworth, to repair a ventilating furnace at the bottom, but as he was drunk when he appeared on the pit bank, the bauksman, Richard Dobson, refused to let him descend, and gave information to the manager.—Defendant was fined 10s and costs, and altogether he had £1 15s 4d to pay, or one month's imprisonment.

ALLEGED ROBBERY OF A SOVEREIGN.—Joseph Dobson, coal miner, was charged with stealing a sovereign, belonging to Stephen Wilkinson, butcher, Rothwell, on the 19th December. Mr. Burton appeared for the prisoner. The parties were in the British Oak Inn, on Saturday last, and the prisoner challenged the prosecutor to toss for half-a-gallon of beer. Prosecutor accepted the challenge, and tossed with a sovereign on the table it was "swept" by the prisoner, and he never saw it afterwards.—There was no evidence to show that the prisoner got possession of the sovereign after the money had been swept from the table, and he was discharged.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—NO ESCUTCHEON WITHOUT BLEMISH.—How many are wealthy in the world who are laid up by disease. For worse to find a family bread-winner incapable of work. Another on the rack, sprained ankle, a gouty joint, a rheumatic muscle, or swollen limb, will not disable any one if the affected part be well fomented with extra warm water, and then rubbed with Holloway's cooling, healing and detersive ointment. There is no suffering, however acute, and obedience to the directions accompanying it and obedience to the directions accompanying it and fail to cure his complaint, however severe, however obstinate or however obstinately it resists other treatment. 674

Testimonial Presented to Mr. Clapham, July, 1873.

We, the undersigned, having used for various lengthened periods the Medicines prepared by MR. J. CLAPHAM, of Wade Lane, Leeds, and having found them to be of the most excellent character, do hereby testify to the same, and recommend them to the public generally, as we have experienced the beneficial effects of the curative properties contained in them. We also recommend the pleasing and agreeable flavour of the Peppermint Lozenges, Bronchitis, and Strengthening Heritage, and would kindly say to the public generally, that they do not interfere with the taste of food, or the action of the stomach, as many other medicines do, but on the contrary, assist digestion, and thereby promote health and strength. Formula of the Medicines, Testimonials, Directions, Diseases, Humours &c., sight, Sources of the Stomach, &c., &c.

Now let us Rejoice together.
